In the only other game scheduled the second-place Montreal Royals whipped the fifth-place Syracuse Chiefs 4-1 behind the five-hit pitching of Chet Kehn. Eddie Morgan hit two homers for the Royals.

Pete Center allowed six hits in the first game, wth the Leafs' runs coming on a two-run sixth inning homer by Al Rubeling. The Orioles got off to a two-run lead in the second inning when Joe Becker slammed one of Joe Sullivan's offerings out of the lot. Rabe applied the crusher in the fifth with a three-run circuit clout.

In the nightcap the Leafs scored six times in the second frame, but Rabe cut their margin in the Oriole half as he exploded his second three-run homer of the night. Baltimore tied the score in the third and went ahead with three more runs in the fourth. Each team scored once in the sixth and Toronto made it close when Johnny Wyrostek homered in the ninth with one aboard.

Elliott's Rise With Pittsburg Pirates Story Of Year

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—Movie fans have had their "Philadelphia Story," so perhaps this might as well be titled baseball's "Pittsburgh Story." It concerns Bob Elliott, who graduated to the Buccos from Toronto Maple Leafs, and nothing has happened in the recent diamond history of the Smoky City that quite approaches the story of this sturdy son of California.

Catalogued as an outfielder when he went to camp last February, shifted to third base in a desperate experiment, then nominated as a National League All-Star at that position—even being placed ahead of Stan Hack—all in the space of a few months...such have been the breath-taking experiences of Elliott.

Yes, it might even be called the "National League Story of the Year."

In the glamorous setting, sight must not be lost of the fact that Frankie Frisch always has had some inhibitions against shifting a player from one position to another. It has been Onkle Fronk's theory that if a man had majored at one job and had the qualifications to make good at that spot, that's where he belonged. This refusal to surrender to certain Burbanking policies when he was manager of the Cardinals contributed to the ultimate termination of his stay at Sportsman's Park, St. Louis.

But, just as the school books used to say, circumstances often alter cases and that's why a first-class outfielder is doing more than a first-class job at third for the Pirates today.

When Frisch headed for camp last spring he had more problems than a mathematics professor. Arky Vaughan had been traded to Brooklyn and that meant a void at short. Jeep Handley, hard-luck little third baseman, had been in an automobile smash-up and his usefulness was question-marked. Frank had Pete Coscarart, obtained from the Dodgers in the Vaughan deal, but Pete had played only second and short, and Stu Martin, recently sent to Minneapolis with Alf Anderson in the Huck Geary deal, it was decreed, would serve best as second base fill-in.

Onkle Fronk's fears about Handley were borne out. He could not throw, was sent home and subsequently was optioned to Toronto. Jeep is doing utility work for the International League club, has performed at first, as well as at third, and goes up regularly as a pinch-hitter when not is the lineup as a regular.

Elliott had the speed, a fine arm and an aptitude for learning the intricacies of hot-corner play. It was no time before Frisch concluded that Bob would do—the job was his. He has been in every game, except three at Ebbets Field the last time the Buccos were in Brooklyn, cashing in on Frisch's "gamble."

Originally Frank was afraid Bob would not like third base because of his frank admission he had made a mess of trying to play the bag in a few games when he was in the minors, so Mr. Fordham gave him a sales talk one day at camp last spring.

"Elliott, this is a great chance for you," the Old Flash told Bob. "Why, it will add years to your baseball life. You will be able to last much longer if you get in there and make good. It might give you eighteen years of stardom," exaggerated Frankie.

A short time afterward, Elliott was all set one beautiful afternoon for a hard-hit drive. It took a bad hop and almost drilled a hole in his chest.

"There goes ten of those eighteen years," he moaned as Frisch gave him first aid. That was enough for the Flash. It was the tip-off that the guy would do. He had the old Moxie in his system.

Elliott's brief career with the Pirates has projected him into two unusual roles for a young man. When he joined the club he found himself succeeding the famed Lloyd Waner as centre fielder. Now, he is playing the bag at which Pie Traynor left a record as one of the greatest third basemen of all time.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Aug. 21—(CP).—Why is the Canadian junior tennis team in the Seigniory Club's international invitation tournament Saturday and Sunday limited to Quebec and Ottawa district players?

That's one of those nice, burning questions which usually never are answered. But discrimination is plain in the choice of the "Canadian" team. Five of the juniors chosen are from Montreal, two from Quebec City, two from Ottawa and two from Beauharnois, Que. The entry hardly qualifies the tournament for its tag as "international."

If sponsors of the matches called it the United States vs. Quebec Province junior tennis tournament, headline writers across the country would go crazy but the name would be a fair representation of the competition's nature. "International" doesn't fit at all.

Our boys probably will take a dreadful beating from the visitors, because the United States team really has a national aspect and top American juniors generally are as good as our best seniors. But the degree of defeat could have been lessened considerably by a judicious choice of the best juniors from Canada's nine provinces.

The one possible explanation is financing. Well, I doubt that the Pacific coast residents on the United States team are paying their own way to the tournament. And four of the Americans are from the far west, one from the middle-west. It looks from here like the old trouble—giving more consideration to a visiting attraction than to genuine promotion of the sport within our own borders.

Prospects of a trip to Quebec for this tournament would have given tennis in Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia its bigges boost in years. The opportunity has been lost.

TORONTO, August 21—(CP). — Lambs were lowered $1.75 from last Thursday's close in trade on the Livestock Market here this week. Veal calves advanced 50 cents and hogs suffered a decline of 25 cents. Sheep were steady. Cattle prices were steady according to quality. The week's supply of cattle showed lack of top quality killers.

Total cattle receipts for the week of 11,550 head represented a larger run than that of the week before. The bulk of cattle consignments were to the Wartime Food Corporation. Ottawa announced during the week that the export cattle quota to the United States had been filled. This quota constituted cattle purchased by the Corporation in Canada as well as those entering the United States. Following the announcement regarding the quota the Corporation suspended operations on the local stock yards.

In cattle trade weighty steers were $9 to $10.50; butcher steers and heifers were mostly $8.50 to $10. Fed calves brought $10.50 to $12. Butcher cows were $6.50 to $8.50, with canners and cutters selling down to $5. Bulls were scarce, especially those of top quality and sold mostly from $7.50 to $9. Stockers and feeders traded at $8 to $10.50, with light Western stock calves selling as high as $11.75. Milkers and springers were $90 to $130 each.

Calves sold at $15 to $15.50 for choice with other grades downward to $8. Grassers were $8 to $11.

Hogs were lowered to $16 dressed on Monday and continued steady at this level for the week. Sows were mostly $12.75 dressed. Owing to recently announced quarantine on the Stock Yards there were no feeders sold.

Lambs were lowered to the price ceiling level on Monday at $11.75 for good ewes and wethers, and closed steady. Bucks were $10.75. Sheep were steady at $4 to $8.

HUGE CATFISH

WARSAW, Ind.—(CP)—Leonard A. Kelly, furniture store employe and fisherman on the side, figures he got a fair return in his angling in Lake Wawasee in Kosciusko County. Kelly baited his 10-inch hook and sash cord line with four pounds of raw beef—and pulled in a 68-pound channel catfish, one of the largest caught hereabout in recent years.

Battle Of Dieppe

to divert bombers and fighters from the Russian front where they were exerting their most powerful effort.

Thirty Pilots Saved

There were no actual figures on Canadian losses in killed and wounded, but the Germans clamed they had taken 1,500 prisoners. Ninety-eight Allied aircraft were lost, but 30 pilots were saved.

Many of the prisoners would probably be Canadians, since these men under the command of Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts of Kingston, Ont., formed a large proportion of the raiding force. It also contained a smattering of American Rangers along for an instructional ride, a few Fighting French Commandos and a good number of British Commandos.

Units of six Canadian infantry battalions and a tank regiment carried out the major attack on the French coast.

The Royal Hamilton Regiment and the Essex Scottish of Windsor, Ont., with the Calgary Tank Regiment, carried the main attack right into Dieppe itself; men of the South Saskatchewan Regiment and the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg landed at nearby Pourville in a flanking movement; while the Royal Regiment from Toronto went in at Puits, one mile east of Dieppe.

The Fusiliers De Mont Royal, were floating reserves who were rushed ashore at Dieppe to help their comrades.

In addition to these formations there was a detachment of Toronto Scottish machine gunners who manned Vickers guns set up on the assault boats and on the principal beaches for anti-aircraft work.

There was a detachment of the Black Watch from Montreal which operated with the Royal Regiment in the landing at Puits.

Officers of the Royal Canadian Artillery and a number of non-commissioned officers were with the assault troops to co-ordinate naval bombardment with army operations ashore.

Naval Guns Turn the Trick

With the fleet of destroyers lying within a mile of the French coast — right under the German noses — throughout the operation, naval guns were used extensively for smashing up opposition that the infantry could not cope with. One destroyer, the Berkeley, was so badly damaged by enemy attack that she had to be sunk. The majority of her crew were saved.

Artillery officers — in this case called "forward observation officers" —advised formation commanders about possible naval fire and told them whether targets were suitable for their shells.

They sent wireless messages to offshore destroyers when they needed the aid of guns.

An elaborate system of combined operations wireless communications was used by the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals on the raid.

The force headquarters remained at sea aboard destroyers and Gen. Roberts directed the battle by wireless through various signal networks which reached all over the Dieppe area.

The work of the British commando troops was highly praised by the returning Canadians.

The British outfit, commanded by Lord Lovatt, wiped out 150 Germans when it destroyed a German gun position at Varengeville, west of Dieppe.

Another commando went into attack another gun post at Berneval, east of Dieppe, but its ships got tangled up in an accidental naval scrap with some German Flak boats.

One Group Makes It.

The force had to disperse but one young commando officer and a naval office in one of the units of 20 landing craft decided to land according to plan.

With a handful of his troops he went ashore and located the Berneval battery. With the force at his disposal he could not attack the battery, but he and his men hid near its position and sniped at it.

This had the desired effect, for the sniping so harassed the gun crews that the guns did not fire throughout the raid despite the fact they were ranged on the Dieppe beach.

A special detachment of the Royal Canadian Engineers was trained for the raid and developed demolition equipment with explosives for use in the particular task assigned to them in helping to destroy Dieppe installations.

The R.C.E. landed on the main beach with the Essex and Hamilton men. They blew up wire obstacles which blocked the infantry, checked the promenade for mine fields and then helped the tanks get through road blocks at street entrances.

There were many cases of valor.

There were the men of the Royals with whom I rode who were turned back from the beach by withering fire from the cliffs.

I left them and transferred twice to other assault boats and heard later that they had regrouped, gone ashore and knocked off the opposition which prevented them from landing at the first attempt. They had been badly cut up in that attempt, too, being under fierce fire for 20 minutes.

Change a Pool's Name.

There were the fusiliers whose task was to blast German boats in a pool in town. It was a mile from beach and was called the "Basin Du Canad." The survivors who blew up everything they could and renamed it the "Basin Du Canada."

Twelve of them started for the job, but only four arrived. After they had done their task they bumped into eight other French-Canadians but were promptly surrounded and captured.

They were luckier.

The Canadians carried with them handbills and posters advising the French population of Dieppe not to try to help them because this was not an invasion—only a visit.

"Frenchmen!" the text read, "this is a surprise stroke, not an invasion. We strongly urge you to take no part and to do nothing that might invite reprisals by the enemy.

"We appeal to your cool-headedness and good sense. When the hour strikes we will notify you. And then will we act side by side for our common victory and your liberty."

Returning Canadians said the warning worked, except in a few isolated instances.

Hodson of Ottawa, Norm Brets of Toronto, Knobby Lee of Toronto, and R. B. Newton, an Englishman in the R.A.F.

One Nazi aircraft was shot down during the operation but it was not indicated whether it was destroyed by an escorting Canadian plane or a bomber.

Huns Must Call Aid

The air triumph, generally regarded as the biggest of all the successes, was the outcome of an unplanned battle. Thus, in an R.A.F.-made crisis, British observers said, the German lost more than one-third of their operational aircraft in the West in one day and now must divert bombers and fighters from the Russian front.

Evidence that the Nazis were hit a staggering blow to their bomber strength as well as their fighter forces was the feeble counterpunch over Britain the last two nights.

The only appearance of hostile planes last night was over the south coast, British authorities said, and only a few attacked, briefly, causing but slight damage. One was shot down.

An informed British air observer said the German's air command was caught napping Wednesday and had to meet hundreds of R.A.F. fighters at first with 50 Messerschmitts "which were swept away like flies."

Later, he said, they called in every plane they could get from the Low Countries and put 400 into the air. Many of these, however, never were able to penetrate the Allied air cordon and either were turned away or shot down.

Announcing the subsidy Foods Administrator J. G. Taggart said milk sales for the first half of 1942 showed an increase of nearly 10 per cent over those of the corresponding period in 1941, while milk production for all uses showed an increase of less than 4 per cent.

The greatest increases in fluid milk consumption have occurred he said in Halifax and in the industrial areas of Ontario and Que-

Mr. Taggart said it is recognized that there is a limit beyond which milk production cannot be expected to increase, in view of the shortage of farm labor, except at the expense of production of other necessary farm products. Accordingly, if present measures do not result in sufficient increases in production, other steps will have to be taken in areas of short supply.

The amount of the subsidy it was explained, will be added to the price paid the producer by the milk distributor. The distributer will be reimbursed, at the end of each month, for all subsidy payments upon completion of a form approved by the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation Limited, and production of a certificate from the appropriate Provincial Milk Control agency that the subsidy and the required minimum prices have been paid to the producer.

In each market, payment of the subsidy will be additional to and conditional upon payment by distributors of a specified minimum price to producers, or the present lawful price to producers, whichever may be the higher, on the basis of the appropriate provincial specifications for milk delivered at plant. In the absence of any provincial specification, the basis is to be 3.5 per cent. butterfat for milk delivered at plant.

In markets where milk is purchased from producers by distributors at a flat rate, the specified minimum price is $2.50 per 100 pounds of milk in Montreal, and in other such markets will be determined in relation to the retail price of milk as follows: Where the maximum retail price is 11 cents per quart, the minimum producer price shall be $2.05 per 100 pounds; retail price 12 cents, minimum producer price $2.30; retail price 12½ cents, minimum produce price $2.45; retail price 13 cents, minimum producer price $2.60; retail price 14 cents, minimum producer price $2.90; retail price 15 cents, minimum producer price $3.15.

It will be $2.50 in Toronto $2.55 in Windsor, and in other such markets will be determined in relation to the retail price of milk as follows: Where the maximum retail price of milk is 11 cents per quart, the minimum producer price shall be $2.10 per 100 pounds of milk; where retail price is 12 cents, the minimum producer price will be $2.35; retail price 12½ cents, minimum producer price $2.50; retail price 13 cents, minimum producer price $2.65; retail price 14 cents, minimum producer price $2.95; retail price 15 cents, minimum producer price $3.20.

Local fighting persisted on the Leningrad front. Counter attacking Red Army troops forced a river crossing to dislodge the Germans from a settlement. Guerillas were said to have re-won two villages and killed 80 Germans in that area recently.

Other guerillas, operating in White Russia behind the invaders' central front lines, killed three German generals, 104 officers, 650 Gestapo agents and 4,717 troops during July, a special government statement said.

TORONTO POULTRY

TORONTO, August 21—(CP) — The dressed poultry market continues to maintain its position very well with prices firm and unchanged, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports.

Receipts in general are plentiful with broilers scarcer again the past week. A good volume of heavy chicken is clearing well under good demand for all weights. A fair quantity of fowl also is moving freely. The local sale of frozen turkeys is better than the week previous and one car of turkeys is rolling from Toronto to the United States. The demand for poultry from Northern Ontario is fair, and there is good enquiry from Eastern points. Normal movement of poultry to Newfoundland is shown but the week's demand from Montreal is reportedly quiet.

Dealers are quoting producers and country dealers:

Broilers—Grade A milk-fed, 25 to 26c; Grade B milk-fed, 24 to 25c; Grade B, 23c.

Chickens, roasters—Grade A milk-fed 28c, Grade B milk-fed 27c. Grade A, 26 to 27, Grade B 25c. Grade C, 20c.

Fowl.– Grade A, 5 lbs. and up, 22c; 4 to 5 lbs. 21c; 3 to 4 lbs. 20c Grade B, 5 lbs and up, 20c, 4 to 5 lbs. 19c; 3 to 4 lbs. 18c.

DOWNEYVILLE, Aug. 21.—(ENS) —Harvesting is on now with wheat, rye, oats and barley all ripe, and it is real good, but the farm labor situation is serious. Help is scarce and there are fields of hay not cut. It had to be left as no help was available.

The fall wheat is good. Mr. D. M. O'Leary threshed his wheat and it averaged 48 bushels to the acre Some report fifty bushels to the acre.

HEADACHE AFTER HEADACHE

Now She's Free From Them

A woman writes:—"I would like everyone who suffers from headaches to try Kruschen Salts. Before taking Kruschen I was hardly ever free from a headache. But since I have been taking it regularly I have hardly had a headache, for which I am very thankful, for headaches can make one feel quite ill. I have been taking that small dose of Kruschen every morning in a glass of warm water, before my breakfast, and I feel so well."—(Mrs.) A. E. D.

Headaches can often be traced to a disordered stomach and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons — prevent them forming again—and you're not likely to have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen brings lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aid Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter. Start on "the little daily dose" of Kruschen tomorrow.

Drunk Driver Faces Two Charges

Arrested by Sergt. W. E. Wigg and Constable Gordon K. Hardy in a parked car on King street, near the corner of Aylmer street, early this morning, Carl Mattuci faced a charge of having been intoxicated while having the control of an automobile before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. in police court this morning. Mattuci pleaded not guilty to the charge and said that he was ready to proceed with the case.

The Crown, however, was not in a position to go ahead and Mattuci was remanded until tomorrow morning, bail being fixed at $500.

The accused was also charged with doing wilful damage to water pipes and a door in the police cells after his arrest and entered a plea of guilty.

"That kind of thing seems to be getting too common," remarked Magistrate Langley as he imposed a fine of $10 and costs amounting to $1.75.

Inspector James F. Reid said that damage done amounted to $5.

Milk Subsidy Offsets Extra Expenses

The federal subsidy of 25 cents a hundred pounds of fluid milk will be welcomed by dairy farmers when it comes into effect September 1, W. G. Ovens of Campbell's Dairy told The Examiner today.

"It was talked of last spring when the winter subsidy of 30 cents the hundred pounds was discontinued," Mr. Ovens said. "Some farmers have been enquiring whether any further word had come from Ottawa about the fall and winter prospects."

Farm help remains the major problem with most farmers who have been carrying on, trying to do their best, with reduced help.

"It is an amazing fact, when you think of it, that the dairy farmers of this country have produced during the first half of this year 25,000,000 pounds of milk more than in the first six months of last year," Mr. Ovens remarked. "That tells the story of how the farmers are standing up to their job. The demand for milk increased in all the usual channels, such as cheese and condensed, but there has been an increase of 157 per cent. over last year in the quantity of milk used in producing casein for plastic material that is going into he manufacure of some airplanes. All that material used to be imported."

TobaccoRevenue In Next Year To Be 65 Million

By JAMES McCOOK

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—(CP).—The cloud of Canadian tobacco smoke—getting thicker year by year—is helping fill the nation's wartime tax coffers and aiding at the same time a section of the farming industry which suffers from surplus production.

But with export markets almost wiped out by the war, Canada had a pile of 131,720,500 pounds of tobacco on hand at March 31, with a good average crop in sight this fall. Even if they go all out, it is estimated smokers will use no more than 60,000,000 to 61,000,000 pounds in a year.

The tax collector is present in spirit wherever tobacco is handled. Under Finance Minister Ilsley's 1942-43 Budget, each pound of raw leaf tobacco bears a tax of 20 cents, a pound of cut tobacco 51 cents, a pound of cigars up to $1.25, and a pound of cigarettes, $3.20. When Jack Canuck buys 22 cigarettes for 30 cents, he is giving the tax collector 17.6 cents.

Tobacco revenue for 1942-43 is estimated by Mr. Ilsley at $65,050,000, compared with $55,417,000 in 1941-42, and $40,557,000 in 1939-40.

An All-Canadian Business

But the business is almost all in the Canadian family. In 1930, 54 per cent. of the raw leaf used in Canadian smokes was grown in the Dominion; in 1940, 92.2 per cent., and in 1942, between 93 and 95 per cent.

In 1930 only half the tobacco used in cigars was grown in Canada, but in 1942 from 80 to 85 per cent was the home product. In the same period the Canadian tobacco in cigarettes rose from 41 per cent. to 95 per cent. The home products used in pipe tobacco and snuff increased from 63 per cent in 1930 to about 95 per cent today.

In spite of taxation, consumption is booming. The per capita consumption of cigarettes in 1920 was 285, and in prosperous 1929 it was 507. Depression knocked it down to 353 in 1932, but in 1939 it was 630, and in 1941, 749.

"It may be that the new taxation will reduce the consumption of cigarettes in the present fiscal year, but on the other hand, the increased income of many Canadians may lead to a further gain," one official said.

"An important factor in Canadian cigarette consumption are the facilities for sending substantial quantities to the men overseas, at special prices. These cigarettes are not taxed.

"The shipment of these cigarets overseas is good advertising for Canadian tobacco. If United Kingdom residents get occasional smokes from Canadian soldiers they will get to like them just as much as Canadians, and there will be a ready-made market after the war."

Britain was the major Canadian tobacco customer before the war, taking 32,210,000 pounds of tobacco in 1939. In 1921 this market had been cut to 6,371,861 pounds, and there is little prospect of improvement this year.

Cigar Smoking Down

The per capita consumption of cigars has still to reach old-time levels. In 1920 Canadians disposed of 31.6 cigars each, but in 1932 this per capita consumption had dropped to 12.7, and even in 1939 was no better than 11.8. In 1941 it had shown a gain of 16.7.

Officials said imported tobacco wrappings for cigars are still being obtained, but if manufacturers experience difficulty in maintaining such imports because of price-ceiling regulations a further trend to Canadian tobacco for cigars is indicated. Subsidies paid by the Prices Board to keep the price of imported articles under the ceiling have been granted only for goods considered essential.

The increased use of cut tobacco for pipes and rolled cigarets has slow but steady. In 1920 per capita consumption of cut tobacco was 1.2 pounds, in 1939, 2-1 pounds and in 1941, 2.8 pounds.

Canadian imports for mixing with domestic tobacco have decreased during recent years. Of the stocks on hand of 131,720,500 pounds, 129,750,000 was home grown. The total included about 2,000,000 pounds of cigar leaf, with smaller quantities of Turkish and other tboccas used for blending.

The total holdings of 131,720,500 pounds compares with 76,576,000 pounds in 1937. While loss of export outlets has meant that stocks in Canada have increased, officials said that tobacco can be held for a considerable period under suitable conditions.

Day Nurseries Planned To Aid Mothers

The Province of Ontario is making a fine effort to establish well supervised day nurseries so that married women can enter industry and help in the war effort. There have been a number established in Toronto for some time, more or less in the experimental stage, and now they are really going all out for the idea.

Miss Mary Bevin Blakslee, well-known children's worker, was appointed Thursday as director of the Nursery Branch of the Ontario Department of Public Welfare. Miss Blakslee will take up her duties immediately. She has unusual qualifications for this work since she has worked for years with children as a kindergarten teacher at Rosedale Public School in Toronto, and seven years as teacher at the Home for Incurable Children. She has also worked with the Toronto Children's Aid Society and the Neighborhood Workers' Association.

The Minister of Welfare, Farquhar Oliver, has announced that he inspected a property for the first day nursery and nursery training school. It may be opened for its joint purpose sometime next month. Personnel who are to be serving in these nurseries throughout the province will get their training in this school.

These nurseries will be run by trained women and every care will be given the children, so that the mothers can go to work with minds free from worry. The children will receive as much care as if they were at home, and the discipline of being with other children will develop fine qualities in them at an early age, that they have to wait for ordinarily until they are going to school.

A great many more women would go into war industry if they knew that their children would receive good care at a reasonable cost. For those who are somewhat skeptical, they have only to look at England. Capt. Percy Cooper, of England, who was visiting in this city recently told of how splendidly organized the nurseries were over there. Except the women who absolutely have to remain at home, nearly all married women who are physically fit are either in the armed services or industry. Every woman is in a uniform of some sort, he said. Over there it has been found that the children receive excellent care, and in many cases, better than they would perhaps have at home

Patriotic

A check-up of mothers who are engaged in war industry in Toronto has recealed that the women are not doing the work for the money they receive, because after they pay their car fare, income tax, etc., the average woman has about seven dollars left. Most of them are spending their wages on cultural activities, such as music and dancing, for themselves and their children, things for which they never had the money before.

Another system that is favored by the Canadian National Federation of Home and School Clubs is that of the "block system." As was explained recently this is a scheme whereby children of a block or street would be cared for by one woman to permit some mothers to enter war industry. Such a plan would permit the children to be cared for near at home. Another idea put forward was that older women who cannot stand the strain of factory work, might clerk in stores and release the younger women for the heavier work in factories.

The list of visiting pros is larger than expected at first. It includes Bob Burns, Bob Gray, Dick Borthwick, Les. Franks, Bill Kerr, Jack Littler, Gordie Brydson, J. Aldrich, Kingston and Bill Little of Belleville.

The professionals will compete Sunday afternoon for special prizes. A number of Kingston and Belleville amateurs are coming to help swell the entry list.

Frisky Steer Plunges Into Otonabee

Jumping through a back window of the plant of Canada Packers into the river before noon to-day, a frightened steer made a gallant attempt to escape death in the slaughter-house but lost.

However, the animal caused a lot of excitement before the end came. After his spectacular leap into the water, he started to swim down the stream in the general direction of the lower lock and made good time too. In fact, he had almost reached the lower end of Crescent Street before he was headed off.

Jack Ashmore launched a naval expedition, going out in a boat and slipping the rope over the steer's head and the frightened animal was finally landed near the foot of Lake Street and practically towed back to the Canada Packers plant behind a truck. There the fate he had tried to evade by plunging into the river finally caught up with him.

Rain Too Light To Aid The Crops

That rain last night was far below the million dollar level in agricultural rating but it freshened things up, a Smith farmer remarked to-day.

"It will help keep the grass green," he said. "It sometimes gets brown and dry in August. The late potatoes and corn and turnips should be helped along. If it had been heavier it would have made the land easier for plowing; but it was all right, and things went along this morning without any holdup."

Salvage Money Nets $10.50 For War Victims

Salvage in the form of iron and rubber can do much to help the country's war effort, and this in itself should prove a big enough incentive and reason why all should do their utmost to gather in all the available material of this kind that is lying around going to waste for want of being put to greater use.

In Thursday's report for the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund, this column carried an account of a prize of $15.00 which had been won by the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. which had been awarded for hours of service given by three of its members at the salvage depot, and following hard on this, to-day's receipts include the sum of $10.50 from the sale of salvage secured at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Best, at Mount Pleasant, R. R. No. 2, Ida who had requested the secretary of the fund to arrange for its disposal, so once again there is a dual war service rendered in the bringing of this waste material into a useful service on behalf of the war effort, besides adding to the help to go from this city and district to relieve the distress of air raid victims in Britain.

The secretary of the fund would be glad to hear from any others in the rural districts who have salvage to dispose of in this manner, and will promptly arrange for its disposal if given a call at either 4631 or 9806.

Once again this column is very pleased to record the good deeds of public school children, whose activities throughout the operation of this fund has been a feature of real note and merit.

He Stands Alone.

Any boy who goes out and can make $5.00 by cutting lawns, demonstrates that he is made of the right stuff that lends to real manhood, but added to that, when he turns that same $5.00 which to a boy is a lot of real money over to be used to help others in distress, there can be no doubt that his heart is in the right place, and he is heading for a superior type of citizenship. Such is just what Jim Airth of 626 Charlotte Street has done during the holiday recess from school duties.

Then to further add to the support that children have been giving to help people of Britain, five boys and one girl in the persons of Barbara Bryant, Elwin and Robert Curtis, Carl Brioux, Douglas Woods and Jack Coursey held a Carnival in the back yard at 558 Romaine Street with a small bingo, and booths for games and soft drinks and hot dogs from which in all they made the sum of $5.08.

They started off with a movie show with a clown act thrown in at two cents admission and as many as 25 crowded into the front room of the home of Carl Brioux, who was also responsible for a donation some time ago to the fund, so this marks his second effort.

Boys and girls who set themselves to such a task as this have no time for getting into mischief, and they gain much satisfaction and valuable experience, besides doing a lot of good for others.

Ration Section Head Lauds Cooperation

G. A. Gillespie has received from S. B. Millen of the ration section of Wartime Prices and Trade Board the following letter which he passed on gratefully to all those participated in the distribution locally of ration cards:

"We wish to express our appreciation and gratitude to you and your workers for the tremendous task which you have helped to accomplish. Now that the temporary sugar ration cards have been issued, the full significance of the unprecedented results which have been obtained is clear to us.

"Some 60,000 volunteer canvassers and more than 80,000 volunteer women recorders throughout the country have collected and transcribed nearly four million application forms and twelve million ration cards in approximately four days. This accomplishment is rather unique and you have reason to be proud of the part you had in it.

"You have given freely of your time and effort in this national emergency, and we want you to know how grateful we are for what you have done."

Married Men Next

ALBANY, N. Y., August 21 —(AP)— Drafting of New York married men is "not far off," the State Selective Service Director, Brig.-Gen. Ames T. Brown, warns. It is impossible to govern inductions so each board exhausts a category and approaches the next with exactly the same speed, Brown says, "but it is no secret the time is not far off" when married registrants will be called for active military service.

City Barber Has Son Hurt Overseas

Smashing Commando raid by Canadian troops at Dieppe, France, had an echo in Peterborough on Friday when Roy England, 53 Edgewater Blvd., a barber employed by Ray Bacon on Charlotte street received a cable which read "Am wounded, not serious."

This brief, but meaty communication was the first report of direct Canadian casualties reaching this city, and came from his son, Lt. Leslie L. England, who is serving with the South Saskatchewan Regiment, one of the Canadian units that bore the brunt of the initial assaults on the strongly defended French coast. It is presumed that England was in the early raid, and on his return cabled his father right away, to assure him the injuries were not serious.

Lt. Leslie England is 23 years of age and is a native of Weyburn, Sask., and he enlisted four days after war was declared. He is a graduate of collegiate, and after five years in the militia took a course at the Royal School of Infantry and Machine Gunnery. He enlisted with the rank of sergeant.

The father came east three months ago, and has been employed at Bacon's barber shop since then.

Trpr. George Cooper To Marry Overseas

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Cooper of Nicholls Oval have received a letter from their son Trooper George Cooper of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, an Ottawa unit, dated from somewhere in England, August 1, informing them of his engagement and approaching marriage to Joyce Stecher, Gillman Road, Orpington, Kent.

Mr. Cooper said the news was not a complete surprise to him and his wife. Recent letters had mentioned the Kentish girl, and the probability of a daughter-in-law soon to be received in the Cooper family. Date of the marriage was not mentioned, but it might be some time this month.

Approve Report By Huycke On Lord's Day

Commending the report of City Solicitor W. F. Huycke to the city council respecting laws relating to the observance of the Lord's Day Act Rev. George G. Webber, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, has requested opinion on several points.

"First of all," Rev. Mr. Webber wrote, "I desire to express sincere appreciation of the evident care and thought given this whole question as indicated in your report. I have rarely seen a more informing statement in connection with the Lord's Day laws, and particularly with respect to the status of the pre-Confederation Upper Canada Act of 1845."

The writer remarked that he had read the Examiner's report of Mr. Huycke's review to the council.

"One of two questions, however, have been raised in our minds by reading your report, and comparing it with the experiences and observations of the Lord's Day Alliance officials in Ontario down through the years. One of these questions centres around the status of the clause in the 1845 pre-Confederation Act regarding Sunday fishing. The plea has been made that, inasmuch as the British North America Act has placed within the jurisdiction of Provincial Legislatures regulations with regard to fishing and hunting; and in view of Section 15 of the Lord's Day Act, which validates all existing provincial laws for the observance of the Lord's Day, clause 5 of the pre-Confederation Act has now been superseded. Did you have this point in mind in the preparation of your opinion?

A similar plea has been raised with regard to Section 6 of the 1845 Act in the matter of Sunday bathing, as that has become very largely a matter of provincial and municipal control. We have been further advised that at the time the 1845 Act was enacted, the intention was to control on Sundays nude bathing, which was then the prevailing form of bathing. We would be pleased to have your comments on these points.

I was pleased to note the clarity of your statement which said: "By virtue of the British North America Act of 1867, the Ontario Legislature cannot repeal or vary the old Upper Canada Act; only the Dominion Parliament has the power."

This statement is in entire harmony with our discussion of this question with the Department of the Attorney General of this province and also with the Department of Justice at Ottawa. There was, however, the statement from the Minister of Justice that it would be within the power of the Dominion Parliament to repeal the old Upper Canada Act, but this would not be done without the request of the Ontario Government or Legislature."

Mr. Huycke's report was prepared on the direction of the city council in regard a petition to them by the local branch of the Lord's Day Alliance respecting intimations of a move here toward Sunday baseball.

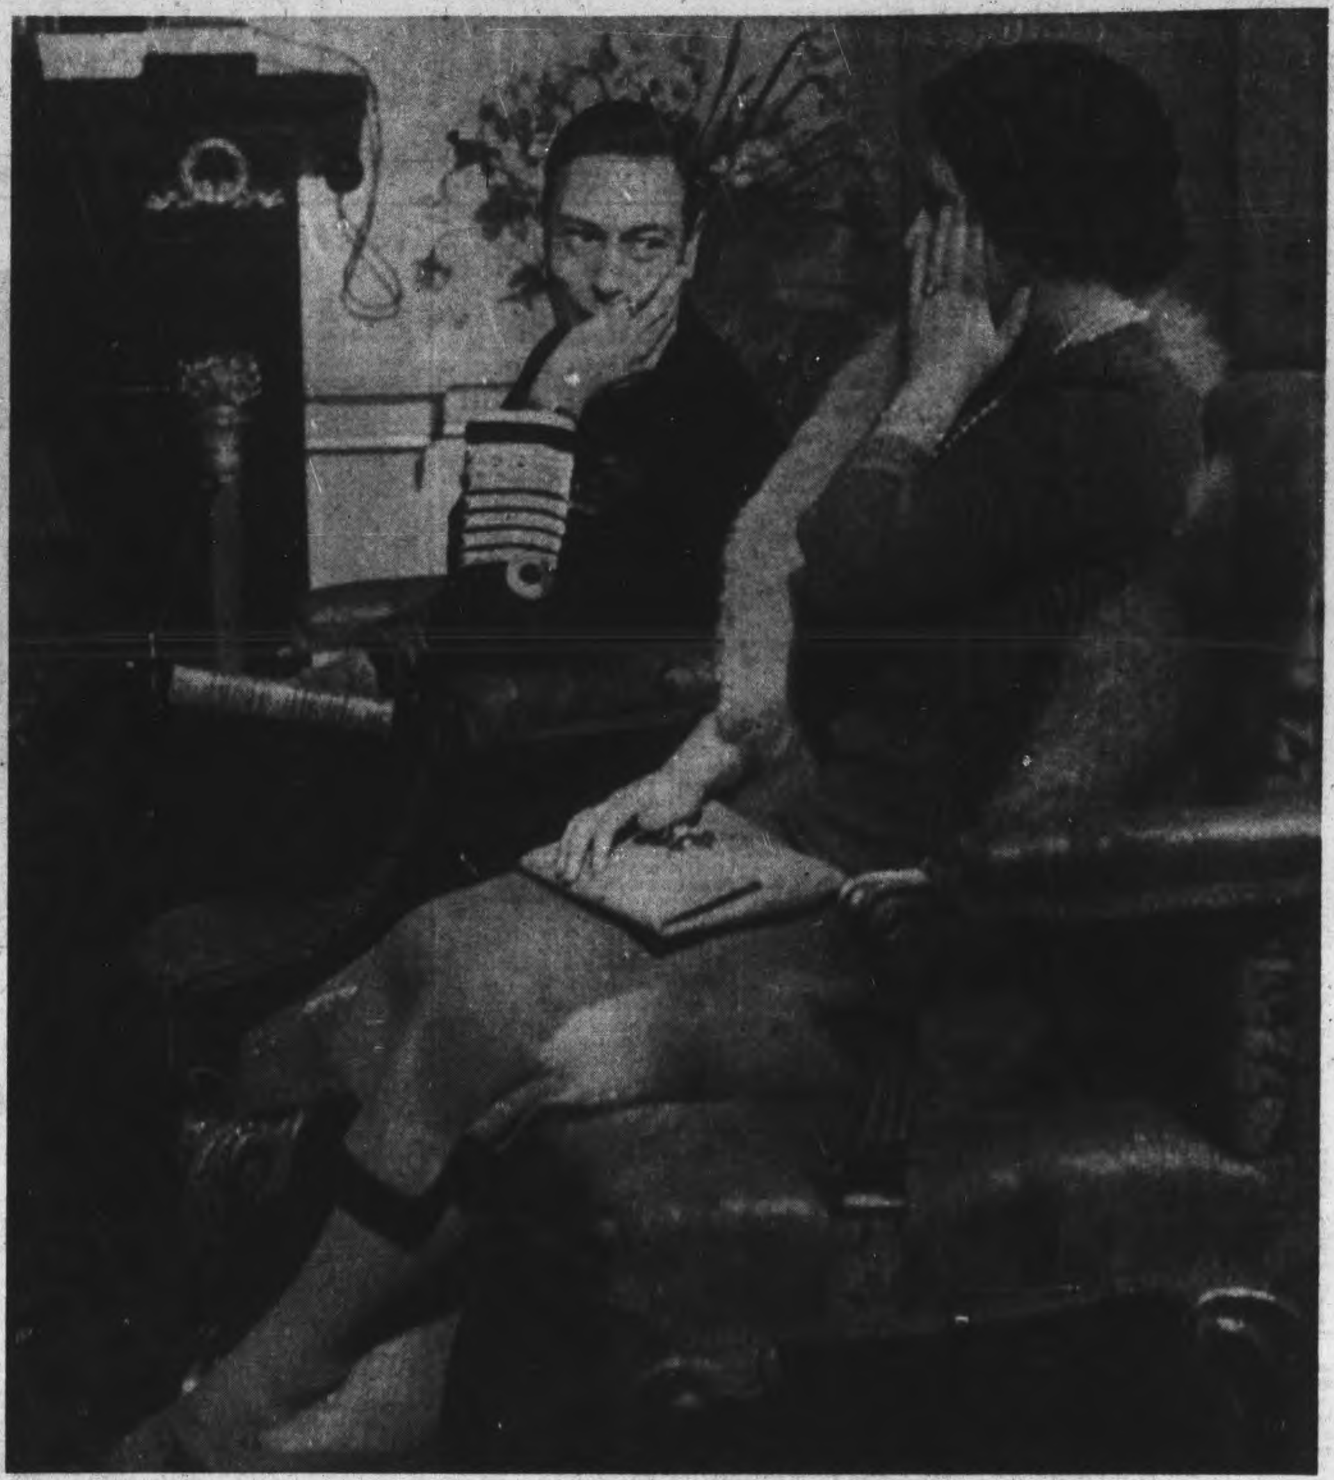
THE KING as a business man. His majesty keeps long office hours, and his duties as head of a great empire at war are probably more arduous and exacting than those of any other man in Great Britain



CHARMING STUDY of the King and Queen as husband and wife exchanging amused glances as they watch their children being photographed. The royal family lives much like any other British family in wartime, and practices economy every bit as strict as any of their subjects

KEEN INTEREST and concentration are written on the faces of the Queen, Princess Margaret Rose and Princess Elizabeth as they watch the King posing for his photograph

PRINCESS ELIZABETH smiles in "big sisterly" manner at Margaret Rose as they discuss a picture in a book

THIS DELIGHTFUL "father and daughter" study was made when Princess Margaret Rose visited the King's office and his majesty took time off to give her a "dialling" lesson

MOST INTIMATE "home picture" of the royal family ever made is probably this unstudied group gathered around the fire. Centre of interest is the 16-year-old heir to the throne, Princess Elizabeth who stands in the centre, busily

ALL MEMBERS of the royal family devote themselves to busy programs of war work. Here, apparently, Princess Elizabeth has struck a slight snag in her piece of knitting, and the Queen leans over to diagnose the trouble and offer

Thinks Losses Heavy As At Hong Kong

LONDON, Aug. 21 —(CP)— Bob Bowman, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation London correspondent, who travelled across the Channel with part of the Calgary Tank Regiment and witnessed the raid on Dieppe from their tank-carrying craft, said that " it seems reasonably certain our losses are as heavy as they were at Hong Kong."

Bowman did not elaborate on the remark other than to refer to Nazi claims that 1,500 prisoners were taken. "We suffered heavy losses," he said. "I saw men die, but I never saw men die with as much bravery."

(The Canadian contingent which reached Hong Kong last November numbered 1,985 officers and men. Shortly after Hong Kong fell, Christmas Day, the Japanese claimed Canadian prisoners totalled 1,689.)

Bowman related how a colonel of the Hamilton Light Infantry, whom he described as a London man, told his men they were going into action. There was no heroics, no cheers. The men asked questions as a general would—nature of the coast extent of air protection that would be accorded.

As dawn came the white cliffs of France loomed ahead and the sky was "streaked with fighting fools." Near shore destroyers hammered the coast with broadsides. In the clouds of planes overhead both German and British craft were shot down. Just as one of the tank-landing craft reached shore the craft sank.

Boat Driven Off

Bowman said his boat tried to get in again, but the Nazi batteries were still in action and the boat turned out. Meanwhile navy craft put up a terrific barrage against enemy dive-bombers, and Bowman was covered with black soot from the cordite. Bombs plummetted down nearby and some of the men on the boat were wounded.

On shore the tanks formed a square to protect the infantry. The South Saskatchewan infantry got ashore safely, but the Cameron Highlanders were under fire of six-inch howitzer shells and there were casualties.

Bowman told of listening by short-wave to the tank crews talking to one another as they went into action. He heard the captain of one say, "Come on over, boys, we're killing lots of Heinrichs."

Account of Raid

The following account of the raid was written by Bowman:

"It's about time we got at those Huns," said the Canadian sergeant at my side as we nestled down in the boat which was taking us to France.

That's the way the Canadians left the south coast Tuesday night—on their toes, happy and even enthusiastic over the chance to get at close quarters.

I was with the Calgary Tanks in one of the new tank-carrying craft. We hardly had set sail when the padre collected all men in the bow of the ship, standing in front of a new tank.

With the aid of a flashlight he read to them from the sixth chapter of Ephesians.

Shells Plopped Around

When daylight came the French coast was rocking with the explosion of our bombs. As our ships become visible German batteries started lobbing shells our way. They plopped around us. From British ships along the coast came answering fire. That lasted for three hours. Our narrowest escape was when a shell landed 50 feet from us.

Tank men wearing berets sat in whatever comfortable spots they could find aboard our craft and interestedly watched the action.

Machine gun bullets whistled around us while our guns cracked at German planes overhead. Our attempted landing failed and we waited for orders to go in again at another beach. Our "ack ack" barrage was wonderful. The German bombers were kept healthily away from us. Four Focke-Wulf's dived on us but two disappeared in flames. Once again we found it impossible to get to the beach and the order was given to retire. At one time when we were outside Dieppe harbor we saw one of the most inspiring sights of the whole action—one of our ships sailed almost into the mouth of the harbor and just lay there for 45 minutes, blasting away with all guns. We could see the shells hitting German strong points in houses high above the harbor. Here and there houses slowly crumbled under the fire. By this time some of the casualties had been brought aboard our ship. The padre of the Montreal Fusiliers told me about trying to get on shore. Men were killed all around him, he said.

"Moose" Fulton Now Missing

Only a few days before he was reported missing on a bombing raid, Wing Commander John "Moose" Fulton, D.C.O., D.F.C., A.F.C., of Kamloops, B.C., was honored by the Lord Mayor of London on behalf of the people of his home town. Grinning with embarrassment he never showed when he was pounding the Germans, Fulton stammered, "I'm not used to this sort of thing," thanked the mayor and citizens of Kamloops, and sat down. The last pictures of him were taken on that occasion. Here he examines the gift, a silver cigarette case, with his brother, Lieut. David Fulton.

Canada's Foodbasket Overflowing Wheat, Meat, Milk, Butter, Fruit

OTTAWA, August 21.—(CP)—Canada was pictured today as a land of plenty in which essential food supplies will remain ample unless they are voluntarily shared to a major extent with Allied Nations.

"Rationing of foods has been applied only to tea, coffee and sugar, all products which we import either entirely or in major quantity," J. Gordon Taggart, Foods Administrator for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

"Even if we lost every imported article we could live well. We could even do without sugar if we had to, although it would mean an adjustment in the diets of all Canadians to meet a situation where we would have to get along with only about 20 per cent of the sugar we now use annually."

Mr. Taggart took five major food groups and reviewed the Canadian position.

1. Cereals from the forthcoming crop and the wheat now in store Canada has enough wheat to feed the Dominion for 15 years. Vast quantities of oats are also being produced. Grains also represent food in the form of meat, poultry, eggs and pork and they are used for feed.

2. Meats: Canada will produce about 7,000,000 hogs this year, while the number required for home consumption is about 2,250,000. The total production might rise to 8,000,000 in 1943. Canadians have reduced their consumption of pork products so British requirements for bacon might be met, but from 2,500,000 to 2,750,000 hogs for home consumption would represent a "comfortable" supply.

More Beef Than We Can Eat.

Canada produres more beef cattle than it can eat. It is able to meet home requirements and export 100,000 head annually to the United States without difficulty. While the Wartime Food Corporation set up by the prices board now is buying export cattle for domestic use instead of shipping them across the border, this system is required only to meet a temporary condition. Shipments of Canadian cattle to the United States to the largest extent possible represent a contribution to the United Nations cause, as the imports from Canada release American stocks of beef which may be required by the United Kingdom or other nations.

Supplies of poultry and eggs are plentiful, although 30,000,000 dozen eggs are being shipped to the United Kingdom this year. As in past years, there might be a temporary shortage of eggs in September and October but the prospects are that overseas and home requirements would both be met.

Feed for poultry is abundant, and it is possible that 50,000,000 bushels of wheat and other grains will be required in a year to feed growing flocks of poultry and turkeys.

Lots Of Milk and Butter

3. Dairy Products: Fluid milk consumption is up 12 per cent over last year and in 1941 a consumption gain of 10 per cent over 1940 was reported. Milk production for all purposes to date in 1942 is up four per cent over 1941.

Because of other demands on milk, including increased cheese production, butter production is about five per cent lower for this year. The current rate of butter production, spurred by a bonus, is ahead of that for last year with indications that a gain recorded in July will continue or will be accelerated, with the prospect that by next spring all supplies will be adequate.

4. Fruits and Vegetables: The supplies of all home-grown vegetables are sufficient and the canning program will exceed that of last year. The fruit canning program will also be larger this year except in the minor fruits. A surplus of apples is in prospect, and potatoes and onions, a little short of requirements last year, will be sufficient.

5. Fish: Sufficient supplies of most fish are being obtained and marketed. All canned salmon is being sent to the United Kingdom.

Ground Men Slap Squadrons Back In Air In 20 Mins.

By ALLAN NICKLESON,

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 21—(CP)—Congratulations showered today on the Canadian men behind the men who man the aircraft guns—ground crews who made possible the brilliant R.C.A.F. exploits in the Battle of Dieppe.

"You have done a splendid job," read a message from wing headquarters received by the backroom men at this station while the great air battles of Wednesday were still in progress and roaring planes were returning for rapid refuelling and reloaoding and then taking off gain.

The message added: "Carry on for a few more hours and a great air victory will be ours."

Veteran fitters, riggers and armorers who helped keep planes flying during the Battle of Britain declared yesterday that the Dieppe air action was hot, hectic and furious as the most action-filled days of the air fights over London in 1940.

Between sweeps, the ground crews sprawled on the grass beside runways under tarpaulins and ground sheets. They propped their tired heads on their tool kits and, often, the next man's boots. They didn't seem to mind any discomfort as long as they could be on hand to service the returning battle kites.

Had Become Bored.

"Look at those guys," said Sergeant Ted Ryland of Winnipeg, senior non-commissioned officer of thi sfighter squadron, as he pointed to his greasy crews. "They'll go until 3 o'clock tomorrow if they have to. A few days ago every one was a little brassed off and there was no pep in the outfit. But today...."

By noon the groundmen were stripped to the waist and working skilfully and swiftly on aircraft going out on successive sweeps. Grey-haired Sergeant L. H. Clayton of Winnipeg, a veteran of the Royal Flying Corps, insisted that the Battle of Britain was no tougher on the ground boys.

"In those days our boys were fighting overhead," he said, "and they were continually coming in singly or by twos or threes to refuel and get more ammunition. This time they're coming back as a squadron and that means a terrific amount of work to be done in short order."

So fast did the ground men operate that a squadron could return to base, be serviced and aloft again in twenty minutes.

At this field you would hear first the hum of home-coming aircraft while the ground crews edged to the fringe of the flying field almost on tiptoe in their eagerness.

"It's ours," they would shout as they recognized the plane .... "He's fired," another group would yell as they would notice the white covers on cannon and machine-guns shot away.

The sergeant waved a returning plane into position, crooning, "Come to me, baby, come to me."

Swarmed to Work.

Fitters and riggers crouched outside the flashing arc of the propeller blades ready to swarm to work. In the next instant almost a dozen different jobs were started and, when the plane took off, a look of sheer joy flashed on the faces of the men.

Here are just a few of the men in overalls who helped fashion the Canadian air triumph over Dieppe: Corporals William Clark of Kingston, Murray Watt of Toronto, Bill Roach of Medicine Hat, Don Matheson of Winnipeg, T. W. Barnes of Moose Jaw, D. A. W. Roberts of London, Ont., T. H. Burton of Toronto and J. C. Baker of Toronto.

Leading Aircraftmen J. H. Scott of Winnipeg, G. E. Manigold of Orillia, C. E. Gibson of Trout Creek, Ont., D. F. C. Porter of Gore Bay, A. H. Tims of Guelph, S. Letoksky of Toronto, Frank Boundy of Windsor, FFrank Mogg of Toronto and Harold Bascombe of Sault Ste. Marie Ont.; L. S. McLaren of Almonte, and J. A. Sternall of Walkerton.

Nazi Mortars Deadly Say Canucks

By CHARLES BRUCE

A South Coast English Port, Aug. 21 —(CP)—Canadian soldiers back from the war's greatest combined operations raid brought with them a healthy respect for German mortar operations and a vast contempt for the individual German as a soldier.

These were the two chief impressions of members of the South Saskatchewan Regiment, with whom I talked.

The South Saskatchewans were on the right flank—west of Dieppe. They went in through the Village of Pourville, piling over a ten-foot seawall.

According to Sergeant Basil Smith of Halbrith, Sask., there was no opposition until the men had landed from the barges. Then machine-guns started firing from the right and left. But this concentration of fire never hit the regiment. They moved under it.

"Where we got it worst was on the way back," said Private Walter Save, Estevan, Sask. "They laid it into us."

"Our job was to lay out a bunch of pillboxes," said Sergeant Smith. "They were on the forward slope of the hill as we landed and as we went over the seawall we ran to the right of them and cleaned them out from behind with grenades.

"Another objective of ours was the radio station. We never got it, but the navy knocked it out anyway."

"That stuff goes off with a 'woof' and you can't duck it," said Sergeant-Major Frank Mather, Estevan, speaking of the German mortar fire.

"It's got a flat trajectory, and it's very accurate."

Most tickled man in the party was Private Charles Leclerc, one-time lumberjack of Bellechasse, Que., who came back with a Heinie helmet taken from a Nazi he bayonetted.

Of the ninety in "A" company who went on the raid, as many are "back active" as are in hospital.

Among the units concerned was the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg. Private Ken Hoban, East Kildonan, Man., spent nine hours on the beach and in the country around Dieppe.

"It was quite a show," he said. "There's one thing—those Germans have got a mortar technique we can learn a lot from."

Air Heroes Add A Chapter To Great Deeds

LONDON, Aug. 21—(CP)—A new chapter was added to the brilliant history of the Empire's air forces tonight as stories of the exploits of men who helped make possible the success of the Dieppe raid came from a dozen air stations scattered over the rolling countryside in Southern England.

Faced by the greatest array of aircraft the Germans ever mustered in the West against an attacking force, fighter and army co-operation squadrons fought the enemy with outstanding success from dawn to dusk and provided protection to land and sea forces which won the praise of every soldier and sailor.

Every Canadian fighter and army co-op squadron overseas took part and members of these formations, with the scores of Canadians in R.A.F. units, formed a considerable proportion of the United Nations force, which was comprised not only of men from all parts of the Empire, but from the United States, Fighting France, Belgium, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

"Never before have ground forces been provided with such air support," the Air Ministry news service said in disclosing that the Germans in an all-out bid to smash the returning flotilla threw in every type of plane they could put in the air—big and medium bombers, fighter-bombers, and fighters.

Spitfires, Hurricanes and Bostons opened the offensive with a dawn attack on German shore batteries preparing the way for the landing force which, from the moment it neared the beaches, was covered by an umbrella of Spitfires.

Throughout the morning, fighter squadrons dived low through a hail of bullets and shells from ack-ack emplacements. Bombers of one squadron fought off 25 attacking Nazi fighters while they poured out their eggs from low level.

Every air force involved in the show did a nice job. United States Flying Fortresses plastered the important Abbeville fighter base to weaken the opposition the Germans could get into the air.

American Eagle pilots and Spitfire-flying pilots of the American Army Air Corps continuously engaged the Germans over the battle area.

Belgians, Fighting French and Czechs all scored successes, while the Poles, always noted for their cool daring, smashed down 17 German planes and suffered a loss of only three of their own.

Scores of planes made two and three trips, pausing only long enough to refuel and rearm. At one station, Canadian fliers waiting to go aloft on the third sweep of the day, learned only then that they were to support Dominion ground troops in the assault.

One Canadian Army co-operation squadron was hailed as a keystone of the attack as, in its first big operation, it kept in the air from dawn until all the troops had left the French Coast late in the day.

Nazi Defences Now Open Secret To The British

By WILLIAM STEWART

LONDON, Aug. 21 —(CP Cable)— The story of the Allied Commando raid on Dieppe exploded across the front pages of yesterday's morning newspapers in stories which all agreed that the attack on the Nazi-held French port was the prelude to a second front.

The Express said: "We attacked one of the best defended points on the occupied coast in order to find out some more about German strength without revealing too much about our own."

The Cardiff Western Mail termed the "psychological effect" of the operation perhaps "even more important than the tangible military results."

"Nothing would affect the German people more profoundly than establishment of a second front," said the Western Mail.

The Glasgow Herald noted the "relatively prolonged nature of the daylight attack and very extensive provision for air cover" in addition to tanks pointed to the test as "preparations made for invasion of the continent on an immensely large scale."

The biggest Commando job of the war was opportunity's loudest knock in months for the military analysts and they made the most of it. They all agreed the operation was a success, though a costly one.

Morley Richards of the Daily Express wrote that the "real strength of the German land and air defences in western Europe now is known.

The Express in a special article by William Taunton entitled "the Canadians prayed for this day," pictured the raid as a "Rundstedt vs. McNaughton duel" and compared the backgrounds of the Nazi commander-in-chief in western Europe and the Canadian army commander.

Cartoonists drew everything from tiny winged Commando troopers stinging Hitler over the caption "This is a record summer for wasps" to towering blackfaced men stepping down on the French coast to slap Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels who recently dared the Allies to "land in France."

MILK—Now that tea and coffee consumption has been cut by rationing and seems likely to be scarce while the war lasts, milk will probably be more popular as a beverage ...Marion Harlow of the Pensions and Health Department's nutrition services says women trying to keep their weight down don't have to be afraid of milk because it's not the thing that puts on extra poundage... "Pastry, rich desserts, jam, chocolate sundaes and other fatty and starchy foods are the real villains," is the way she puts it.

APPLES—Laura Pepper of the Agriculture Department's consumer division is constantly on the watch for sugar-saving hints..."When you buy early varieties of apples make sure they're fully ripe," she says. "Green apples take too much sugar in cooking"...Her sugar-saving recipe for apple sauce is three-quarters of a tablespoon of sugar for each Duchess apple and one-half a tablespoonful for a Yellow Transparent...Add the sugar after cooking while the apple cause is still hot for best results.

SPENDING—Byrne Hope Sanders, "Mrs. Consumer" of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, urges every family to adopt a "spending plan" for most efficient wartime living... "Let's decide now what we need to keep our families well and strong and yet spend less," she suggests. "Hit-or-miss spending wastes money. Lay aside money regularly for essentials like taxes. And adopt as a motto: 'If it means running up a new bill to buy something—don't buy it'."

COFFEE—The rationing division of the Prices Board comes out with this advice for making rationed coffee: "Don't over-percolate".... Most economical results come from one level tablespoonful of coffee for each cup "perked" not over 12 minutes...And make sure the beans are ground correctly for your coffee maker to avoid waste—coarse for boiled coffee, medium for percolator, fine for drip method and pulverized or fine for glass coffee makers.

FACTORIES—Dr. L. B. Pett, director of nutrition services, says his branch is launching an intensive campaign to improve meals and eating facilities in industry...Trained dietitians have already surveyed these aspects of several hundred factories...Now the nutrition services are trying to co-operate with the managements in making a real improvement in the nutrition of Canadian workers..."Nutrition in Industry" is the title of a new booklet available to all employers

STOVES—The new order freezing supplies of electric stoves and grills makes it all the more important to take care of the one you're using... The experts suggest that any food spilled on the range top should be wiped off promptly...After the range cools wipe with a cloth dipped in warm, soapy water...If the heating units are open, burn off spilled food and don't use a brush or sharp instrument which might damage the elements.

Nursing To Be Dramatized In Play By CBC

Cathy Graham, sparkling little Vancouver actress, plays the role of Elizabeth Harding Canadian Nurse-in-training, in Claire Murray's outstanding drama, "No Prouder Pledge," which will be presented to the CBC's National Network, Friday, August 21, 1942, following the National News at 10.15 E.D.T.

This broadcast has been designed to assist in the campaign recently got under way by the Canadian Nurses Association to stimulate public interest in nursing as a national service. Miss Graham is supported by Fletcher Markle, who plays Christopher Dale, her air force fiane; and Larry McCance who plays Jonathan Harding Elizabeth's father.

The story shows what apportunities for service there are in this field and points out the very real, personal benefit a nurse derives from her training as a preparation for many phases of life—for marriage, home-making, home-nursing and so on.

The story takes place at the present time, in a large Canadian Hospital. As Nurse Harding sits on the platform, waiting to receive her diploma, she listens to the valedictorian. She thinks back over her three years of training, her entry into the hospital on a dare, her dislike for the work, her wasteful first year — and finally, her awakening, her realization that here—in the nursing field—she is needed. She can serve. She is aware of the last joys that come through service to others.

Gerald Gabourie Wed at Stoco To Dorothy Cassidy

On Monday morning, August 10, a pretty wedding took place at St. Edmund's Church, Stoco, when Miss Dorothy Rita Cassidy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cassidy, Stoco, became the bride of Mr. Gerald Edward Gabourie, Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gabourie, Thomasburg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Meagher, with John and James Whalen, cousins of the groom as acolytes. The altar was beautifuly decorated for the occasion with pink and white gladioli.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white chiffon and lace over taffeta, with a sweetheart neck caught with a rhinestone pin. Her finger-tip veil was of embroidered silk net with a coronet of bridal roses. She carried a bouquet of red roses, fern and baby's breath. Miss Helen Cassidy, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was in baby bluet net over taffeta with small matching hat and carried pink roses, fern, and baby's breath.

Mr. Philip Gabourie, Kingston, brother of the groom, attended as groomsman. Miss Clara Mulroney was organist and the choir rendered beautiful selections for the occasion.

Following the ceremony the immediate relatives were served dinner at the bride's home.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Gabourie will take up residence in Peterborough.

Those in attendance from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. William J. Gabourie, and Philip Gabourie, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allore, Peterborough; Miss Rita McCrank, Reg. N., Colbalt, and Miss Eileen Cassidy, Reg. N., Haileybury.

For Saturday, August 22

AN UNUSUALLY strenuous and aggressive state of affairs is presaged by the mutual and lunar aspects prevailing This high pressure activity may characterize business as well as purely personal objectives. The stress, however, may be greatest in an effort to put over new and ambitious projects of major importance and which should thrive by indomitable persistence without the co-operation or approbation of employers, elders and superiors.

If Is Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which the affairs should go forward under high tempo and with practical constructive ability and skill centred upon the launching of new and ambitious projects. Strenuous efforts, sound plans and prudence in essential outlay of funds and energies should be pushed to desired goals despite want of co-operation of influential persons.

A child born on this day should be energetic, enterprising and have much initiative and executive ability, with sound judgment and ambitions that should culminate in personal satisfaction.

The Dormitory Fireside

By PRUNELLA WOOD

MUCH midnight oil will be burned in the blackout as both girls and boys hustle along to a diploma, headed as fast as possible for defence jobs on the outside.

Here are two pyjama outfits in the pin money class which will conserve outdoor clothes when lounging or cramming hours are the order of the dormitory. One is on the feminine-pretty side; the other on the feminine-efficient. Both are washable propositions which will bear up beneath plenty of work and wear.

Millbrook

Among those from Millbrook who motored to Peterborough on Tuesday evening to attend the softball playoff game between the C.G.E. and Westclox were Mr. R. H. and Mrs. Ross Edmunds and Donald, Reeve W. E. and Mrs. Ball, Rev. A. L. Sisco, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. McPherson and Stanford Sloan.

Mrs. Henry W. Gray left Friday for Prince George, B.C., to join her husband, who is stationed at that point with his regiment, the Prince of Wales Rangers. Mrs. Gray had been engaged as teacher of the senior room in the new Bailieboro school when it opens in September. Mr. Gray has now attained the rank of sergeant in his regiment George Gray, military instructor in the naval school at Windsor, was home for the week-end with his mother, Mrs. Wentworth Gray.

Rev. H. R. Williams, of Avonton, formerly of Millbrook, who is holidaying at Bewdley, will preach in Grace Presbyterian Church on Sunday, August 23, at 7.30 p.m. Rev. Richard Williams, B.A., is now pastor of a church at Regina, Sask.

Rev. Walter Patterson, of Paisley, has accepted the call from the Millbrook and Centreville Presbyterian Churches and will be inducted into his new charge on September 8, the Presbytery meeting here also on that date, and opening its sessions at 10 a.m.

Dr. H. A. and Miss B. M. Turner have closed their cottage, near Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake, and returned to their home here, making a shorter stay than usual at their summer home. At the recent Red Cross picnic, held on the lawn of Percy Stinson's home, the president of the local branch, Rev. A. L. Sisco, referred with keen appreciation to the faithful and efficient manner in which Miss Turner has fulfilled her duties as secretary of the Millbrook Red Cross.

Miss Betty O'Brian is holidaying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. O'Brian, and expects to go to Buffalo shortly to visit with her aunt, Miss May O'Brian, and her cousins, Dr. F. Lugsdin and Miss Bessie O'Brian. Previous to leaving Peterborough last week-end, Miss O'Brian resigned from her position in the office of the Quaker Oats Company, after eight years as stenographer. Before leaving the office staff held an informal social hour when Betty was presented with a handsome bedroom clock in ivory and gold, an Elizabeth Arden set and silk lingerie. Miss A. F. Dobbin made the presentation on behalf of the members of the office staff.

Miss Rose Macnamara has returned after visiting with her sister at Orillia and with other friends.

Lords Bucks Up In Discussions And Attendance

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, August 21 — (CP). — Noble peers who make up the membership of the House of Lords are receiving bouquets for the eloquence of their oratory and the measured and weighty tone of their debates.

Once the poor relation of the House of Commons as far as prestige is concerned, the Lords now is more than holding its own and the speeches of some of its members are being held up as an example Commons might well emulate.

Average attendance at a session in the Lords is between 50 and 100 —compared with 30 in peacetime. The figure is small in proportion to the 780 peers, but large considering a member has no constituents to whom he is responsible and receives no salary.

The war, with its demands for facts and arguments rather than flowery eloquence, and the elevation to the peerage of a number of prominent Commoners are the main reasons why the Lords are regaining favor.

Good Speeches.

In war debates especially with several former Cabinet ministers and under-ministers to take part in the discussion, the Peers' contributions usually are better than any made in the Commons, with the possible exception of Prime Minister Churchill and a handful of other members. Much of the improvement in the debates is due to Lord Addison who, as leader of the Labor benches, is trenchant in criticism, constructive in argument, and, at the same time highly regarded by all his fellow peers.

Every second Wednesday, Lord Addison holds a meeting of all the Socialist members of the Upper House. Business of the House is discussed and plans are made for future debates.

In most debates more than two-thirds of the members present are the first of their line—that is to say are men ennobled because of their services to the State. And of those newcomers to nobility, about three-quarters have been members of the Commons. There is, for instance, Lord Winster, who as Reginald Fletcher, was Parliamentary Private Secretary to the Admiralty. He has become one of Labor's ablest spokesmen in the Lords.

Varied Experience.

In Baron Margesson and Lord Brabazon the House has men who while in the Commons held portfolios at the War Office and the Ministry of Aircraft Production. Lord Brabazon, in addition, was once Minister of War Transport.

Lord Cranborne, Leader of the Lords, speaks with the added authority of Colonial Secretary and former Dominions Secretary. Lord Selborne is Minister for Economic Warfare; Lord Woolton, Minister of Food; Lord Leathers, Minister of War Transport; Lord Portal, Minister of Works and Buildings.

There is, in fact, "authority" in the Lords, for almost any subject which may be debated. For this reason, the Peers, who once trooped into the galleries of the Commons to hear debates there, now receive more "visitors" from the Lower House than they send.

Japs Digging In As Chinese Gain

CHUNGKING, Aug. 21—(CP). — Chinese dispatches today said the military position in eastern China had been stablized by Chinese recapture of Wenchow and the widening to 60 miles of the gap between Japanese forces, seeking to strike from east and west toward each other along the Kiangsi railway.

The Japanese have made a number of efforts to close the gap, Chinese advices said, but now were reported digging in around Yingtan in the west and Shangjao in eastern Kiangsi.

Today's high command communique said that following the recapture of Wenchow Japanese remnants around the town were mopped up.

Ninety miles to the northwest, outside Suichang, fighting is still in progress, the communique said, although the Chinese evacuated the town Aug. 15.

MIRRORS SHOULD BE TOPS AMONG MORAL INFLUENCES

Nothing More Chastening than Close-Up of Yourself in Looking-Glass.

Julia will be 16 on Monday," said Julia's grandmother, "and I don't know what to give her for a birthday present."

"Give her a full-length mirror," replied a woman of the world.

"No danger of that," returned the woman, "quite the contrary. A good mirror is first aid to humility. I know of nothing more chastening than to get a close-up of yourself in a big looking-glass which reflects your every defect of face and figure and posture, and forces you to see yourself as others see you. Any woman who has an ego that is not deflated by that experience is past praying for.

"Believe me, among the higher moral influences mirrors deserve to be rated tops, for no woman ever has a heart-to-heart session with her defects without turning away a reformed character. She's seen herself as she really is and determined to do something about it that will add to the sweetness and beauty of life and make her less hard on the eyes of her fellow creatures.

"So what we need is more and bigger and better mirrors, for despite the fact that every woman carries a picayunish little dab of looking-glass in her handbag, and we all rubber at our reflections in every plate glass show window we pass, we seldom get a real honest-to-goodness life-size picture of ourselves with all of our sins of omission and commission, physically and sartorially, thick upon us. We don't have the slightest idea of how we look.

"I heard a woman who considered herself a good-looker and a swell dresser say that once she was coming down a store aisle and she thought, 'Who is that dowdy-looking woman whose skirt is too long, whose hat is a last year's bird nest, whose clothes look as if her worst enemy had bought them, and who needs a fresh wave?' when she suddenly realized she was approaching a mirror and that woman was herself.

Crimes Caused by Lack of Mirrors

"Surely it is only the lack of mirrors that causes women to commit the many crimes of good taste and turn them into figures of fun. Wound any old woman, for instance, fill up all the wrinkles and lines that give character to her face, with calcimine and then paint it like a barn door, except that she had no way of seeing what she was doing to herself? Would she henna her gray hair until it looked like a mess of strawberry jam? Would she doll herself up in her granddaughter's clothes if she could see in her mirror how ridiculous old sheep is, dressed as spring lamb?

"And would fat women wear plaids and would bag-of-bones go in for stripes if they'd ask their mirrors what about it, when they go away from the blandishments of the saleswoman? And would any hard-featured lady, who was umpty-tumpty years old, ever pay out good money for one of those freak hats if she'd ever gotten a line on how she looked in it from her faithful friend in her boudoir?

"The moralists are tearing their hair over the wave of nakedness that has swept the country, and are trying to devise some way to stop it and get women back into their clothes. The answer to that problem is mirrors. There's no use in preaching to them about modesty. They don't give a darn for that, but if you could only once make them see how bandy-legged and knock-kneed ninety-nine out of a hundred of them are, they'd know that skirts are like the mantle of charity—they cover a lot of anatomical sins—and they'd make a rush on the dress shops.

Woman's Best Friends

"You see, clothes are a woman's best friend, and an ever-present help in times of trouble. Any girl who isn't a monstrosity can look pretty in a pretty dress whose colors soften her blemishes and whose lines camouflage her bad points. But unless a girl's mirror tells her that she has legs like Marlene Dietrich she does well to keep them under cover and go in for chiffons instead of shorts.

"So buy Julia a mirror for her sixteenth birthday gift. It will do more to correct her faults than all your admonitions, for in it she will not only see herself as she is, but get some idea of what she'd like to be."

"I've always thought that Eve was a mighty sensible woman," commented Grandma. "They say the first thing she did after she was created was to look at her image in a pool of water."

"Thereby setting a good example to all her daughters," said the woman of the world.

Mess Room Chatter From Great Britain

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, August 21—(CP). — Two young veterans of an R.C.A.F. bomber squadron, Flt. Sgt. Stan Cybulski of Pembroke, Ont., and Sgt. Heath Gattey of Stettler, Alta., have been commissioned as pilot officers. Their squadron is commanded by Wing Cmdr. D. A. R. Bradshaw of London, Ontario.

In one of the most active bomber squadrons of the R.C.A.F. overseas Cybulski and Gattey, an observer, have seen action in most of the recent big raids on the Reich. Gattey is related to Harold Gattey who was Wiley Post's navigator on the globe-girdling flight of the Winnie Mae a few years ago.

The boys should be pretty pleased with this experiment, which promised to remove some of their greatest worries. At some northern bomber stations the boys and girls get together at a weekly "at home." The men bring along socks they have to be darned or clothes that need mending. The girls do the mending and the men return the compliment by cleaning the buttons on the W.A.A.F.'s uniforms and doing other odd jobs. Hot drinks and snacks are served, and the "at home" ends with a sing-song.

Fighting France's famous group, the Ile de France which flies daily withg the R.A.F. in cross-Channel sweeps, has a new hero—a "sergent pilote."

One of three sergeants who recently escaped from North Africa to Gibraltar in their own aircraft, he was over the coastline of his homeland when a shell carried away his directional rudder and the apparatus which permits the machine to descend. By manipulating the wing tips and the accelerator, he somehow reached the English coast.

He disregarded a wireless warning not to land and decided to try to save the machine. Letting his lame duck sink slowly and dropping his under-carriage with the greatest difficulty, he came down safely.

It was a Canadian squadron that provided air cover for the air-sea rescue launches dispatched to search for Wing Cmdr. Paddy Finucane when the Irish ace crashed in the Channel early in July. Men of the Spitfire squadron commanded by Sqdn Ldr. Bob Morrow of Toronto held off a wave of attacking Focke-Wulf 190's which attempted to penetrate the circle to attack the launches as they scoured the Channel.

The squadron destroyed at least one Focke-Wulf. So many Canadians had their guns blazing that it has been impossible to determine whose shells did the job.

YOUR DREAMS MAY REVEAL KEY TO PROBLEM

A Dream Caused By Frustration

The maddening dream of racing to catch a train and just missing it! There's a very good reason why so many of us dream that.

Deep down in all of us are conflicts and problems we've unconsciously tried to forget. These appear symbolically in our dreams.

Feelings of frustration—in your job, at home, in love—may cause dreams of missing trains or of being paralyzed. Aware of this, you can ask, "What causes my frustration? How can I eliminate those causes?"

Many dreams warn of dangerous feelings you've tried to hide even from yourself. Attracted, more than you'd admit, to someone who is married, you may dream of falling off a cliff—a warning of disaster.

Or you may dream that suddenly, with other people around, you are naked.

Our 32-page booklet tells what these and many other familiar dreams mean, according to psychoanalysis. Discusses nightmares and sex dreams, dreams that "show future mates."

"The Authority on Authorities"

COUNT ALTERNATIVES

WHEN YOU are in a tough contract and you see two different ways to play the hand, don't merely select one of them because of no particular reason. Count up what the result figures to be if you choose one method and compare it with the probable outcome if you pick the other plan. This is especially vital when the choice is between ruffing out certain losers and trying to discard them on a side suit.

North: ♠ K 7 2 ♥ K J 5 3 2 ♦ 6 2 ♣ Q 5 3

West: ♠ A Q 10 6 4 3 ♥ 8 ♦ A J 4 ♣ 10 7 6

East: ♠ 8 ♥ A 9 7 6 ♦ K 10 7 5 3 ♣ A 4 2

South: ♠ J 9 5 ♥ Q 10 4 ♦ Q 9 8 ♣ K J 9 8

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	5 ♦

That was rather strong bidding, but it developed at two tables of a tournament on this deal. With both spades and diamonds bid, South shied away from these suits, having a choice of leads between clubs and hearts, properly selecting hearts, the 4 at each table. After winning that with the A, one declarer decided to ruff out hearts and the other to establish spades.

The ruffer sent the heart 6 to the diamond 4, cashed the spade A, ruffed the spade 3 with the diamond 3, the heart 7 with the diamond J, the spade 4 with the diamond 5, the heart 9 with the diamond A and the spade 6 with the diamond K. He cashed the club A for his ninth trick, but then lost the last four tricks, to the club Q, diamond Q and club K.

The other declarer, counting up, saw that by the ruffing method he could get only three tricks with his side suit aces, plus three with heart ruffs and three with spade ruffs, a total of nine, so then counted the other alternative. This showed that, if spades were divided and the diamonds three-two, with South holding the Q, he could drop trumps, ruff up spades and have three spades for heart discards, so that there would be only two losing clubs. So he chose that plan, which might make his contract.

After winning the opener with the heart A, he led to the spade A, ruffed the 3 with the diamond 3, finessed the diamond J, ruffed the spade 4 with the diamond 7, setting up the suit, cashed the diamond K and A to drop trumps, and then ran the dummy's remaining three spades, parking his hearts on them. He cashed the club A then for the eleventh trick and conceded the last two.

What should be the attitude of West in the latter stages of the auction on this deal, if he decides to make a "smart" pass as dealer?

TEN-DAY CONFERENCE

Marmora Loses Pioneer In B. Lavender

MARMORA, August 21—(ENS)—In the passing of Benjamin Lavender at the residence of his son, William D. Lavender at 6.30 a.m. on Wednesday, the village of Marmora has lost an interesting and much respected resident.

About six years ago, Mr. Lavender came to reside with his son and although then an octogenarian, took a keen interest in affairs in general and enjoyed renewing of old acquaintances and the making of new ones in the village. His long life of eighty-six years was blessed with excellent health until a few months ago when he contracted the illness which proved fatal.

He was born in Tudor Township North Hastings, on November 30, 1856. His father whose name also was Benjamin, was a native of the country of Norfolk, England. He served in the 26th Camerorians and after being in the West Indies and other parts of the Empire on active service, purchased a shanty in Tudor Township, eight feet by ten feet which had been put up with block and tackle by two sailors who in Bermuda had seen an attractive advertisement, offering them free land in North Hastings.

The late Mr. Lavender often related that when he was born, there were "nothing but Indians around." His mother, Mmelia Quiltrough found the district a contrast to her native Bermuda.

Possessing a strong voice and ready flow of speech that many public speakers might well envy this hardy old veteran would remark: I can say I was driving oxen when I was 7. My father, when ploughing, had difficulty in keeping the oxen in the furrow so I had to walk along to help keep them in.

I chopped fallow for ten years before I was baptized. There were nine of us baptized that day in a farm house. Ministers used to walk as far as Bancroft from Belleville. It was an Anglican minister from Belleville by the name of Jones who baptized me (presumably the late Rev. Septimus Jones)).

Another of his claims was that he had lumbered all the way from the Quebec boundary to the head of Lake Superior. He spent nine winters in New Ontario during which he never wore a cap. "Talk about adventures" he said on one occasion, "Look here, no one has time to write them all down.

When he was about thirty, he was married to Minnie, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Sweet of Tudor Township who predeceased him some years ago. After his marriage, the late Mr. Lavender went into the bush about a mile from where he was born to hew out his own home.

It is noteworthy that when eighty-one years of age, he visited Glanmire, his native district, in the maple syrup season and working alone, tapped one hundred trees. One day he broke trail a mile long where snow was in some places three feet deep. He cut the wood for the boiling of the sap and obtained the finished product without any assistance. Until a few weeks ago, he followed the world events with closest interest, being an inveterate reader. He astounded all who knew him with his wonderful memory. Many will miss his cheery greeting and friendly attitude.

Mourning his passing are ten children: Nelson, Glanmire; Richard, Windsor; Charles and Joseph, Wellington; Manley and William, Marmora; Carl, Detroit, Mich; Mrs. Frank Davidson (Beatrice) Millbridge; Mrs. Albert Moore (Ida) of Windsor; and Mrs. Vie McPherson (Alma) Windsor. Also surviving are two sisters, Miss Mary Lavender Toronto and Mrs. Rebecca Brown, Millbridge.

The funeral took place on Thursday leaving the residence of his son William D. Lavender at 1.30 p.m. for service at St. Andrews United Church conducted by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher. The interment took place in Wellington Cemetery.

Ring Those Bells Calls For Muscle With Music Touch

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—(CP)—Take it from one of Canada's few professional carillonneurs, Robert Donnell, an hour at the keyboard of a carillon is equal to "a week's hard labor."

And he should know, for Donnell is the Dominion Carilloneour a job which takes him almost daily into a small room high up in the greystone Peace Tower on Parliament Hill to play the government carrillon.

"It's the little finger of each hand that gets it," smiled Donnell as he stretched a pair of bronzed arms across the desk of his little tower-top office to show his fingers, slightly over-size from years of pounding the keyboard.

Then he explained that to play his instrument—if a belfry of 53 bells, the heaviest weighing 22,400 pounds, can be called an instrument—the carillonneur punches with clenched fists at the keys. Wires stretch from the keys to clappers which sound the bells themselves.

"After you have played the carillon for an hour you feel as though you have done a week's hard labor," Donnell added. "You arm muscles begin to give way and you have to rest."

Varied Program

When Donnell plays, the liquid tones of the bells drift over the expansive lawns fronting the Parliament Buildings, carrying such varied airs as Elgar's "Pomp and Circumsance," Molloy's "The Kerry Dance" and Foster's "Jeannie with the Light Brown Hair." Tourists and cabinet minister, civil servants and soldiers, pause on the lawn benches to hear his music.

Youthful and sun-tanned, Donnell smilingly declines to state his age but admits to playing the carrillon for 15 years. In fact, he began while still in knee pants, when his first loves were the piano and the organ. He studied in Canada and in Europe.

Donnell was appointed carillonneur at the Cutten Memorial Carrillon in Guelph, Ont., in 1928, and gave his first recital in Ottawa at the Imperial Conference in 1932, as guest carrillonneur. He was appointed assistant to Percival Price, then Dominion Carillonneur, in 1936, and two years later obtained the diploma of the Breaardschool te Mechelen (Mechlin Carillon School) in Belgium "with distinction." He was appointed Dominion Carillonneur two years ago.

Wide Experience

Considered one of the finest carillonneurs on this continent, Donnell has given recitals on outstanding carillons in Holland, Belgium and North America. On Parliament Hill here, he plays most days of the year, except during February and March, when he arranges pieces for his instrument.

Donnell's bells, cast and tuned in the foundry of Gillett and Johnston, Croydon, England, were installed in the Peace Tower by authority of Parliament to commemorate the peace of 1918 and to keep in remembrance the service and sacrifice of Canadians who fought in the First Great War.

The 22,400-pound bell is pitched to E; the smallest, weighing only 10 pounds, is pitched to A, four and one-half octaves higher. The instrument is played from a wooden keyboard after the Flemish system.

The Dominion Carillon was first played July 1, 1927, in celebration of the 60th anniversary of Confederation.

Hint Increased Rations In Tea

OTTAWA, August 21 — (CP).—They qualified their statement with two or three wartime "ifs" but informed sources said Thursday increase in the tea ration of one ounce a week for each person over 12 years of age is something to which Canadians may look forward with a degree of optimism.

When the increase may come depends on the success of United Nations ships in traversing 8,000 miles of hazardous water from sources of supply in India and Ceylon, they said, but if supplies do reach Canada in some quantity the courage and skill of Allied merchant seamen will be reflected in more frequent—and stronger—tea.

It was understood that the one-ounce ration was a minimum, announced August 2 after consideration of the stocks on hand and the shipping situaiton. Had the ration not been set so low, stocks on hand would have been depleted rapidly without any certainty of their being replaced for a considerable time.

"It was considered best to set the ration low to spin out supplies in sight as equitably as possible and make upward adjustments later if new arrivals made this possible," one official said.

"The rationing of tea could not be accomplished without the rationing of coffee because the difficulty in obtaining the normal supplies of tea would have placed an intolerable burden on coffee stocks as buyers sought the more acceptable substitute.

"But while coffee has been obtained closer to home than the tea taken from India and Seylon, its procurement is not without difficulty and it does not follow that increases in the coffee ration are any more probable than those for tea."

Before the war, Canada imported about 42,000,000 pounds of tea a year and ships made the trip from the Orient in an average of six weeks. Now the voyage takes three or four months.

"If a ship carrying a tea cargo is lost 1,000,000 pounds of tea — enough for 16,000,000 weekly rations —disappears," an official said.

These Made Ten Spies Executed In Present War

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 21—(CP)—In the quiet darkness of London's blackout a turnkey tacked up on the gate to Wandsworth Prison two notices. They were death sentences, the penultimate chapter in the lives of two men who spied against an Empire at war.

And a few hours later, in the bright sunshine of a July morning, Wandsworth Prison gates bore four new notices. They were execution announcements and death certificates, the last words in twin tales of espionage.

Executed for treachery were Jose Estella Key, a British subject, and Alphonse Louise Eugene Timmerman, a Belgian. They brought up to 10 the number of spies executed since the Second Great War began. One was shot by a firing squad, the others hanged.

Small Audience

A soldier in a car and a solitary coalman were the only members of the public present when the two notice of execution were removed and the four others substituted. But in a Britain which has learned since the big bombing raids to treat death coldly, announcement of the double execution was big news. London's late evening papers gave it greater prominence than the big war news from Russia and Libya. Then Key and Timmerman were forgotten.

Key was born in Gibraltar, the scene of his spy activities. His function was to observe and record movements of British forces for the enemy. When arrested he was in possession of information ready for transmission to Germany. He was brought to Britain for trial.

Came as Refugee

Timmerman, born at Ostend, was unmarried, a ship's steward who before the war, had made frequent visits to British ports. In the autumn of 1941 he came to England posing as a refugee from Nazi-occupied territory in an attempt to gain information but he was detected before he had done any harm.

He admitted, eventually, that he had been sent to Britain after training by the German Secret Service, to find out secrets of naval and military importance. He brought secret writing material including crystals for making invisible ink and special stationery.

The public wasn't told the hour at which these men died. Their appeal having been dismissed, the notice of execution merely said: "The sentence of the law passed upon Alphonse Louis Eugene Timmerman and Jose Estella Key, found guilty of treachery, will be carried into execution at —— a.m. tomorrow."

Cut Radio Hours

HALIFAX, August 21 — (CP).—Curtailment of operating hours of radio station CHNS "in order to conserve power and equipment in the war interest" was announced today by William C. Borrett, station director.

A newspaper advertisment stated the daily schedule will be from 7.45 a.m., to 11.15 p.m., commencing on August 24, but "on ocasions of programs for national war effort only the schedule will be extended to cover them."

The station now operates from 7.30 a.m., to 12 midnight.

New Training Centre At Kingston For Canadian Women In C.W.A.C.

KINGSTON, Aug. 21—Canadian women are responding in large numbers to the urgent appeal of the Canadian Women's Army Corps for volunteers to enlist and relieve physically fit soldiers for other war duties.

Already the two training centres for C.W.A.C. recruits are Macdonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue, and Vermilion, Alberta; are being taxed to capacity and it has been necessary for military districts across Canada to extend training of volunteers in barracks available in various localities.

Captain Anita McBride, C.W.A.C. staff officer at Military District No. 3 Headquarters, here, reveals that fine types of girls are offering their services for the 40 different jobs which they will be able to take over from physically fit soldiers. These include clerical duties, cooking, driving, mechanics and skilled trades.

A C.W.A.C. Training Class has been established at Barrifield Camp, near here, in addition to other M.D. 3 Centres and is in charge of Captain Ethel English, of "E" Barracks. U.S. Marines Smash Gilbert Base

By WALTER B. CLAUSEN

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii, Aug. 22.—(AP)—United States Marines stood fast in their hard-won positions in the Solomon Islands today after wiping out a 700-man Japanese force which tried a stealthy night landing to pierce the American lines.

Other Marines and American Bluejackets, with Maj. James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son, one of their leaders, destroyed a Japanese seaplane base in an extension of the United States offensive to Makin Island, in the Gilbert group, 11,500 miles northeast of the American-held Solomons.

Communiques issued by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the United States Pacific fleet, told of the flareup of fighting in which the enemy was surprised and destroyed.

In first detailed accounts of the Solomon Island fighting, where the Marines with a navy covering force captured Japanese positions and sent the enemy fleeing into hills and jungles, Admiral Nimitz related the destruction of the Japanese force.

Mopping up operations, with daily skirmishes between marine patrols and enemy detachments, have been in progress since the initial Marine landings the night of Aug. 7, the communique said.

But last Wednesday night 700

Cause For Jitters

London, Aug. 22 (CP Cable)

GERMANS billeted in Paris got a bad case of jitters during the Dieppe raid, according to a secret radio station quoted by Reuters news agency.

"Germans were running around the corridors of the Hotel Majestic wearing battle-dress," the broadcast said. "Armed soldiers patrolled the streets everywhere. Five rich Parisians were seized as hostages. Women evacuated to Paris from Cologne were ordered to stay inside. When news of the British departure came the Germans changed their clothes, soused themselves with champagne and sang the victory song."

Indies Struggle Orchid For Dutch

By RELMAN MORIN.

ABOARD S.S. GRIPSHOLM, At Sea, August 22 — (AP). — The Netherlands tried hard.

They ran a losing race against time to prepare for war in the Pacific. When war came, they fought a losing fight against hopeless odds.

Nowhere in the Orient, through the swift-running months of 1941, was there so much consciousness of danger, so much desperate effort, so much determination, as in the Netherlands East Indies.

As the danger increased Hollanders returned to the Indies. An elderly Hollander resigned his position in Shanghai, and brought his wife and children to Batavia. He was well beyond military age. "If there is a Pacific War," I said, "you probably would be safer in Shanghai."

It was the woman who answered. "If there is war, I would rather have him die fighting here. We were both born here."

2nd Casualty List Adds 70 Names

OTTAWA, August 22. —(CP) — In the second casualty list issued since the battle of Dieppe 70 additional names were added today to those announced last night as among the killed, wounded and missing in the hectic fighting of the Canadian troops on the coast of France.

The Department of National Defence today confirmed the loss of two Lieutenant-Colonels—Lt.-Col. R. R. Labatt of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, missing, and Lt.-Col. G. H. McTavish of Toronto, Ont., commanding an engineer battalion, killed in action. Next of kin of these men previously had announced receipt of official notice from Ottawa that they were casualties.

The list included today reported 21 killed in action, three dangerously wounded, 30 wounded, one wounded and missing, nine missing believed drowned.

The total for the two lists, all apparently casualties arising from the Dieppe battle, now stands at 48 killed, 25 missing and 43 wounded.

Today's list brought to 839 the total number of army men officially reported dead and missing since the start of the war. That figure includes only a few of the men lost at Hong Kong since sufficient information has not been available yet to issue a complete casualty list for that operation.

Hamilton Toll High.

The City of Hamilton, represented in the Dieppe battle by the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry was more heavily represented in to-day's list— as it was last night —than any other centre. Six of the wounded and four of the killed were from Hamilton. The home addresses of other men listed were scattered over the country.

Today's lists contained 71 names but one was an entry for a man listed among the first Dieppe casualties made public last night.

A third list of Dieppe casualties is expected to be issued sometime late today.

Camerons Kill Scores, Spike Battery

By ROSS MUNRO

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22—(CP Cable).—The Canadian attack on Dieppe was carried farthest inland by the lion-hearted Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, who fought their way 3½ miles up the Scie River valley with unsurpassed bravery, halting at a point almost due south of Pourville.

In the face of heavy German fire they landed at 5.35 a.m. and fought with courageous determination and ringing heroism until they withdrew about 11 a.m. They preserved good order and splendid discipline right to the last.

Maj. Robert Thompson of Winnipeg, one of those who came back, said the withdrawal was the bravest action he ever saw. Now acting second in command, this veteran of the last war went through the first battle of Ypres and Loos.

"I never saw anything like it for bravery all through the last war," the officer said. "Our boys were simply magnificent."

Ahead of the Camerons the South Saskatchewan Regiment had established a bridgehead at 5 a.m. and occupied the town of Pourville. The Camerons came in under shellfire and landed under fairly heavy fire on the left side of the beach.

Wipe Out Scores

Then they started to attack inland, moving south through the South Saskatchewan troops who were holding a perimeter there. A large number of Camerons went up the right bank of the Scie River, smashing into pockets of enemy resistance and killing scores of Germans.

Another group of Camerons struck up the left bank on the river and a third section joined the South Saskatchewan forces southwest of Pourville. They remained with them throughout a strong attack by a German battalion, which they held off.

The Germans harried the Camerons with mortar and artillery fire from a mile or so away but the Win-

No Signs Of U.S. Action In India

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(CP). —There is no indication in Washington that the United States Government wil respond to various appeals by America and British Liberal groups and attempt to settle the complex constitutional status of India.

State Secretary Cordel Hull this week was vague and non-committal when asked if he was prepared to step in between the British and Indian points of view in an effort to reach an amicable settlement. And the prevailing opinion among observers in Washington is that President Roosevelt wants no part of India's troubles parked on his White House doorstep at this time of crisis in the war.

It is becoming increasingly clear that Indian political leaders, when they turned down the Cripps formula of Dominion status after the war, alienated a large section of American public opinion which for years had been pro-India in India's long fight for independence and political freedom. Similarly, when Mohandas K. Gandhi and his fellow-leaders of India's Congress

Red Counters Cheat Hun On Don Bend

MOSCOW, Aug. 22—(AP).—Red army men drove back the German in the Ketskaya area of the Don Bend northwest of Stalingrad by a surprise attack last night, while the Germans generally maintained the initiative in other southern theatres, the Russians said to-day.

Close-quarter fighting developed from the Soviet thrust and the Nazi survivors were reported to have left on the battlefield 200 dead, two field guns, eight machine guns, 13 munitions truck, and a radio station.

This relatively-limited and a report that Russian detachments, forced ever deeper into the Central Caucasus, had pinched off and wiped out German vanguards in the hills southeast of Pyatigorsck were balanced by announcement of sustained Nazi attacks southeast of Kletsaya, northeast of Kotelnikovski and southeast of Krasnodar.

Several small German forces, mostly of automatic riflemen, which crossed the Don at its curve southwest of Kletskaya in an attempt to establish a bridgehead only about 40 miles from Stalingrad, were declared by Moscow newspapers to be suffering heavy punishment. A machine-gun ambush accounted for about 60 of the riflemen, it was announced.

Cleaning Them Out

Soviet troops were said to be cutting down a German infantry colulm near Stalingrad.

The mid-day communique reported the invaders had lost heavily in that sector—centred along a 95-mile railway line from Kotelnikovski—and were throwing in reserves.

Steel Men Wait Premier's Word

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Aug. 22—(CP)—Steel workers in Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney, N.S., today awaited a reply from Prime Minister Mackenzie King to an appeal that he intervene in their wage disputes to avoid "an imminent stoppage in the steel industry."

The letter to the Prime Minister, mailed yesterday, was made public today by C. H. Millard, National Director of the U.S.W.A. who has been delegated by both Sault and Sydney Unions to handle their demands for a basic wage rate of 55 cents an hour in the Algoma Steel Corporation plant here and the Dominion Steel Company's plant at Sydney.

Mr. Millard's letter said that the "labor policy of your government, the rules, regulations, restrictions embodied in the various orders-in-council and the repressive use made of them by your administrators and all too many employers have engendered in workers a lack of faith in these they ought to be able to look to for justice, and brought their patience to the point of exhaustion.

Dieppe Real Test Of Hun Defences

Written for The Canadian Press

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

LONDON, Aug. 21—(CP Cable)—The Dieppe raid was the largest and longest of any such assaults to date and afforded a real test of German defensive measures and the possibilities of carrying out landing operations in daylight.

The purpose of the raid seemed to be directed much more toward gaining experience than inflicting damage, which often is promptly repaired. It is premature to draw too many deductions, but some points already stand out.

The raid entailed two difficult operations: Landing and re-embarkation, and this second operation normally is both the more difficult and the more costly.

This should not be forgotten in counting the cost of the raid.

It has been made evident that the beach defences set up by the Germans and not invulnerable and, in fact, one landing party after being repulsed carried out its task in LONDON—(CP Cable). — The Paris radio said yesterday that officers and men of the United Nations forces which attacked Dieppe on Wednesday have been buried with full military honors.

CHICAGO—(AP).—A.F.L. truck drivers in six midwestern states went on strike yesterday in a dispute over wage differentials, Robert Appel, secretary of the Central States Employers' Conference Committee, said last night. Appel said the strike was called "in defiance of the War Labor Board." He said the W.L.B. had set August 31 for a hearing on the issue.

TORONTO—(CP)—Brig. W. W. Southam of Toronto, one of the officers commanding the Canadian troops taking part in the big raid on Dieppe, is reported missing as a result of the action, according to word received from Ottawa by his family today.

CAIRO — (AP). — Despite dust storms which prevented widespread aerial operations over the Egyptian front, R.A.F. fighter-bombers successfully attacked Axis vehicles and troop concentrations yesterday, and downing two Axis planes, a British communique said today. Land activity, however, was confined to artillery exchanges in the northern and central sectors and to night patrol skirmishes the bulletin declared.

Japs Slip Heavily On China Fronts

By GLENN BABB

Associated Press Staff Writer

The five-year-old war in China recently has undergone a startling change. Three months ago the Japanese opened a campaign that some feared might knock China out of the war. Six weeks ago most of East-Central China seemed to be falling into their hands. But today a large part of their gains has been cancelled.

On other China fronts they have been stalemated for weeks. Their proudly-announced plan to establish an all-rail connection between Shanghai and Singapore definitely is on the shelf.

It still is too early to say whether this is the result primarily of reinvigorated Chinese striking power or of change in the Japanese army's plans. In either case, however, evidence points to the early opening of a new phase of the Pacific war, taking the form either of a bold new Japanese stroke or of the passing of the initiative in China from Japanese hands.

In mid-May the Japanese, using perhaps 200,000 men, began co-ordinated attacks southwestward from Hangchow, in Chekiang province, and southeastward from Hang-

Fusiliers' Deeds At Dieppe Soon Fill Gaps In Ranks

By WILLIAM STEWART

Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22—(CP Cable).—For every member of Les Fusiliers Mont Royal who crumpled under Nazi fire at Dieppe another man will step up to take his place.

That promise is already on its way to fulfilment as reinforcements poured into a French-Canadian camp somewhere in England from which many a Canadian is missing.

A large number arrived before those who survived the battle on the French beach started on a well-merited leave. Newcomers who had been awaiting the opportunity to get down to training for a fighting role marched in to hear tales of exemplary conduct of those they will replace—men who became heroes under the Dieppe hailstorm that was Nazi handiwork at its wickedest.

None need tell the newcomers that the conduct of the French-Canadians at Dieppe will rank as high as that of Quebec fighting men of the First Great War, such as those of the storied "Vingt-Deuxieme."

The example for all this war's French-Canadian troops was set by Fusiliers of all ranks, from an officer who moved along the beach from one fallen figure to another to see if any still could heed his last order -the word to withdraw— to the little French-speaking Negro who pulled many a wounded man to the boats which finally took them away.

That officer was not among those who came back. When last seen he was fully exposed to the chattering

ROME—(AP)—. The Italian high command claimed today that German fighter planes, escorting an Axis convoy in the Mediterranean, shot down four attacking British planes. Two Italian planes were lost in bombing operations against Malta, the communique said.

BERLIN — (AP). — The German nigh command claimed to-day that German and Rumanian troops have captured Krymaskaya and Kurtahanskaya, towns in thet lower Kuban River Valley while other Axis forces have dislodged the Russians from fortified mountain positions in the Caucasus. Weather conditions and terrain were described as extremely difficult.

Sea, Air Battle Raid On Convoy

LISBON, Portugal, Aug. 22—(AP) — A fierce naval and air battle yesterday off Cape Saint Vincent, the southwest tip of Portugal, 200 miles northwest of British Gibraltar, apparently was an attack on a British convoy, it was reported late last night.

A British Sunderland bomber fell into the Atlantic off Sagres. Two Portuguese seaplanes flew out to rescue the survivors but reported that the bomber already had been taken in tow by a British warship in the convoy

There were no further reports late Friday night.

Presumably it was an engagement between German long-range bombers operating from France, and British ships travelling the Gibraltar sea route, but no particulars were given. Such clashes have been frequent.

A Reuters dispatch quoted the Vichy radio as saying that a British cruiser and four destroyers had left Gibraltar, travelling northwestward toward the Portuguese tip.

Miles from their station on a pitch-black night, with one of their Beaufighter engines on fire and the other dead, they decided to crash land. The heavy machine smacked into a pole, ripped through a hedge and burst into flames as it came to a stop.

The pair didn't jump out a second too soon. The ammunition started exploding and for more than an hour a barrage of machine-gun bullets and cannon shells kept them at a resceptable distance while the plant burned to ashes.

Neither Devlin nor Tennant was injured.

Delve Into Wood, Charcoal As Substitutes For Gasoline

OTTAWA, Aug. 22—(CP). — A bank of scientific knowledge, to be drawn on should gasoline supplies become even more scant, is being built up by Canadian scientists studying substitute fuels.

The detailed examination of wood and charcoal as fuel for vehicles, prepared by R. Ruedy, of the Research Council's research plans and publications section, showed the limitations of such substitutes for gasoline, based on widespread experience in their use in other lands.

The substitute fuels are used with producer gas units, which, attached to motor vehicles, manufacture gas. The gas is transmitted to the cylinders and acts as a propulsive force like gasoline, but with some reduction in power. Officials said that producer gas appeared to be one of the most likely substitutes should an emergency develop. Producer gas units now are being manufactured in Quebec, where vehicles using this equipment had been in operation for some years.

"That producer gas can help in an emergency, and prevent a disruption in the transportation system in a country with no oil but abundant reserves of wood and iron, has been proved by the example of Sweden," said the council publication. In Sweden, vehicles driven by producer gas from wood or charcoal serve "the delivery man as well as the King."

Allies Lose First Bomber In Dozen Blows At Timor

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS Australia, August 22 — (CP) — Allied bombers struck their second successive blow yesterday at the Japanese-occupied village of Maobisse Portuguese Timor, and a Royal Australian Air Force spokesman said "they finished off what remained after the Thursday attack."

A Japanese Zero fighter, one of three which rose to challenge the raiders, was shot down into the sea. One Allied plane was lost, the first to fall in more than a dozen successive attacks against Timor military bases and shipping.

Activity in the north-eastern sector (New Guinea and New Britain) was reported limited to reconnaissance.

One Australian Hudson bomber escaped from the raid after a thrilling "hide-and-seek battle in the gorges of the mountains," a BBC correspondent William Meriot, said in another broadcast from Australia.

Speeding at tree-top level the Hudson once evaded three pursuing Zeros by aiming at one gorge and diving into another at the last minute. But the gorges converged and the bomber met up with its pursuers again.

The battle continued over the sea at so low a level that one of the Zeros crashed when its wing dipped into the waves Meriot said.

SOUTH SASKATCHEWANS GIVE HUNS A MAULING AT POURVILLE

Batter Back Whole Battalion

Clean Out Pourville Hold Off Whole Battalion

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22—(CP Cable).—Led by a gallant young colonel who flouted danger and inspired every one in his formation, units of the South Saskatchewan Regiment were the most successful of the Canadian groups which raided the German stronghold at Dieppe.

The Westerners made a dawn landing of Pourville last Wednesday, two miles west of Dieppe, attacked their objective, captured a number of prisoners, and one company with some of the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg held of a German battalion during the re-embarkation.

Several times in the heat of action he personally led detachments of three or four men to destroy machine-gun posts that were holding up the show.

Under his direction his men pushed inland more than a mile and hunted down Germans all over the Pourville area.

When the detachments re-embarked at 11 a.m., he stood by the seawall as the Nazis on the headland peppered the beach with lead and quietly maved his men through to the boats.

Oiling Machine Burns, Driver Escapes

PORT HOPE, Aug. 22—(ENS)—At 7.45 on Friday night the Port Hope firemen received a call to Bedford street where the municipal oiling and spraying company machine while coming down Bedford street hill at the finish of the days' work caught on fire when the exhaust in the big motor back-fired.

The driver, Ed Lair jumped free of the cab allowing the truck to proceed down the hill unguided and it came to a standstill against a tree almost completely demolishing the oiling machine.

Mr. Bellamy, foreman of the Municipal Oiling and Spraying Company of Toronto did not feel that damages could as yet be estimated. David Dufferin also of Toronto who was in the cab escaped with only slight burns. This machine is hired by the Port Hope Town Council to do the town oiling once a year.

AUSTRALIA'S BARLEY

Australia's carry over of barley at the end of the year will be 8,500,000 bushels and growers are being told to restrict their acreages.

BOOTS FOR BUDDIES

The U.S. army stocks 142 different sizes of shoes.

Another historical back-to-the-wall stand may be in the making behind the towering 1,000-mile barrier of mountains that separates Trans-Caucasia from the fertile steppes of the Northern Caucasus.

The problem of supplies is the key to all defensive citadels. Leningrad almost fell for lack of material, food and fighting men when her supply lines were cut. Sevastopol did fall, so did Bataan, Malaya, Burma.

Trans-Caucasia will be more difficult to cut off. More oil than the defenders ever could use for themselves gushes from Baku's wells into trans-isthmus pipelines. The Caucasus produces between 70 and 80 per cent. of all Russia's oil. About 55 per cent. of the Caucasian oil comes from Trans-Caucasia.

Development of industries in the Caucasus is not believed to have progressed sufficiently to make that agricultural section even remotely self sufficient in tanks, guns, munitions and planes. Accumulated stores are highly expendable in modern warfare.

But the supplies that came up across Iran and Iraq when the front was at Kiev, then at Kharkov and then Rostov, can still reach the armies behind the mountains.

By Caspian freighter from Turkmen Soviet Republic, food can join the steady flow of material across the sea from Bandar Shaw on the Iranian coast, or overland from Tabriz.

Across the sea from Baku is Krasnovodsk, terminal of a railroad that winds northeast into Asiatic Russia, possible source of fresh reserves from the Siberian armies.

The Allied offensive in the Solomon Islands may compel Japan to postpone the long predicted attack on Siberia, thus freeing new troops for the Caucasian front.

Up the Caspian Sea from Baku and Makhach Kala, Caucasian oil and grains normally flow to Astrakhan and Gurev and on up the Volga and Ural Rivers and the Gurev railroad to industrial centres.

These routes may soon be exposed to Nazi dive bombers based on Caucasian steppes but if they can be kept open, oil for the northern armies might well be traded for material for the besieged southern armies.

Without the north-south Caspian lines, Trans Caucasia's defenders will still be on the receiving end of major supply lines by air, land and water from Britain and the United States. These lines across and around Africa are dependent on another front in Egypt.

Fusiliers' Deeds

German machine-guns as he bent over his prone soldiers.

At one post another was asking his men if they knew the fight was over and they could start back for England, their duty done. The men who did get back thought he finally fell.

The dusky little fellow who when his wireless set was shot to pieces busied himself saving lives was Pte. Jean Napoleon Maurice, 21-year-old Montrealer whose father went to Canada from Marseille.

Among the wounded Maurice helped get aboard boats at re-embarkation were two members of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry and two Essex Scottish. He didn't know their names.

The dark youngster didn't speak of these deeds himself. Others who watched him in admiration told the story.

All Maurice had to say was this: "The Fusiliers were good. What they went through is unbelievable. They were real good. I saw a corporal trying to set up his mortar directly under Jerry's machine-guns. He didn't have a chance. He got it fast but even as he went to his knees he kept trying to get that mortar in place and open up on the cliffs where the Germans were established. He just wasn't able.

Tough Pte. Pierre Dubuc of Montreal explained in a few words how he and 11 other Fusiliers penetrated the thickness of German defences to stage a raid deep into the town itself.

So They Went In

"Our orders told us to go into the town—we went," he said simply.

On the way into the town the little party had to get by one pillbox after another stuffed with Germans. They knocked them out as they went with their grenades.

Cpl. Robert Berube of Laval des Rapides, Que., trapped in the midst of a hail of death, just sprawled on the beach hour after hour, playing dead until re-embarkation.

"But I managed to smoke," he grinned.

Pte. Raymond Bellaire, 22, of Nominingue, Que., whose 20-year-old brother, Pte. Leo Bellaire, got back although wounded, said he crossed the beach but couldn't get beyond a wall beneath Dieppe's promenade. The blond soldier flattened himself against the wall with machine-gun bullets whistling by his head.

He was joined there by other Canadians. They remained huddled until boats approached the beach to take them off. When they dashed to the water's edge many of them were mowed down.

"You know," said Bellaire, "when we were behind that wall and didn't know if we'd ever come out alive, one of the boys kept telling jokes and we couldn't help laughing."

Pte. Gerard Provencal, a veteran of the regiment at 20, who served in the non-permanent Fusiliers for three years before the war, was wounded for a second time in this war at Dieppe. Months ago he was injured in the London bombings and was slightly cut by mortar-bomb splinters during the raid.

chow, in Chekiang province, and southeastward from Nanchang, in Kiangsi, driving from either end of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway. The avowed objectives were to seize all the railway and take half a dozen cities which the Japanese believed to be sites of airbases from which their home islands could be bombed. By the end of June these things had been accomplished.

But now much of the Japanese success has been undone. The famous rubber-band defence of the Chinese armies has operated with the remarkable snapback. The mid-section of the railway again is in Chinese hands and today's reports indicate that some 75 miles has been cleared of the invaders. At the same time the Chinese are threatening several of those bitterly-contested airbase towns, any one of which might be a Shangri La for a repetition of Gen. Doolittle's Tokyo raid. These include Yushan in Kiangsi and Chuhsien, Lishui and Kinhwa in Chekiang.

Even while their communiques record the resurgence of their forces, Chungking military authorities have their fingers crossed. They keep in view the possibility that the Japanese are fighting merely rearguard actions while taking out the best of their assault troops for use elsewhere, perhaps Siberia, perhaps far southern China. There have been interesting shifts of Japanese forces recently in French Indo-China and the Chinese are preparing to meet a possible assault on their southern border, perhaps on Kwangsi province. The Japanese have had little luck in their southern campaigns against China this year and may be looking for a new field of operations.

The prospect of a Japanese attack on Russia remains an ever-present danger, one that might alter the whole strategical position of the United Nations. All reports agree that Japan's Manchurian army is ready and eager to go. But the most favorable time for such a blow would be right now and every day that passes seems to make it more unlikely, at least for this year.

The other possibility, that the Chinese really hold the initiative in Chekiang-Kiangsi suggests changes in the China war no less dramatic than those which would follow an attack on Siberia. Some things support the hope that this may be the case. Certainly the coming of American air forces has greatly altered China's military spirit and hopes. Gen. Chennault's squadrons—still far too small for the job there is to do—have freed Chungking of raids for the first time in four summers and given the Chinese ground forces such support that there is no doubt there is a new ferocity and aggressiveness in the attacks that have driven the enemy from his Kiangsi gains.

Camerons Kill

nipeggers never stopped their forward push until they reached a bridge spanning the Scie 3½ miles from the coast.

Their advance was blocked at this point by a heavy concentration of German guns and after a lengthy action they withdrew for the general re-embarkation.

Nip One Battery.

At one point the Camerons met a German field battery moving along a road preparing to go into action. The guns were drawn by horses and the Camerons "beat up" the battery.

Maj. A. T. Law of Winnipeg was acting commanding officer ashore and he returned to England. Another major who went through the battle and returned was Norman Ross, another Winnipegger.

There were scores of individual acts of heroism but one man all the Camerons are talking about is Pte. Alex Huppe of Winnipeg. He went with the forces pushing inland and re-embarked safely after doing a superb sniping job with his rifle all the way.

An officer said "Huppe was like a kid on the midway shooting up targets with a .22."

He hid behind trees—behind anything that would conceal him—and picked off the helmeted grey forms trying to halt the advancing Canadians. He prowled around as stealthily as an Indian ad accounted for a number of German infantrymen.

"All the Germans we could see were bumped off with pleasure," he said.

The Camerons lavished their praise, too, on the Regimental Padre, Capt. J. P. Brown of Winnipeg and Dauphin, Man., who went ashore as a medical sergeant in a regimental aid post. In the heat of action he worked on the wounded and carried stretchers for hours on end through German machine-gun fire.

Capt. Ben Brackman of Regina, a medical officer, also was highly praised for his excellent work on the injured.

Cpl. Freddy Sutherland, Captain of the Canadian hockey team which won the Canadian Army Championship last winter, summed up the bravery of his mates with the assertion: "I never saw anyone back down anywhere."

Almost In Trap Once.

The Camerons didn't seem to have any nerves at all. They just kept plowing ahead and lowing ahead. At one point 30 men under Capt. E. P. Thompson of Winnipeg were cut off by machine-gun fire three miles from the coast and without faltering battled their way out of the trap and ran the gauntlet of German fir. back to the coast.

The heroism of the Camerons was so outstanding that Lieut. E. D. McManus of Winnipeg who was with the forces going up the left bank of the river, said "You can hardly pick out any individual who did any better than any other."

"Every man was a superb soldier all the way. There was never the slightest indication of fear."

The first man of the Camerons to kill a German was Pte. A. E. Buchanan of Winnipeg, who saw a Nazi in an orchard by the beach and brought him down in short order.

CSM. Charlie McLellan of Winnipeg was with a company that probably saw more action than any other. A veteran of the last war, when he served in the Seaforths and Argylls of the British army, he spoke words of encouragement to his men and was an outstanding example of coolness under fire, especially on the beach, where the going was particularly tough.

Dieppe Real Test

the end. That is a vital point in assessing the character of the Nazi defences and defenders.

The fact that the landing went according to schedule and without such delays as occurred in gaining footholds on the beaches of Gallipoli is an indication that the enemy's main reserves, faced by such threats, have little time to come into action and this is the probable reason why the Germans apparently relied mainly on local counter-attacks by local reserves.

Landing tanks provide a rapid means of gaining ground and dealing with the first counter-attack. Actual tank losses sustained probably were due mainly to the necessity of withdrawing. Valuable information regarding the layout of anti-tank defences, however, must have been gained.

The effectiveness of the Allied air umbrella was proved and it tested the strength of the German air defence thoroughly. It has been recognized that the Germans never had revealed the strength of these air defences in dealing with R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. fighter sweeps. Now, however, they have been compelled to show their hand and the results of the counter-measures they took could afford little satisfaction to the Axis, especially since, had the operation been prolonged much further, the disparity in strength would have become more markedly in the Allied favor.

It is also evident that the reserve German land forces would not have had time to come into action and their commanders will be left in doubt now as to whether these reserves are sufficient to prevent a footing being gained to an extent which would facilitate the rapid reinforcements of the first wave of the invasion especially by armor. The Germans must realize also that if a landing can be effected at one point they must face the probability of an attack developing at others; a factor affecting the strength and disposition of their main reserves.

There can be little doubt that this raid will do much to shake German confidence. It certainly left no doubt about the high standard of training of the Allied forces employed and of the efficiency of the staff work and equipment of all three services.

It must not be forgotten, however, that while we may have learned much the Germans also may have gained experience. The raid may be considered a full-dress rehearsal of one scene in the first act of the invasion drama, but it must be remembered that there will be other scenes and acts to follow.

Indies Struggle

Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, later to become Commander-in-Chief of the Aarmy, had been showing me maps and statistics, the whole defence picture. "I hope they don't come now. We need another year, at least."

The General got only a few months. December 8, 1941, the Indies' fighting forces were far from ready. Yet, without hesitation, they fought.

Lacked The Material.

The problem of the Indies was the problem of all the democracies—material. Defence began too late.

Then the Second Great War, and on May 10, 1940, the German army surged into Holland. Within 10 days, Holland was over-run.

Within a month, the Axis menace was on their northern horizon. (When France and Holland fell, Japan immediately pressed demands in French Indo-China and the Netherlands Indies. The French gave in; the Netherlands did not.)

The East Indies fleet built around three cruisers, was barely a good scouting force. The army mustered 100,000 men at most, counting native regiments. In the air force, there were about 500 planes, only half of them first-line.

Purchasing commissions scurried to the United States, offering any price for planes, tanks, guns. Necessarily, British needs took priority.

Meanwhile, shrewd, stubborn Dr. Hubertus Van Mook, head of the Department of Economics in Batavia, was stilling off the Japanese. He told me, "They don't want to talk busness. They want to own us."

His problem was to evade Japanese demands, without bringing the crisis to a head. From January through June, 1941, he stalled. Finally, the Japanese went home, virtually empty-handed.

Six months had been gained.

Even when the war came, it may not have been too late to make a deal with Japan. The Indies might have done what French Indo-China did. Instead, they fought, instantly, unhesitatingly.

Jacob's Vision Of God

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL.

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 23 is Genesis 27, 28, the Golden Text being Gen. 28::15, "I am with thee and will keep thee whithersoever thou goes.")

ISSAC AND Rebekah had twin sons, you remember, Esau, the one who was born first, and Jacob. To Esau as the elder would come to most of the father's wealth. If you read the fifty-fifth chapter of Genesis you will find that Esau, who was a hairy man and a great hunter, once came home very hungry, and found Jacob making pottage. Esau asked to be given some, for he was so hungry and tired he felt he might die if he was not fed at once. Jacob, however, took advantage of his brother's hunger an dtold him he would not give to eat unless Esau sold to him his birthright.

To Esau his hunger and need seeemed more important just then than his rightful inheritance, so he agreed. "Thus," says the writer of Genesis, "Esau despised his birthright." There was dissension in that home, for the father, Isaac, loved Esau his older son best, and Rebekah loved Jacob. That created a bad situation, as it does today, and the two brothers were evidently not the best of friends.

When Isaac was an old man and nearly blind, he told Esau to go and get some venison, cook it as Isaac liked it, and bring it to him and he would give him his blessing. Now Rebekah was listening, and when Esau went on his errand she called Jacop and told him to bring her two goat kids. He did so and she prepared them for eating and told Jacob to take them to his father and get Isaac's blessing instead of Esau. At first Jacob didn't want to do this wicked thing, and he said he couldn't anyhow, as his father would recognize him by the feel of his smooth skin where Esau was covered with hairs. But his crafty mother said she would take care of that, and she took the hairy skin of the kid and wrapper it around Jacob's arms and neck, dressed him in Esau's clothing, and sent him in to his father.

Isaac Blesses Jacob.

Isaac couldn't see his son, but he felt his arms and when his father asked how he could have brought the meat so quickly Jacob lied again and said the Lord had brought it to him. So the father could not doubt, although he said the voice is Jacob's, but the hands and neck are Esau's. So he gave Jacob the blessing, bestowing upon him the greater part of his riches, servants and herds, and the rule over all the household.

Shortly after this Esau came with his meat dressed as his father liked it, and when he found how Jacob had treated him he was tragic in his grief. He "lifted up his voice and wept," and said, "Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father."

Poor Isaac did the best he could and promised that Esau should be indeed subject to Jacob, but that eventually he would be independent. Naturally, after that Esau hated Jacob and threatened to kill him. So his mother, Rebekah, who had planned the hateful deed, sent Jacob away for safety to her people, to Laban, Rebekah's brother. So you see Rebekah did not reap happiness from her wickedness any more than we would if we did a similar thing, for she lost the companionship of the son she loved.

Jacob started his journey, and when he had gone some distance and night had come, he, being weary and lonely, piled rocks one upon the other for a pillow, and laid down to sleep. While he was sleeping he, had a wonderful dream in which he saw a ladder whose bottom touched the ground and whose top reached to heaven. Up and down this ladder went angels, and the Lord was at the top. Jacob woke up and was frightened, and said, "Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not."

Early that morning Jacob rose up and took the stones he had used for a pillow and built an altar, and he called the name of the place Bethel. And Jacob vowed, saying, "If God be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God: And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that Thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto Thee."

Even now he would make a bargain with the Lord, you see, but possibly he was sorry for his sins, and the Lord must have seen that under his faults he was a good man, and worthy of His blessing and protection.

War Prisoners Treated Like Guests In Canada

Canada's scrupulous observance of the terms of the Geneva Convention, governing treatment of enemy prisoners of war, is having repercussions probably undreamt of by those who were responsible for the measure.

Not that these repercussions can or will have any effect until the end of the war, if then, but it is apparent to anyone observing a large percentage of German prisoners now held in this country, that they are losing the strong Nazi ideals they once held.

This is not particularly noticeable among the commissioned ranks but with the rank and file, includ- N.C.O.'s, prisoners are often heard to express the opinion that Canada is not such a bad country and that the treatment they receive here could ont be bettered.

Are Well Treated.

It is true that these enemies of the State are well treated and it is also true that one of them at an Ontario prisoner camp was heard to remark that "we get more food that is real food, in a day here than we used to get in a week in Germany."

Criticism has been heard as to the apparent leniency with which Germans captured in various theatres of war and confined to Canada have been treated. There is no gainsaying the fact that they fare as well as soldiers in the Canadian Army, but, and this thought is drilled into the guards at the various camps, the Axis powers hold many thousands of Allied prisoners and any untoward treatment of a prisoner or violation of the Geneva Convention is apt to have serious results to those Allied subjects.

Ration for ration the German and Italian prisoners in the widely scattered internment camps in the Dominion, have the same food as the men serving in the Canadian Army. They are, in fact, more at liberty than the Canadian soldier except for being behind barbed-wire. And this in some cases, has not sufficed to hold them in, although the number of escapes has been exceptionally small considering the number of enemies imprisoned here.

Mention of rations and food brings the question of preparation of the meals. The complete kitchen staffs for prisoners are supplied by themselves, and their meals, as served to officers and men, are as good as could be purchased outside. In fact many times the guards would change their meals for those of their prisoners.

At an officers' camp, the commissioned ranks have their batmen, the same as on service, and these do the common labor around the dormitories, etc. while the officers themselves cultivate small flower and vegetable gardens or lounge in deck chairs getting the benefit of the Canadian sunshine. Many of them are as tanned as the Indians in Northern Ontario.

They are not overcrowded in the buildings where they sleep, but have the same type of bed and bedding that the Canadian soldier has. With special permission they may purchase certain articles by mail from the big mail order houses, and by this means they have been able to make themselves more comfortable than might be expected.

Are Fluent Linguists.

Many of them are studying English and a large number speak the language fluently. That they are interested in world affairs is evidenced by the type of books they buy, many of them dealing with economics, particularly with reference to United States, Canada, Australia, and Latin America. One request recently made was that they be allowed to purchase "How Green Was

Insofar as medical and dental attention is concerned they fare exactly same as the guards, each camp having not only competent medical and dental officers attached, but a fully equipped hospital and staff. Should their ailments be such as can not be treated satisfactorily in camp, then they are sent under escort to a regular military hospital such as Chorley Park, in Toronto. Those suffering from advanced tuberculosis are sent to sanitariums.

They have their amusements. At one officers' camp in Ontario they have an outdoor swimming pool, at another a section of a lake has been wired off giving them a beach and bathing spot. At still another, this one for men of the ranks, "swim" parties of several score are taken out under escort twice daily.

At none of the officers' camps is there compulsory labor, but in the camps for other ranks working parties are taken out under escorts where needed. At one camp a large party works daily on Government roads. These working parties are paid, each man being allowed 20 cents a day in credit, over and above the pay of their rank.

May Purchase Beer.

In this connection prisoners are not allowed any cash at all, but in every camp a special accounting staff is maintained under the paymaster and every penny a prisoner has earned either by his service in the army or at labor is credited to him in a ledger in the most approved style. The camps have prisoners' canteens at which they may purchase necessities or luxuries within the bounds permitted by the Commissioner of Internment Operations. In the last few months they have been allowed to purchase beer for one hour a day, this having become effective about July 1. They are not allowed radio, but have gramophones and musical instruments, some of the camps boasting exceptionally fine orchestras. Some of these canteens have credit balances of thousands of dollars which are the property of the prisoners.

They are not harshly treated nor subjected to any indignities other than being searched entering and leaving the camp compounds. It is against camp standing orders for a guard to use profane language in their presence. Nor can force be used except in case of emergency or necessity. Breaking of camp rules by prisoners is followed by an appearance before the camp commandant who is limited in the matter of disciplining of the prisoners.

Allowed Promotions.

Promotions granted them in their own forces go on automatically the Canadian authorities being notified through the protecting power, which is Switzerland, that such promotions have been made. A ranker, being appointed to commissioned rank, is immediately transferred to an officers' camp.

They are also permitted to marry by proxy and in a number of cases this has been done.

Many of them, particularly the younger men, have expressed the opinion that once this war has ended, the will return and settle in Canada. In that might be seen an indication that they are beginning to see the handwriting on the wall for Nazism.

Fiery Temper of Nazarenes Shown In Life of Christ

By REV. E. R. JAMES

JESUS SAID, I AM COME TO SEND FIRE ON THE EARTH. St. Luke 12, 49.

Hurriedly you pass over these words. You hate to think of Christ sending fire on the earth. From childhood you thought of Him as the Gentle One, full of compassion. You remember His own appeal: "Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart."

Do not forget that He lived in Nazareth in the Province of Galilee. The men of that country were hot-blooded, fiery-tempered. Two of His own Apostles he named "Boanerges," sons of thunder, their fiery dispositions giving point to the name. Once they asked Him to send down fire from Heaven to consume the Samaritans who refused to receive Him. He rebuked them with the startling comment: "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of."

Origen, one of the great Fathers of the primitive Church, has reported this saying of the Lord, not recorded in the Gospels but bearing the hall marks of truth: "He that is near Me is near the fire; he that is far from Me is far from the Kingdom." A deeply provocative thought reminding us that there is another and equally important side to the Divine-human character of the Lord Christ.

You remember His fiery anger when He drove the money changers out of the Temple. They could not face the wrath of His eyes. "His eye is as a flame of fire." His own Apostles remembered that it is written of Him: "The zeal of thine House hath eaten Me up."

Again in a synagogue He is surrounded by a group of deeply religious people listening to His teaching. Their hearts are full of bitterness and hatred towards the new Teacher Who is upsetting their traditional ideas. You will find no more burning words falling from the lips of the gentle Jesus than in the 23rd chapter of St. Matthew, a Gospel written especially for Jews. He speaks to heads of colleges, doctors of divinity, and high ecclesiastics. Can you find anything more terrible than these closing words: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, now can ye escape the damnation of hell?" (23; 33.) Are you surprised that they crucified Him?

It is a side of Christ's character many forget. We have over-emphasized the kindness and gentleness of Christ. God revealed Himself to Moses in the bush on fire, yet not being consumed. A divine symbol of God's nature.

Moreover the birthday of the Christian Church was emphasized by the descent of the Holy Ghost in fiery tongues resting upon each of the disciples. The Gospel, the Good News was to spread through the fiery zeal of men whose hearts and minds were on fire.

Jeremiah, a man of shy and reserved temperament is promised this inward fire: "Behold, I will make My word in thy mouth fire." Such a fire in a man's heart means that he will speak with a quiet intensive conviction bringing home the truth to sensitive hearts. It does not mean stimulated emotion by the clever practice of mob psychology very popular to-day. You cannot imagine St. Paul or St. John aproving of such stimulus.

Are you so complacent in your religious life that when you see injustice and wrong you will pass by on the other side entirely unmoved, because you are the follower of the "Gentle Jesus"? If so you are not following in His steps. Perhaps in that great day of judgment you also will flee from the "Wrath of the Lamb" hearing the awful condemnation: "Inasmuch as ye did not BURN ye are far from the KINGDOM."

He THAT HATH EARS TO HEAR LET HIM HEAR."

Jacob's Vision of God — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Genesis 27, 28.

Esau, Isaac's older son, was told by his father to get him some meat, cook it and bring it to him and he would give him his blessing, but Jacob, the younger, deceived his father, who, thinking he was Esau, gave him the blessing instead.

When Esau came to his father with his offering, Isaac knew he had been deceived and he told Esau what Jacob had done, wherefore Esau wept exceedingly and asked for a blessing, too, saying, "Hast thou but one blessing, my father? Bless me, even me, also."

Because of his wickedness Jacob feared Esau and was sent away to the land of his mother's people, and on the way he had a dream, and awakened frightened, saying, "Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not," whereupon he builded there an altar.

Upon this altar Jacob prayed to God to be with him, and vowed, "And this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that Thou shalt give me, I will surely give the tenth to Thee."

Bedtime Story And Nightmare

German propaganda agencies have been enjoying themselves in their accounts of the big Commando raid on the coast of Dieppe. This, they have told their people, was an attempt at a large-scale invasion, carried out by a full allied division, but successfully beaten off by German coastal defences. Their estimates of our losses are in the finest Nazi vein of hyperbole, and their accounts of the exploits of German troops in repelling the invaders are positively Homeric. The invasion, they say, was undertaken at the orders of Churchill, against the best advice of British military experts, and Churchill only made the attempt because Stalin threatened and bullied him so mercilessly at the Moscow meeting. With this fanciful tale they have lulled the German public into a secure sleep.

No mention is made of the fact that the raid showed conclusively that Germany is completely outmatched in air-power in Western Europe and that on the day after the raid our bombers were free to do what they would over Northern France because there was no opposition. Naturally the Germans have not been told any of the things about the raid which we now know. It was costly, though less so than was at first expected, but it brought us information which will be of the greatest value. We lost men to the Germans, but our men brought prisoners away with them, and they made their get-away as well as could be expected. To land a force and draw it off the same day is necessarily a costly business, but no one but a Nazi propagandist could describe it as "another Dunkirk."

The Germans have had their bedtime story; only a few people in the world can say how soon it will be followed by nightmare.

Peterborough Men

Some of our contemporaries are busily discussing the names of their cities and the names which may be formed from these to describe the residents of those cities. Brantford is undecided between "Brantfordian" and "Brantfordite," though there seems to be an opinion that the former name has more dignity and tone. Chatham somewhat rashly declares that its ideas of "expression and dignity" are very well suited with the name "Chathamite," which we think courageous in consideration of the misunderstandings which might arise from it. Both these cities unite to condemn the citizens of Sault Ste. Marie who call themselves "Sooites"; certainly there seems to be little to be said for this singular appelation.

Here in Peterborough we are inclined to call a resident a "Peterborough Man" and we find after consulting the Oxford Dictionary that this is an ancient and honorable way of settling the matter for towns whose names end in "borough"; we are to be congratulated, therefore, upon our right instinct and our scholarship in this matter. After all, there is something direct and powerful about being called a Peterborough Man which cannot be challenged by any name ending in "ian" or "ite."

Death of a Princess

General regret will be felt at the death of the Princess Tsahai, youngest daughter of Haile Selassie, the Emperor of Ethiopia. The Princess followed her father into exile in England in 1936, after the Italian conquest of his country, and she returned with him to his native land when he was once again restored to his throne. During her time in England she studied nursing at the Queen Charlotte Hospital, and later she became head of the Ethiopian Red Cross and a volunteer worker for the first field ambulance unit of her father's army. When she was 17 she was offered an opportunity to go on the screen, which she refused as being incompatible with the dignity of her position. She was well-known as a broadcaster on behalf of several charitable causes.

Princess Tsahai was only twenty-one when she died and had been married only four months to a Colonel in the Ethiopian army. She was an unassuming, but dignified and deeply cultivated lady, untiring in her efforts to bring the best in western medical science to the aid of her people. She was constant and loyal to her father's cause and he will feel her loss profoundly.

Educating The British

Recently we have read a number of smug pronouncements in Canadian papers about the necessity for educating the British in the history and natural wonders of this continent. The British Department of Education has taken the matter in hand and will probably make a good job of it; British education is traditionally thorough, so far as it goes.

The British ignorance about North America is probably attributable to the fact that, for centuries, British education has been chiefly concerned with the Greek and Latin classics. Before popular education was introduced in that country Greek and Latin formed the staple of education; science was not studied, nor were modern languages, English literature, nor history except for the history of Greece and Rome. It was assumed that an intelligent man would acquire languages by travel, a knowledge of his own literature by reading it in his leisure hours, and a knowledge of history in the same way. What is more, most gentlemen, including some of our greatest historians, learned all they knew in this way. In those days education was regarded as a process of refining and polishing the mind; the pupil was expected to furnish his mind himself.

Modern education is quite a different thing. Millions are educated where only thousands went to school before, and it is expected that the school will equip the pupil so thoroughly that, once he leaves it he will never need to open a book again. Minds cannot be refined and polished in the mass; they can be crammed, nothing more. The gain for the majority is immeasureable; the loss to the few, and through them to mankind as a whole, is also considerable. But in Britain the tradition of self-instruction dies hard, and as a result there is ignorance of some things which would be better known.

It is a fact also that the British history-myth and the American history-myth do not mix well. For history, as it is taught to children, is almost wholly mythological, with a little fact added. The American myth demands that Britain, during the Revolution and later in the Civil War, be shown as grasping, domineering and tricky. The British myth demands that the Americans be represented as unreasonable, two-faced and uncouth. Neither of these views will bear close inspection, but they minister to that desire to be always in the right which lies at the root of so much elementary history teaching. The quicker we get rid of these history-myths, the better.

Hollywood, of course, must take its share of blame. It has grossly misrepresented both countries in order to tickle the fancy of the least critical element in the movie audiences of Kansas and Lancashire. Hollywood has a rooted conviction that history is undramatic, and that all great historical events have revolved around a pair of lovers.

And so Britain is to be educated about the States and Canada and we hope that the benefit will be mutual. A closer study of British history would do us no harm. And then we might begin on a few things which we do not know. The histories of the Orient and of South America are closed books to most of us.

Journalism – An Ancient Art

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

JOURNALISM is customarily regarded as a new profession, developed during the last century or so; actually it is of most respectable antiquity. Men have always been anxious for news, either from curiosity or from a desire to turn their information to their own interest, and there have always been men ready to supply their demand. The profession of foreign correspondent is actually one of the oldest in the world.

Newspapers are not especially new, either. The oldest ones of which we know appeared in the time of the Roman Empire; they were semi-official publications which were posted upon the walls at specified places in the city of Rome, and they were called "Acta Diurna" which may be roughly translated as Daily Doings. Romans strolled to the appointed spot, read Daily Doings and discussed the news with their friends. Wealthy people who lived at some distance from the city subscribed to the publication, and scribes did a good business copying the news and sending it by messenger to their employers. A system somewhat similar to this was known in China as early as the seventh century.

THE news-letter, which has had a modern revival, was the principal source of news distribution during the Middle Ages. Wealthy families, like the Medici, who owned property in many parts of the world and had agents everywhere received regular budgets of news, often with surprising rapidity. The Church, also, had its means of spreading information. We are wrong to think of the people of the Middle Ages as living in a fog of ignorance; the educated classes kept themselves remarkably well-informed; the value of early and accurate information was as great then as it has ever been.

Newspapers did not appear until after the advent of printing. The first of which we know was published in Germany in 1609 and it is not until 1622 that we have record of a newspaper in English; this was called simply "Newes From Italy, Germany, etc."; it appeared every week. It soon had a rival called "Newes From Most Parts Of Christendom," and as has happened so many times since the rivals amalagamated, publishing "Newes of The Present Week." Those who complain of the sensationalism of the modern press willl be interested to hear that the popularity of this paper was founded to a great extent upon its reporting of two dramatic murder trials in Yorkshire, with a wealth of gory detail. Murders have been good friends to the press ever since.

IN THE early years of newspapers press censorship was severe, and never more so than during the Commonwealth, when that supposed friend and liberator of the people, Oliver Cromwell, exercised a control over the press which Hitler might envy; once Honest Noll was dead and buried the circulation of truth became a little easier. It is sometimes salutary to reflect, when we hear our politicians boasting of the freedom of our press, that such freedom was bitterly fought for and hardly won, not by statesmen, but by journalists who were opposed by politicians at every step. The struggle to obtain full parliamentary reports to publish in the papers is a story in itself.

Daniel Defoe, author of "Robinson Crusoe" and a most persuasive writer, was the first journalist to achieve fame in that profession. His "Review" had a brilliant career between 1704 and 1713, and he was the first publisher to use a serial story in his paper; he wrote it himself. The chief Tory paper of the time was "The Examiner" and its particular glory was its articles by Jonathan Swift, the father of the modern editorial page; one wonders sometimes if he would care to acknowledge his child. Many noblemen and politicians contributed to this paper, including the great Bolingbroke himself. This custom of having politicians write for the papers persists in Britain to this day, and Winston Churchill is one of the most famous exponents of the art. Lloyd George is another.

THE history of journalism is a fascinating study, but space does not permit any further reference to it here. In a later issue the writer will attempt to outline some of its more entertaining vagaries. Perhaps the most interesting thing about journalism, however, is not the way in which it has changed but the astonishing degree to which it has remained unchanged. News, leading articles and advertisements—these formed the matter of the early papers and these are the staple of newspaper fare today. The only important innovation of recent years has been the introduction of comic strips and there are still several papers which decline to publish these. But the story of the modern press, and particularly Canadian newspapers, must be reserved for future discussion in this column.

Unconsidered Trifles

Elocution is a good thing. But it doesn't go far enough. It merely teaches a man how to speak....not when or how long.

She was obviously annoyed when she returned from her shopping expedition. "John," she said to her husband, "I've just found that the woman next door has a coat exactly the same as mine."

John looked up from his banking account, which he had been trying to balance. "Well, my dear," he said, "I suppose you'll want me to buy a new coat?" "Yes," she replied, "it would be cheaper than moving, wouldn't it?"

Tommy went home one day with a nice new golf ball.

"Look at the lovely ball I've found on the links," he said.

"But are you sure, Tommy," asked his father, "that it was a lost ball really?"

"Oh, yes," said the boy. "I saw a man and his caddy looking for it!"

"Sure, and what a night it is!" said the Irishman at a party. "It's simply pouring."

"You can't go home in that downpour," remarked the host. "You had better stay the night with us."

The Irishman disappeared and returned some time later soaking wet.

"Where have you been?" asked the host.

"Home for my pyjamas," replied the Irishman.

BREAKING THE TOE HOLD

Some Changes for Adolf

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

THE Nazis must meet the challenge of the aerial power the United Nations are steadily building up in the British Isles or accept heavy odds in the prospective fight to prevent establishment of a second front in Western Europe.

The manner in which the Luftwaffe's wings were clipped as a part of the Dieppe venture suggests that Hitler may be obliged to accept the challenge sooner than anticipated. The German air command, it is asserted in London, was caught napping by the magnitude of the air support given the Dieppe attack, with the result that the Nazis in a single day lost possibly a third or even more of their operational aircraft in the west.

MATTER OF GUESSWORK

Inasmuch as the eastern front is the most logical ready source of reinforcement, the joint declaration made two months ago by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill that coming operations "will divert German strength from the attack on Russia" suddenly takes on fresh significance.

What's next in Europe is, of course, as much a matter of guesswork as the second-front question. The latest trend of events, however, jibes with a theory which is taking form in the minds of some exceptionally well-informed observers. In outline the thought is:

The Nazis have been able to blast their way forward in the Caucasus largely by virtue of tremendous aerial superiority over the Red Army, built up at the expense of the Western Europe air defences.

Even this advantage has been found insufficient to effect destruction of Marshal Timoshenko's armies, though it has brought within sight the conquest of the North Caucasus and control of the Black Sea.

ALLIED AIR THREAT

Now, either from choice or necessity, Hitler very likely plans to go on the strategical defensive in Russia for the winter, thereby releasing vast manpower and permitting diversion of the bulk of his air forces to Western Europe and the Middle East.

In the West, the first urgent necessity the Nazis face is the threat from increasing British and American aerial strength. It can be met by diversions from the Russian front, and also by stepping up German aircraft production by returning to German industry this winter some of the skilled manpower now in the armed forces.

In challenging for control of the skies over Northern France, the Nazis retain the advantage they won two years ago at Dunkirk—their foes' bases are concentrated within the relatively small area of the British Isles, whereas the Germans can strike from numerous widely scattered fields in Western Europe.

If Hitler does have any such intent as suggested here, he had better hurry. As noted this month by Lieutenant-General Henry H. Arnold, United States Army Air Force chief, American planes are flowing to England in large numbers.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON, Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 22 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in his radio speech this week that non-essential industries would be "curtailed or eliminated" and, informed sources said today, he might have added that elimination will be more frequent than curtailment.

Two major factors brought them to that conclusion: the heavy demands for manpower from the armed forces and industries already on war production; and the widespread shortages of strategic materials.

Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service, soon will have control over manpower for both forces and industry. Mr. King said he and Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, will work in close harmony in curbing non-essential industry.

"What you'll find happen," said one authority, "is that Gordon will put in the regulations and Little will grab the men they make available."

That will mean, he added, that the tendency will be to move men from non-essential plants to war industries already established, lessening the possibilities for conversion of non-war plants to more vital uses.

It is expected that some conversion will be accomplished through the displaced industries branch of the munitions and supply department. But even that growing office, which already has helped many plants get into war production when their civilian activities were curtailed, is not hopeful it will be able to do very much.

One informant in a position to know said the shortage of many materials would be a hard handicap to surmount.

"Quite frankly, the men I talk to don't see how there can be very much expansion beyond the commitments which have already been made, unless new supply sources are found," he said. "For that reason, if for no other, the number of plants which can be started on direct war work when their non-war production is cut down is likely to be small.

"I'm afraid there will be a lot of locked doors in Canada."

Dog days:

Press conferences are going out of style in Ottawa....Prime Minister Mackenzie King hasn't met the press en masse for a long time and doesn't seem anxious to resume the once fairly-regular meetings....He used to say, as a reason for not holding press conferences, that Winston Churchill never held them in London, even if President Roosevelt was an addict....Now the news from Washington is that F.D.R. is cutting them down if not out—and the prospects look black for capital correspondents.

The government soon is to take control of all "help wanted" and "situation wanted" ads.... Who knows but one day it will be advertising itself, like this:—

"Wanted—Two men with plenty of money and physical endurance for low-paid but exciting work in Russia and China. Jobs carry title of minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary and perquisites are generous."

Incidentally we mentioned last week rumors that Mr. King was dickering with an unnamed Montreal man in connection with the Moscow job....One foreign diplomat wanted to know if it might be Warwick Chipman, K.C., leading light in the League of Nations and expert on international relations.

Down Halifax way, work is going ahead on those to navy films....The Hollywood production, "Convoy," is said to be about 10 per cent done with the work laid out for a good bit ahead....The film board's documentary is almost finished and may be released about October.

Dr. E. C. Coleman, Undersecretary of State, has his finger in a lot of other people's pie as custodian of enemy property....He controls assets estimated variously from $800,000,000 to $1,000,000,000....His operations are very, very hush-hush but one thing is known—the enemy is helping to finance the war....Periodically the earnings of enemy aliens' property and money is invested in war loans.

Goebbels' Choice

Goebbels has a new radio device for inducing workers to leave Spain, France and other continental countries to work in Germany. He is putting across, in the languages of these countries, thrice-weekly broadcasts ostensibly from workers who have already gone to Germany, telling of the good food, accommodation and recreative facilities.

But he is choosing the wrong people. In recent Spanish broadcasts the speaker, supposed to be a Catalonian laborer, spoke with such a marked "Madrid University" accent that he caused only amusement and distrust.—London Daily Sketch.

A Bible Message For Today

Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, if ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done.

And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.—Matthew 21: 21, 22.

Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest does the same things.—Romans 2: 1.

Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.—James 1: 12.

I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing.

If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.—St. John 15: 5, 6.

"Lot Of Ruin In A Nation"

The war has brought and will bring much more of ruin. But one recalls Adam Smith's famous remark about there being a "lot of ruin in a nation," and we know that no matter how long the war may last or how terrifying it may become it cannot wipe out the riches which Providence has placed in our fields and earth and waters. So long as these things remain, and so long as men have hands and minds to put them to man's uses, talk of ruin is nonsense.

Finally, this is no time to be worrying too much over imaginary tribulations when the war is over. Our real worry, our supreme task, is to get it over with victory; be prepared to take our chances on the sort of world it will be afterwards. We imagine that, some grievous things and trials notwithstanding, it will be a better world than the one we have known in our generation.—Ottawa Journal.

The Habit Of Disparagement

Propaganda must always be judged by its results. There is an English habit of disparaging all our actions and being convinced that they are done much better by other people. It is an unsavory habit which I am afraid is affecting every branch of the British race. I remember that in the last war we were convinced, even more than we are now, that our propaganda was perfectly idiotic and wholly ineffective, that it was governed, ruled, directed and executed by zanies. When the war was over, Hitler wrote a book describing the appalling effect upon himself personally and his comrades of this terrific propaganda. Let us remember that last time we thought we were doing it badly while we were not, let us bear in mind that propaganda cannot be judged by its incidents, but only by its results.—Harold Nicolson, M.P., in the British House.

OTTAWA, Aug. 22 (CP).—Seventy Canadian civilians and government officials, repatriated from Japan and Japanese-occupied territory, will arrive at New York aboard the diplomatic liner Gripsholm Aug. 25, it was learned today at the Department of External Affairs.

They will take the train at once for Montreal and relatives and friends may meet them there but not at New York.

In order to avoid delays with examination by United States authorities which might lead to their being held some time in New York the Canadian Government has agreed to move them directly to Canadian territory before permitting any communication with the public. It is expected the group will reach Montreal during the morning of Aug. 26 or sometime during the day.

The group includes D'Arcy McGreer, former charge d'affaires at the Canadian Legation in Tokyo, other officials of the legation and their families and several trade commissioners and their families as well as missionaries, businessmen and other non-official persons who lived in the Orient.

The group on the Gripsholm, as far as the external affairs department knows, includes all Canadians known to be in Japan and the Japanese-occupied territories, outside of Hong Kong. There are still a number of Canadian civilians interned at Hong Kong, about whose repatriation negotiations are proceeding.

An official list of the Canadian group showed few changes from previous unofficial lists. The official list did not contain the name of Stanley Healy which was on an earlier list.

Names listed addition to those previously announced were William G. Poy, chief clerk on the Canadian Trade Commissioner's office at Hong Kong, Mrs. Poy, their son and daughter; Miss Elsie Arnold, also a clerk at the trade commissioner's office in Hong Kong, and Esther Wood Peacock, a Baptist missionary in Korea whose father, A. Peacock, lives in Vancouver.

Police Arrest Port Hope Men

TORONTO, Aug. 22—(CP).—As a result of Inspector William H. Lougheed's investigation, Attorney General Conant reported today that William Forsythe, 53, and Thomas Stothard, 41, both of Port Hope, were charged with robbery to appear in police court there on Monday.

Inspector Lougheed was sent to Port Hope last Monday at request of a member of the council to investigate a robbery reported the first week of August when the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Paeden (Youvile St.) in that town was entered and $250 stolen.

On Wednesday Inspector Lougheed and Provincial Constable G. E. Broughton arrested the two men. Following the arrests two tin cans, contained $157.20 which police claim was part of the loot, were recovered.

Commands Canadians at Dieppe

Major-Gen. J. H. Roberts of Kingston, one of Canada's divisional commanders overseas, commanded the Canadian troops in the commando raid on Dieppe, France. He was in France before, in command of an artillery formation in June, 1940, but with the rest of the Canadians was ordered back to England before they engaged the enemy.

Kuban Cossacks Ride To Firing Lines

Fighting valiantly in their own backyard, the road to the Caucasus, these Kuban Cossacks are known for their picturesque uniforms and saddle-gear, perhaps the most expensive individual equipment anywhere. They are known, too, for their fierce riding, their sabre work and their use of the horse-drawn machine-gun or "tachankas."

Steel Industry Workers Are Demanding A Uniform Basic Labor Rate

By FRASER MACDOUGALL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Aug. 22—(CP).—Focal point of strike threats in the basic steel-producing plants at Sydney, Nova Scotia, and in Sault Ste. Marie is the recognition of steel as a national industry with a uniform basic labor wage rate throughout Canada, C. H. Millard, Canadian National Director of the United Steel Workers' of America (C.I.O.) said here today.

In the interview with The Canadian Press, Mr. Millard said that "Labor has lost patience" and that the U.S.W.A. is now seeking to have the government carry out a program which the union has urged since the summer of 1939.

The basic labor wage rate sought for the steel industry is 55 cents an hour with full cost of living bonus. The present rate in the Algoma Steel Corporation plant at Sault Ste. Marie is 45½ and 46½ cents an hour. At the third large basic steel producer in Canada—the Steel Company of Canada plant at Hamilton—the rate is 46½ cents an hour, but payment of a wartime bonus which is not described as a cost of living bonus brings the effective rate to 53½ cents.

To enforce their demands for the increases the Sydney steel workers yesterday voted 3,074 to 38 to strike while the Algoma workers voted for a strike earlier in the week with 3,112 votes for, 22 against, and five ballots spoiled.

So far there has been no comment from Algoma officials on the strike threat here. It is understood that their present attitude is that the problem is one for the Government and the War Labor Boards. Mr. Millard said yesterday this was the viewpoint of the union which held that its wage dispute was a matter for the Government and the Labor Boards to settle and at present did not involve the company.

Mr. Millard said that the effort to have steel recognized as a national industry was first launched in 1939 when Silby Barrett, then a regional director of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee which has now become the United Steel Workers of America, urged such a step on the then Deputy Minister of Labor. At that time the S.W.O.C. was organized in the Sydney plant and there was an independent union in the Algoma plant.

THE BIRTH OF A BABY

For four successive afternoons and nights crowds packed the Capitol Theatre to witness the picture, "The Birth of a Baby." The reactions of individuals and bodies to it at the moment were varied, but sufficient time has elapsed for us to examine it from a more critical viewpoint. I say "sufficient time has elapsed," etc., because experience has taught me that our viewpoints often change sometime after an emotional reaction that follows a shock to our conventional ideas of what is proper.

That "The Birth of a Baby" in parts, did shock conventional ideas is true. For some, two young for such a picture if not too young in years, those parts provoked hysterical snickering which bothered the more demure and thoughtful ones. It is to be hoped however, that those youngsters really did learn more from it than seemed apparent at the moment.

In considering critically almost anything in life, one should not fix one's eyes too much on isolated and seemingly unfortunate details but view the matter as a whole. If we do we often find, to our surprise, that if the matter as a whole were good the seemingly unfortunate details assume a new place in the picture and become a contribution to that whole.

It is quite apparent that neither information gathered from our parents or from whatever study of biology we get even in high school gives us any real understanding of what takes place in human reproduction. We are taught the seed in flowers must be fertilized in order to reproduce, and are led to deduce that this is true of all nature including humans, but development beyond that point is left to our imaginations as something too delicate to discuss. Yet, we all want to know and pick up our information, right or wrong, from anyone glad to talk about it. The "Birth of a Baby" gave us a clear picture of what goes on after fertilization and the interest in it was evidenced by the crowds who attended the show without that embarrassment that normally is present under other circumstances.

Many of us would laud the picture up to the point of the development just short of the actual birth, but were shocked at the showing of the actual delivery. And yet, why should we be? Every worth while thing in life has a cost and why should we close our eyes to the fact that the most worth while thing in life is bought with blood, sweat and tears. My youngest child closes her eyes and plugs her ears when there is a picture showing the horrors of war. It is the duty of us older ones to spare our little ones the knowledge and sight of what is not beautiful, but all of us, when we reach a proper age, should know the pain as well as the gain of life. To have omitted the birth and passed directly to the joy of the mother in the possession of her beautiful baby seems to me would have robbed the picture of its greatest value. And to have omitted the anxiety of the husband would have been just as bad. Isn't it strange how sufferings unite us to those we love most dearly!

The great lesson that we of the democracies have to learn is that everything worthwhile must be bought with a price and that children are no exception. No adopted child can hold just the place in parents' hearts as one who is "bone of my bone and blood of my blood."

The picture doesn't seek to tell us that babies can be had easily. Holidays must be given up, plans altered, normal habits often changed, and there is physical pain for the mother and some anxiety for both parents. It tells us all that but adds that if from the beginning of pregnancy we put ourselves in skilled hands we need have no fear and that the result will be not only a beautiful baby but a new bond of love between husband and wife that will unite them as nothing else can do.

It might have gone one step further and shown us that this bond grows stronger with each additional child with the joint responsibilities which a family brings.

Tank Landings Perfectly Carried-Out

VICHY, Aug. 22—(AP)—Hand-to-hand fighting in the streets of Dieppe while the most modern weapons of war poured shells into the historic city was described today in French accounts telephoned to this capital from the scene of the Commando coastal raid.

German sources in Vichy admitted the Allies held on for some ten hours (the Allied report said only nine hours) and established a bridgehead with between 10,000 and 15,000 troops. They said the Allies were able to re-embark all but 10 per cent after the heavy fighting.

From German accounts, it appears the scows bearing tanks worked successfully. They said the drivers were able to start up tank motors before they touched land and the tanks rolled off the barges in perfect order.

Beaching parties of Canadians, British Commandos, America Rangers and de Gaulle French fought through barbed-wire entanglements and land mines on shore and pushed the Germans back into the lower part of Dieppe.

An entry into the city was forced, raiders occupying part of the lower quarter.

Tanks landed from the rail flotilla were held back by anti-tank barriers, which the raiders had no time to destroy, so the lumbering vehicles poured cannon fire into the German ranks.

Two Women Work At Bread Delivery

"With all the talk about the increasing need of manpower we felt that we would have to come to it eventually, and so why not now?" Alderman Dutton, manager of Stocks Bread remarked to the Examiner to-day in a reference to the engagement of two women as drivers in the company's local delivery staff.

"Fifteen men have enlisted from our Peterborough staff," he said. "In the last war we were getting ready to employ women but we did not reach that peak in the labor problem. At that time we bought a low set type of wagon that would be a facility to women if we needed them, and we found it had general advantages which we have retained and developed since then."

"Our two women are doing very well," Alderman Dutton said. "It will take them another week or so to learn the routes. They are driving horse-drawn delivery wagons. They have no harnessing or other work of that kind to do. It is done by the stable man. One woman is married and the other is the daughter of a farmer living near Belleville."

Income Tax is Fair to All

This year the cost of the war shows another increase. Canada will need almost four billion dollars to carry on. Where is this increase to come from?

From the large income groups? Yes—but not from them alone! Their new tax rates range as high as 98%. A married man with an income of $50,000 must pay about 67c out of every dollar—or if he has an income of $100,000 he must pay about 78c out of every dollar.

From big companies? Yes—but not from them alone! The full amount of all excess profits has to be paid over to the government, while 30% of normal profits are taxed away.

Clearly, this is a battle for our very existence. Every person, rich and poor, must pay his or her share. Income Tax is fair to all. It distributes the load according to each person's ability to pay.

There's going to be less money in our pay envelopes—because the 1942 income tax of salary and wage earners is being deducted at the source during September 1942 to August 1943.

Here are facts you should know:

1. Deduction starts with the first pay-period beginning in September.

2. Your employer must deduct the amount provided by the official Table of Tax Deductions for your current rate of pay, taking account of the marital status, dependents and personal savings you show on Form TD-1.

3. If you do not file Form TD-1 with your employer, he must deduct the amounts provided by the Table for a single person without dependents and without personal savings.

4. The Table of Tax Deductions is designed to collect about 90% of your total 1942 tax after allowing for the National Defence Tax deducted during the first 8 months of 1942.

5. A margin of 10% has been left for adjustments so that, in most cases, over-deduction will be avoided without leaving a large balance to pay at the time of filing the annual return in September 1943.

6. If your salary or wages are less than ¾ of your income, your employer will make the deductions applicable to such salary or wages but you must also pay (by quarterly instalments commencing October 15, 1942) tax on your other income and must file your annual return in April 1943. Remittance Form T.7.B Individuals, for use in such cases, will be available sometime in September at Post Offices and local Income Tax offices.

Forms TD-1, which should be filed with your employer at once, may be secured from your employer, Post Offices, or Inspectors of Income Tax.

Employers and Post Offices have been requested to display in a prominent place the official Table of Tax Deductions.

PLAZAS MAKE IT TWO STRAIGHT IN CITY SOFTBALL PLAYOFFS

Defeat Royals By 4-3 Score In Last Frame

Blewett's sizzling single to right with two out in the top half of the ninth inning, after Don Crowe had set the stage with a ringing double to the same field gave Plazas a 4 to 3 win over Royals in the second game of the City League playoff series at Riverside Park, Friday night. Plazas thus lead the round two games to nothing with the third tilt billed for Monday night.

The hockey squad had to call on their reserves in last night's game and they came through handsomely. Eddie Starr, Jim Ellis and Art Heal were absentees and with the Deer Lodge contingent away Plazas had to revamp their infield completely. Web. Starr shifted from third in behind the bat, Don Crowe moved over to first base, Joe Jones, Curley Scriver and Ned Vitarelli filled in the gaps in the infield and Johnny Godfrey took care of the right field post.

This line-up played fine ball behind effective pitching by Dave Wilson who turned in his best card of the year on the mound for the winners. The big fellow held Royals to six hits, issued only two walks, and retired five by the strikeout route. He was fogging a fast ball through very effectively especially when Royals had runners in scoring position.

Bill Fraser went the route for Royals and he had the whiphand over Plazas for the first five innings. However they bunched hits in the sixth, eighth and ninth for enough runs to win the argument. Fraser yielded nine hits and issued three walks.

It was an exciting tussle all the way. Royals shot a run over in the second and added another in the fifth to go in front 2 runs to 0. Wilson's double however drove in two counters for Plazas in the sixth to tie up the ball game and in the eighth Johnny Godfrey doubled in a run to put the ultimate winners in front for the first time. Fraser, however, saved his game, temporarily, by coming through with a timely double to sew up the contest only to have Crowe and Blewett break it up in the ninth.

There was plenty of smart fielding with the feature play being Bun Kingdon's perfect throw to the plate nipping McNabb who tried to score from third after the left fielder had grabbed a fly from Smith's bat. The throw came in on one hop to W. Starr who tagged McNabb sliding in. Arnold Smith handled fourteen chances perfectly at first for Royals and Joe Jones and George Hawks came through with nice stops and throws.

Royals started the scoring in the second with one out. Calladine singled to short, Fraser walked and the two advanced on a wild pitch. Pryde hit to Jones who tried for Calladine but the latter scrambled back to third and every one was safe. Joe Blewett made a nice running catch of Parnell's fly, Calladine scoring on the play. Scriver struck out.

Plazas lost a great chance in the third. Wilson walked to start the inning and Jones was safe on McNabb's fumble. Kingdon bunted and Hawks threw to third. Holmes who covered muffed the toss. Wilson tried to go home on the play and was thrown out at the plate. Blewett fouled out to Calladine and Scriver made a nice catch of Starr's drive to right.

Royals made it 2 to 0 in the fifth. Parnell bunted and reached second on Starr's low throw to first. He went to third on a wild pitch. Gatfield walked. On an attempted double steal Parnell was out at the plate on Vitarelli's accurate return to Starr's quick throw to second. McNabb walked. Holmes flied to Kingdon and the side should have been out when Smith tapped to short. Scriver let the roller go through however and Gatfield scored on the error. Hawks popped to Starr for the third out.

Plazas evened it up in the sixth There were two out when it started. Then Vitarelli singled through short and Johnny Godfrey drew a pass Wilson helped to win his own ball game by dropping a double in right centre, scoring Vitarelli and Godfrey. The batter reached third on a wild throw home. Jones rolled to Hawks to end the inning.

There was no further scoring until the first of the eighth when Plazas went out in front. C. Scriver started it with a single through short with one out and stealing second. Vitarelli fanned but Godfrey came through in the pinch with a double to centre, scoring Scriver. Wilson was tossed out by McNabb

Royals evened up in their half, also with two out. After Smith had flied to Godfrey, Hawks singled through short. Calladine hit to Vitarelli who tagged Hawks on the line but his throw to first to complete a double was low and the runner was safe. Fraser helped his own cause by crashing a double to left centre, scoring Calladine with the tieing run after which Pryde bounded out to Jones.

Plazas put over the million dollar run in the first of the sixth. After Jones had been tossed out by McNabb and Kingdon had popped to Smith, Don Crowe came through in the pinch with a line double to right. A wild pitch put him on third and it was up to Joe Blewett. The centre fielder made good with a whistling single to right, to drive in the winning run. Starr popped out to retire the side.

Akers batted for Parnell in the Royals half and popped to Crowe. Then Wilson breezed three strikes past Gatfield and McNabb to end the tight argument.

Upset Features Catholic Finals

After helping to pry off the lid last night in the first game of the C.S.L. playoffs St. Peter's took it on the chin to the tune of 19 to 7 from the East City Cubs with Memorial Park the scene of action. It was nothing else but getting a bad game out of their systems so St. Peter's claim and agree it was an off night for them.

The losers, who finished on the top of the league schedule, couldn't seem to hit in the pinches and had 15 men stranded on bases to prove the point. Matching run for hit the winners chopped off 19 safe bingles and could not be caught up with.

Cubs in the upper half of the first scored one run and St. Peter's were not able to duplicate. In the second the visitors didn't stop till they had whittled away for six counters while the Saints came right back with half the amount to make it 7-3. The winners were scoreless for the next two frames but the losers managed a pair of singles for the two, leaving it 7-5. This looked as if the Saints would soon catch the Cubs who were setting the pace, but when the latter notched up six more in the first of the fifth they kept out of sight of the former. Three in the sixth and a like number in the ninth built up the victors' lead whereas the vanquished were only able to score another two in the last of the ninth, making the final score 19-7.

R. Garvey was the one who was dangerous with the willow for the Cubs and packed dynamite in it. He didn't stop till he had pounded out a single, a double and two four-baggers. Brady was a close second with a pair of singles and a deuce. A single and a double were Heffernan's contribution while Hayes layed down a one-sacker and a deuce.

For the St. Peter's squad Condon and Tompkins had four apiece. The former slamming out a pair of singles and a similar amount of doubles as the latter accounted for a quartette of singles. Rochetta, Kirby and Prete each had a pair of singles to their credit.

Joe Caccavella made a sweet catch of a high fly into short right field. The Cubs made the only double play of the game, Caccavella to J. O'Toole and Brady to J. O'Toole.

Games scheduled for next week are Monday, Wednesday and Friday with the fifth game if necessary being the following Monday.

Some Memories To Mull For Sea Biscuit

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP). — Miss Secretary, take a letter, please, to old man Seabiscuit, care of Charley Howard's breeding ranch out at Mendocino, California.

Dear Biscuit:

Just thought you'd like to know there's a hoss sale coming off up at Saratoga tonight. Sure, we know gee-gee auctions are out of your line these days when you're building a family. But the way, how are the kids? But one of the gallopers going on the block this time is a chestnut colt out of Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Wheatley stable. Now you get it, don't you? He's your kid brother.

Remember when Wheatley Stable sold you back there in '36. It was $7,500, wasn't it, that Charley Howard paid to take you home? And all you did was go on to win $437,000. But up to the time Wheatley let you go, you were pretty much of a bum for a year and a half, if you recall. Even ran as a plater a few times.

Well, Naval Reserve's been about the same as you up to now. He's won some races, but he just hasn't seemed to have the old git up and go. Why, he's so little known that the catalogue for the sale has him listed as you "half-brother" instead of your full brother. And you know Papa Hard Tack and Mama Swing On won't like that.

But what we'd like to know is what you think about the chances of history repeating this time? If you figure he might develop into something like even a reasonable facsimile of his big brother, we might even be inclined to stick in a small bid ourselves when they lead him out on the block. Funnier things have happened in this racket.

It's too bad Wheatley has given up on the kid. But trainer Sunny Jib Fitzsimmons, who advised the stable against selling you that time, has worked mighty hard with him and nothing — or very little — has happened, except his feed bill still goes on.

Naturally, he's not the only horse to be sold tonight. Altogether there are 35 from 18 different stables, like Pharatheen, from Warren Wright's barn, and Schuylerville and Enhance, who haven't given William Ziegler much to cheer about the last couple of years, and Devon Cream, a granddaughter of Regret, and Norge II, a big Irish 5-year-old Tom Murphy imported this year, and W. E. Boeing's Twinkippy, who's been a fair kind of stepper in these parts for a couple of years now.

But Naval Reserve's the kid who'll get the attention. After all, how many brothers have you, a that? Best regards.

Watercraft Team Defeats Outboards

The Peterborough Canoe Watercrafts, in a snappy Industrial League fixture defeated the fast Outboard Marine squad by 17 to 5 at the Woollens Field last night.

The game was a snappy affair, regardless of the score, both teams playing heads up ball. The Marines mound man Rennie pitched good ball, but weak support by his team mates gives him a loss.

The Watercrafts played hard, cashing in on their opportunities many times, hitting in good fashion when hits were needed. Killingbeck the boatbuilders slab artist pitched great ball all the way, never in danger at any time.

The Watercrafts garden men deserve credit for spearing the long hard drives from the Outboards bats. The Boyd Brothers "Harry and Ken" two of the boat makers fielders gave the spectators many a thrill the way they caught the high flies, never missing a chance.

The umpiring of Paul Hillier, behind the plate and Alex Thorne on the bases was all that coud be wished for. Both men knew their job and handled his part efficiently.

Teams:

Outboards: Hefferman, Watkiss, McMillan, Metcalfe, McArchil, Fuller, Watkins, Rennie, Garvey.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

It was too bad that more bowlers did not avail themselves of the opportunity to bowl in last night's tournament. The greens were fast and dry. It was a fine night. There will not be many more such Friday nights this season.

The winning skips were P. McFadden, Dr. C. Fulford and C. Williamson.

We had a nice long letter from our good old friend, Dr. A. H. Allen. He bowls with a Toronto club and is doing well. He wished to be remembered to all of his friends.

Mrs. C. Renaud and Mrs. J. Arnold; Mrs. H. Martin and Mrs. R. Hendry. These four ladies will represent our club in the ladies' Mail and Globe Scotch doubles Play will take place in Toronto next Thursday morning.

The sympathy of our club members is extended to Mrs. W. Hepburn. Mrs. Hepburn received a telegram late yesterday afternoon, advising her of the sudden death of her brother in Iowa.

Remember the mixed tournament this evening. It would not surprise us if they have a bigger attendance tonight than we had last night. 7:30 o'clock is the time.

Ladies' League:

Westclox vs Generals, East City Bowl, 6:30 o'clock. Final playoff.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

With Bea McDowell tossing them in for Generals and Marg Watson on the hilltop for the Westclockers, the two old rivals will clash in the Girls' League battle at the Ashburnham Bowl at 6.30 o'clock tonight in a game that may settle the loop championship—or leave the playoff series tied tighter than ever. Right now the Westclox girls have a 3 to 1 lead and need only a win tonight to win the title, the Bond Cup and the right to meet the Toronto winners in the provincial playdowns next Wednesday. If Generals come through with a victory, however, they will be right back in the running, needing only another triumph to sew the whole thing up. In other words there is plenty at stake in this clash tonight. The old rivalry between Westclox and C.G.E. that has featured the loop race for years is in evidence once again and there should be plenty of excitement before the tilt is finished. An early start has been arranged so that there will be good light to complete the battle. The biggest Girls' League crowd of the season is expected. In the event of a General win the two teams will meet again Monday night in the sixth game of the series and if a seventh game is required it will be staged Tuesday night.

Plazas' reserves came through for them in a big way last night and as a result they were able to make it two straight over the Royals in the City League playoffs, despite the absence of Eddie Starr, Jim Ellis and Art Heal from the lineup. Web Starr took over the catching duties in fine style, Joe Jones' fielding was a feature, Ned Vitarelli and Johnny Godfrey came through with two hits each and Scriver's single led off the rally that put the hockey squad in front for the first time. Dave Wilson had the edge on Bill Fraser in a tight pitching duel, yielding only six hits as against nine off Fraser and issuing only two walks while Fraser passed three. As a result of all the Plazas managed to eke out a 4 to 3 victory with the one, two punch administered by two bad guys in a pinch, Don Crowe and Joe Blewett who collaborated to put together the winning run in the ninth. It was another tough game for Royals to lose. They played good ball, were in front 2 to 0 at one stage, tied up the game in the eighth and then saw it slip away again in the top of the ninth.

The third game in the best four-of-seven series will be played Monday night and it should be another thriller. Royals, two games down, will be fighting desperately for a win to put them back in the running while Plazas, of course, are just as eager to win and get a stranglehold on the round. The hockey squad will be back at full strength for Monday's battle, with the Deer Lodge delegates home from their Haliburton holiday. Tom Parsons who pitched the opening game of the series will be on the mound for Plazas and he will be faced by Ronnie Akers who tossed great ball in the opening tussle. Plazas bunched hits in the first inning of that affair to score three runs but Akers had them under control for the rest of the route. Monday's game should be on a par with the first two battles which have been playoff ball at its best. Incidentally Monday night's affair will be started at 6.30 o'clock, fifteen minutes earlier and fans and players are asked to note the change in starting time. Darkness is closing in fast these nights and it is necessary to get going earlier.

Will Be Great Show

With 15 leading Ontario professionals competing for a special prize and a field of amateurs well over the one hundred mark battling for 28 fine awards the Milk for Britain golf tourney at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club course tomorrow, with a competition for women at the Peterborough Golf and Country Club, Sunday, looks like the red letter golf day of the season so far as this city is concerned. The Kinsmen, under whose auspices this big affair has been arranged are hoping that Peterborough people will ensure the financial success of the tourney by spending the day or part of it at least at Kawartha tomorrow. There will be plenty of golf entertainment and the opportunity to watch some of the finest shot-makers in Canada perform is not one that is offered often here. The competition for professional golfers to take place in the afternoon is a rare chance to see first-class golf played and there should be a record gallery. The golfers, pro and amateur are doing their part to make the tourney a sure fire hit but it depends upon the general public whether or not the objective of a substantial donation to the Milk for Britain fund is attained. It will be a big day—if the public does its part.

Peterborough Juveniles are playing the first game in the Ontario playdowns this afternoon at Oshawa, with the return game here Wednesday and Soup Campbell in the Oshawa sheet has the following dope on the series: "Speaking of supporting local "kids" teams, the Commercials are entitled to a banner attendance this Saturday afternoon at Alexandra Park, when they open their O.A.S.A. playoff campaign, against the Peterborough Juvenile champs. Last year, the Liftlock City Juveniles ousted the Oshawa representatives, with a rally in the 8th inning of the third game of the series. Many of that Oshawa team are still playing Juvenile with the Commercials this year and they are out for revenge. The Peterborough team is much the same also, as last year's edition. The game Saturday afternoon at Alexandra Park, is booked to start at 3.45 p.m. and there will be no admission charge—just the usual silver collection. Incidentally, it costs a lot of money to compete in Ontario playdowns, with the expense of umpires, new balls and transportation to Peterborough, etc., so local sport fans should make it a point to "dig deep" and give a little more generously when the collection pot comes around. The Juvenile softball playoff game here Saturday afternoon should be a real treat as Peterborough is known to have a very strong team this year while the Commercials are considered one of the strongest Juvenile aggregations to appear in Oshawa for some years. These kids play the game with all their might and they play it well."

Peterborough Loses Athlete

Peterborough has lost a good athlete in the last few days in the departure for his native town, Hamilton, of Joe Jakafby, baseball and basketball star. Jakafby has returned to the Ambitious City to take a position on the police force. The big fellow pitched a lot of good ball for the Petes since he came here a few years ago. Fans have not forgotten how effectively he curveballed the crack Niagara Falls crew to death here in the Ontario playoffs nor his iron man stunt on Civic Holiday several seasons ago when he pitched both ends of a double-header and won them both. In addition to being a fine pitcher Jakafby was also a star basketball player and he probably had his best season during the past winter when he ran up an imposing scoring record as a member of the Outboard Marines O.A.B.A. squad and of the City League champion Quakers. Joe made a lot of friends in Peterborough who will wish him luck in his new berth.

Outstanding feature of the big league menu yesterday was the fact that the St. Louis Cards won their seventh straight victory, defeating Pittsburg Pirates 10 to 2 and slicing the Dodgers' lead to 6½ games with a series with the leaders coming up next week. John Beazley, one of the year's outstanding young pitchers garnered his 15th win of the campaign. In the American loop New York Yanks staged their biggest battling rally of the season, slamming out 21 hits off three Washington pitchers to defeat the Senators 17 to 7 and Boston Red Sox kept pace with the leaders by hammering out a 7 to 5 win over the Philadelphia A's with Dick Fowler the starting pitcher for the Mackmen. Mel Harder pitched a five-hitter for Cleveland to put the Indians back in the victory column again. At that it took a couple of Chicago errors to give the Tribe its 3 to 2 win.

Town League Series Nears Finish

PORT HOPE, Aug. 22—(ENS). — The Town League ball game which was held over from Thursday to Friday night on account of the Lions' Club Street Fair, was held on Friday night with a large crowd attending. This is the third game of the Town League finals between the Grill and the Beavers, with the Grill becoming the favorites for the championship of the Town League by defeating the Beavers 10-6 in a very sloppy ball game, with each team committing four errors.

The Grills' regular catcher, Wes Friar, hurt his wrist in the previous game when tagging Hewson out at the plate, and was unable to play. Rafter started behind the plate for the Grill but was replaced by Bill Foote before the inning was over.

Pointer started for the Grill and after a shaky start, steadied down until the fifth, when he retired with the bases loaded and nobody down.

The Grill big inning was the 6th, when with five hits they scored six runs. In this inning the Beavers' infield fell to pieces, which had a lot to do with the downfall of the team. In addition to saving the game for Pointer, Frank Foote homered over the left field fence with nobdyy on in the fourth.

Len. Wakely and Frank Foote each collected two hits S. Wakely and Hagerman were the only members of the Grill who failed to get a hit.

The Beavers were held to five hits.

The Foote brothers' combination, which has been such a strong factor in this series, will be separated as Frank is reporting shortly for active service.

Pros. In Action

COBOURG, Aug. 22—(ENS). — Golfers from Port Hope, Peterborough, Trenton, Belleville and Oshawa came to Cobourg today to see golf as the professionals play it. Bob Gey of Scarboro, Gord Brydson, Mississauga, Les Franks, formerly of Cobourg and now of Islington, and Bill Kerr of Cedarbrae put on the display at the local golf course. Members of the Cobourg Golf Club had a personal interest in Les Franks through their contacts with him while he was pro at the local club. The four pros arrived here early in the afternoon and were welcomed at the Cobourg Golf Club by Dick Parker. They teed off a short time later on the nine-hole course.

Pro Hockey Hopes Hang In The Balance

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Aug. 22—(CP)— The future of professional hockey in Canada and the United States is still unknown today, its status apparently unchanged by discussions during yesterday's closed meeting here of representatives of major, professional and amateur hockey organizations.

Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, said after the meeting that discussions were undertaken with the understanding that all recommendations made were dependent on an awaited decision from the Canadian government on the advisability or otherwise of continuing the N.H.L. into a fourth wartime season.

"We are entirely in the hands of the government," he said.

Main point of agreement among delegates to the meeting was that junior hockey players should be allowed to turn professional without the permission of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, formerly necessary. The previous agreement defining relations between professional and amateur hockey organizations was discussed and unchanged, with the exception of the clause affecting juniors turning pro.

Decisions reached are not final, but must be submitted to higher authorities in the five organizations represented at the meeting—the N.H.L., C.A.H.A., American Hockey League, American Hockey Association and International Ice Hockey Association.

Frank Selke, acting general manager of Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd., and Lester Patrick, New York Rangers' owner, were other N.H.L. delegates to the meeting. The American Hockey League delegation was headed by Maurice Podoloff, president, of New Haven, Conn., and the American Hockey Association representatives were George Peterson, St. Paul and Yall Wright, Minneapolis. Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, president of the C.A.H.A., headed the amateur delegates with Dr. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, president of the International Ice Hockey Association.

Don't Look Pretty

One of few remaining links with the baseball era of razor-like spikes, gloveless catchers and handlebar moustaches was severed four years ago today by the death of George Wright in Boston. Ray Wins In Two Still Unbeaten After 123 Fights

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, August 22—(AP)— Exactly 40 years ago on a mid-summer night, Nate Lewis, the bald eagle of the boul 'Mich' who has heard a lot of eyebrow-lifting episodes in his long span, got the kick of his life.

Which is really dipping back into ancient history to let the folks in on something that is about as much a secret as the fact that Joe Louis is heavyweight champ. This is that Ray Robinson begins to look like the first fellow in four decades likely to go through a fistic career without losing a fight. And this was especially apparent last night after the skinny swatter from Harlem took the Colorado cowboy, Reuben Shank apart in 2 heats at Madison Square Garden.

The bald eagle, in case you're not familiar with the leading citizens of the bashed beak business is a guy off Michigan Boulevard in Chicago who is considerably respected as a storey teller and a fight manager. This particular night, his fighting sensation, Billy Thom, after scoring his 13th knockout in 13 starts, said: "Nate, don't get me any more fights—I'm quitting."

Billy was the kind of a kid who took six punches to land one, but once he landed, the roof fell in on the other fighter. This night he happened to look into a mirror and saw what the other guy had given him before he turned the lights out. He got an education quickly.

According to the oldest inhabitants, Billy was the last fighter to bow out with a record that never showed a defeat. Before him there were the Lightweight Champion Jack McAuliffe and Bantamweight Boss Jim Barry.

And now along comes Robinson to threaten to turn the trick again. At least, there doesn't seem to be anyone around who can put the zinger into his string, which how has reached 34 pro fights and 89 amateur outings without a setback. Welterweight champ Red Cochrane, the sailor boy who sat in as a spectator at last night's fuss, will have to prove it before a lot of the know-it-alls will believe that he has a chance.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, August 22—(CP).— The verbal cannonading R.C.A.F. Flyers took from fans along the road of the Allan Cup may have had its moral, for word comes that the Air Force will not pursue a football championship the same way.

The informant is G. Sydney Halter of Winnipeg, president of the A.A.U., and his sources are the highest possible—Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher and Flt. Lt. Hec Creighton, top men in the R.C.A.F. athletic program. The Air Force will play football where possible, but if a football star happens to land in a station where there is no football he won't be transferred unless there is another strong reason.

The plan may be hard to follow, but it can be done. The public would rather see an entirely new lineup each Saturday, due to transfers and training demands, than feel that sport was holding up an athlete's progress in the course he had chosen.

Incidentally:

The Vancouver Sun's turf writer, Sunstar, has a pal with a burning desire to have all pari-mutuel payoffs limited to $30 for $2, with the government to get the balance and use it to reduce taxation on the low-price favorites....There was momentary confusion in a well-known Toronto gathering-place yesterday when Gordon Drillon dropped to a chair near S. Young and said what sounded like: "I've been sold."....On closer investigation, it turned out he had said: "I might be sold." ....On still further investigation, it turned out that there was no official basis for his statement, except that had had heard certain National Hockey League officials were meeting in Toronto and thought there might be a few deals in the wind....The meeting was technically to discuss pro-amateur relations, but there may have been something else doing....Everyone was clamlike.

Tony McCarthy, former Ottawa Rough Riders football star, has been promoted to section leader with the Canadian Firefighters overseas....Big business in Montreal wasn't much interested in softball until last week-end when a visiting Toronto club drew 15,000 in exhibitions against Montreal teams ....Now the boys are talking team sponsorship.

Ruth, Johnson Do Bit Sunday For War Relief

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

The American League, which holds the upper hand over the National League in World Series and all-star game performances of the past few years, will attempt to catch up with its older companion loop tomorrow in baseball's contributions to war relief.

Far behind the senior circuit in funds produced for the United States armed forces through receipts of designated games, the American League has pinned its hopes on New York Yankees for boosting the total somewhere near the National League's gift of better than $250,000.

The Yankees will be aided by Washington Senators and both teams will have the help of their brightest stars of former years — Babe Ruth and Walter Johnson. Although the main attraction at Yankee Stadium is supposed to be the doubleheader between the two clubs, top billing has gone to the Babe and the "Big Train."

With Johnson pitching, Ruth will step to the plate between games and attempt to belt the ball out of the park, just as he did no less than 714 times in his 22 years as a major league player.

Advance ticket sales indicate a near-capacity crowd of more than 75,000, proving that Ruth has lost none of his drawing power.

Yanks Go To Town 17-7

After their former slugging star retired, the Yankees went out and put on a demonstration of their own, blasting 21 hits off three Washington pitchers to brush the Senators, 17-7.

Phil Rizzuto led the way with five hits, two of them in the six-run first inning, while Charlie Keller poled his 22nd home run and Joe Gordon blasted his 14th into the stands.

The Yankees needed the victory to preserve their 10½ game margin, for the second-place Boston Red Sox whipped Philadelphia Athletics, 7-5, in an arc light game, although they were out-hit, 12 to 11.

Tony Lupien hit two singles and a triple and drove in four of the Red Sox runs, three of them on a hit-run single with the bases loaded.

Cleveland's Indians squeezed out a 3-2 decision over Chicago White Sox in another night game, strengthening their hold on third place with the help of Detroit Tigers, who tripped the St. Louis Browns.

Mel Harder pitched five-hit ball for the Tribe to shade Lefty Thornton Lee, who gave up only seven blows but nicked Oris Hockett with a pitched ball after loading the bases and forced in the deciding run.

Home runs by Barney McCosky and Rudy York sparked a four-run Tiger outburst which carried Detroit to a 4-1 decision over the Browns.

The National League program was confined to a pair of afternoon games, but in one of these St. Louis Cardinals walloped Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-2, and reduced the lead of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers to 6½ games.

It was the seventh straight triumph for the Cards, who are gathering steam for their important four-game showdown with the Dodgers next week. John Beazley pitched six-hit ball in registering his 15th win, while Stan Musial and Walker Cooper each cracked a two-run homer.

The Chicago Cubs routed Ray Starr and beat Cincinnati Reds, 6-3, to give Bill Lee his 13th mound success.

Two Greats Meet Once Again

Toronto Drops To 6th Place; Wings, Giants Tie

By the Associated Press.

Miscues played a prominent part in the outcome of all International League baseball contests last night.

Bobbles by Lynn (Pee-Wee) Myers, Lee (Jeep) Handley and Ed. Yount gave Baltimore Orioles two unearned runs as the Birds defeated Toronto Maple Leafs, 3-1.

Toronto's hard luck hurler, Nick Strincevich, also was the victim of his teammates' errors. By winning, Baltimore displaced the Leafs in the sixth place.

Syracuse's meal ticket, Charles (Red) Barrett hung up his 18th victory of the season as he throttled Montreal Royals on two hits 4-1. Barrett was deprived of his seventh shutout by first baseman Eddie Shokes, who mussed up a double-play. The victory lifted the Indians ½ game ahead of Buffalo.

Rochester Red Wings and Jersey City Giants fought to a 3-3 tie as dimout regulations halted play at the end of eight innings.

The Giants might have won the game if it weren't for an error by leftfielder Sid Gordon which let the Wings score two runs.

The league-leading Newark Bears defeated Buffalo Bisons 2-1 in the first game of a twin bill and then battled to a 1-1 tie as dimout regulations halted activity at the end of 11 innings.

A misplay by Lambert (Dutch) Meyer, who is being groomed for the second base job at Detroit, handed the Bears the victory.

A muff by Stirnweiss in the second game not only brought to an end a streak of 23 consecutive scoreless innings rung up by Milkman Jim Turner but also deprived Newark of a double triumph.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—One thing the war hasn't changed is the pre-season moaning of football coaches. . . . Here's a sample from Notre Dame's Frank Leahy, as relayed by tub-thumper Joe Petritz: "If we can get past Wisconsin in the opener, we may have another representative season. We'll consider it an excellent year if we can win six or seven of our 11 games."

Today's Guest Star

Dale Stafford, Detroit Free Press: "Before they go too far, the fall of 1942 crop of Detroit promoters should look up the definition of the noun probation. That's what they're on."

Jimmy Hatcher likely will fight Sammy Angott at New Orleans either Sept. 14 or 28. . . . Saverio Turiello, another of Al Weill's scrappers, who meets Fred Apostoli on the Norfolk police fight card Monday, has had battles the last four Mondays at Richmond, New Haven, Springfield and Providence. And a week after the Apostoli bout he goes against Ralph Zanelli at Providence again. . . . Lou Novikoff, who'll try anything Russian, sampled Vodka just once. "Then I thought I had made a mistake and had drained my kerosene lamp," he explains.

Quote, Unquote

When Bergen Junior College of Teaneck, N.J., announced the other day that it was suspending football activities for the duration, the announcement concluded: "Preparations for the next 11 will be started the day the United States Marines enter Tokyo."

Tweed Lad 14th In Family To Join

TWEED, August 22. — (ENS). — James O. Ward, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Ward of Tweed, has joined the Royal Canadian Engineers and is now stationed at Lansdowne Park, Ottawa. Jim went to camp at Connaught Ranges with the 2nd Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Reserve, but transferred to the R.C.E. active unit. He is the fifth consecutive generation of the Ward family to become affiliated with His Majesty's Forces. His father served overseas in the last war from 1914 to 1919 and was wounded five times, at Vimy, Passchendaele, and Ypres and spent considerable time in military hospitals. He has been incapacitated since his return from overseas.

Along with his uncles and cousins James is the fourteenth member of the Ward family to offer his services in the present conflict. Although only sixteen years of age, special permission was granted by his parents for him to transfer to the Active Army. The young soldier attended Tweed High School.

Charged with failing to attend military training in the Reserve Forces of the Dominion, Malcolm R. Rose of Tweed was fined $11.25, including costs, when his plea of guilty was accepted by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court on Thursday. It marked the first time such a conviction had been registered for failing to attend drill in Canada's Reserve Forces in local court. A similar charge was preferred against Thomas Lindale of Madoc.

Raid Not Too Hot To Rescue R.S.M.

By GLENN BABB,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Winston Churchill's dramatic travels and the magnificent adventure of Dieppe have relegated the war in Russia to smaller headlines this week but have done nothing to alter the fact that the one major front remains that along the Don and in the Caucasus foothills.

Comparatively the other fights are training bouts—preliminaries. There is nothing preliminary or tentative about the battle of the Don bend. It is make or break for keeps for the two greatest armies in the world.

Today's Moscow communique is one of the best for many days. It recites the usual list of battlefields where thousands of men are dying without any of the all too frequent admissions of retreat. But it would be a mistake to draw too much encouragement from a single half day's record. Only last midnight the Russians had to report a damaging series of setbacks: partial survival of a German force that had crossed the Don above Stalingrad; south of Krasnodar "our troops were forced to withdraw to new positions in one sector;" "the Germans advanced somewhat southeast of Pyatigorsk." Only in the Kelnikovski sector, where the southern claw of a Nazi pincer is reaching for Stalingrad, does the stubborn defence continue wholly successful.

Stalingrad has become the symbol of victory in this campaign. There is no blinking the fact that this great industrial city and communications centre, whose sentimental value to the Russians is almost as important as its strategic importance, is in serious peril. The tremendous battle for its possession, [illegible] forward in an obscurity little relieved by the communiques—either Russian or German—but the broad outlines of the struggle have been manifest.

From the northwest Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock, having conquered most of the Don bend, is engaged in a titanic effort to force a crossing of the river only 40 miles from the city. From the southwest another powerful armored and infantry force is attacking from the Kotelnikovski area. The Russian admission that not all the enemy who crossed the Don had been wiped out is ominous.

Stalingrad's hour comes just as her sister of the north completes the first year of one of the great sieges of history. It was a year ago to-day that Hitler's guns took Leningrad under bombardment and the siege lines were drawn about the former capital of the Czars. Russians and their Allies ask fearfully whether the city of Stalin can take its place beside the city of Lenin in the list of heroic last ditches. The answer must be tinged with grave doubts. The city on the Volga has none of the formidable natural barriers that have helped save the city on the Neva.

Meanwhile many questions bearing on this turning point in human affairs haunt an anxious world-wide public. The answers to most probably are as elusive to their leaders as to the rank and file. What of Marshal Timoshenko's reserves? Does abandonment of so much of the Caucasus and its wealth in oil mean the Red leader is trading territory for time while he holds to his primary objective, preservation of the Red Army as an intact fighting force? How far has Russia's striking power been diminished by the terrible losses of men, of industrial strength, of food-producing lands? Can Allied aid be sufficient to keep the Russians fighting effectively until the British and American armies are ready? Will winter come in time and will it, in the more southerly climates into which Hitler has now penetrated, be as stout an ally to the Rusians and all of us as it was a year ago?

OIL IN INDIA

BOMBAY—(CP)—Most oil refineries in India are running on large government and railway contracts for petrol, lubricating oils and axle oils. Started in 1915, the petroleum business has become one of India's major industries.

These Bells To Toll Hitler's Knell Made By German-Born Canadian

HIS BELLS GO DOWN TO THE SEA

Shown in his farm workshop just outside of Kitchener is Carl Stoermer, who makes most of the bells for the vessels built in Canada's shipyards. Born in Germany, Stoermer is a naturalized Canadian and brought with him to this country a trade known to only a few. He also makes ship's nameplates and is shown working on one in this photo. (Photo Public Information)

By BRUCE WEST,

Somewhere out on the heaving Atlantic, the ship's bell of a Canadian corvette tolls the hour and a sailor his face lashed with the wind and the spray, gratefully prepares to go below after a long spell on watch.

What the sailor and a good many other Canadians probably wouldn't know is that the melodious bell was manufactured in a little machine shop on a farm a mile and a half out of Kitchener, Ontario, by a craftsman from Germany.

Born in Leipzig district but a naturalized Canadian citizen several years before the outbreak of war, Carl Stoermer makes bells and nameplates for shipyards from coast to coast. His humming shop stands as a perfect example of how little plants all over Canada are being utilised to speed production.

Before leaving Germany, Stoermer headed a bell-making firm that employed forty skilled artisans. Although there was little demand for his type of craftsmanship in Canada before the outbreak of war, the shipbuilding expansion started orders pouring in. In a barn that formerly housed the live stock of the farm, he set up a foundry and machine shop.

The sand used as cores for his bell-moulds he gets from his own farm. Formerly it was believed that this special sand had to be imported from the United States. Now the experts are studying his methods to see whether Canadian sand can be used for other moulding purposes which at present require imported sand.

Most of his equipment is homemade. Perhaps the most ingenious item is his lathe. He obtains speed variations on his machine by using an old automobile transmission picked from the scrap heap. Unlike some of the larger war plants of the Dominion, he doesn't need any production engineers or efficiency experts. When he gets a little behind in his orders he simply shifts into high gear and the sparks begin to fly.

By BRUCE WEST

It isn't quite so luxurious as exclusive Camp Wicky-Wacky, but it's certainly lots of fun. So say the girls who have skipped summer camp this year to help the farmers harvest their abundant crops.

Several thousand are quartered this summer in buildings spread all over Ontario, putting in from nine to ten hours a day with the Farmerette Brigade of the Farm Service Force.

The luckiest batch drew a modern road-side hotel for their quarters, but the others are living in convertible buildings of all kinds. Some of them would have thrown up their hands in horror last summer if any one had suggested that they spend their holidays in a horse stable. Now they have discovered that even a horse stable, thoroughly cleaned and partitioned and decked out with curtains and new floors, can be a very comfortable summer home.

Pay $4.50 Room and Board

The girls, in fact, take great pride in their lodging places. For their room and three good meals a day they pay $4.50 a week provided they work the full six days. If rainy weather or other circumstances keep them away from the work for a day or more, their board bill is scaled down proportionately.

The writer visited one camp in the Niagara Peninsula where the girls were employed in the neighbouring fruit farms. Out on the farms they were whistling and singing and laughing as though they were attending a picnic instead of doing a hard day's work. All the time they were joking, their hands were moving and the fruit baskets were filling. The owner of the farm, who was pitching into the job with the girls, was the happiest one of the gang.

"Yes sir!" he said. "These girls are all right. They're doing a real job and I don't know how I'd have got along without them this summer."

The girls who were working in the black currant patches wore straw hats and overalls. It was explained that this was regulation attire. The orders call for straw hats in the open spaces and bandannas in the orchards.

The growers let the girls eat all the fruit they can hold. No, your wrong. It doesn't work out like the story about the youngster employed in the candy store. The girls, it [illegible] and keep right on eating as they go along. They taper down a bit after the first few days, of course, but they never stop.

The farmers don't mind. They believe it's better to have a few peaches or cherries eaten on the job than to have whole car loads rot for want of hands to pick them.

In some types of picking, the girl are paid so much a basket. In others it's a matter of straight daily or hourly pay. An average day's wage is about $2.50.

They Live On the Run

When the day's work is through, the girls are loaded into trucks and driven back to camp. It would be hard to imagine a healthier collection of youngsters. They hop out of the trucks and run to their rooms. Then they run from their rooms to the shower, after pausing long enough to slip out of their overalls and into bathrobes. Then they run from the showers back to their rooms. Everything is done on the run. This running business is part of the sheer exuberance they're able to display after ten hours of hard work.

When she comes to the farmerette camp, each girl must bring her own sheets, blankets, pillow cases, hand towels and other toilet articles. She must also bring two work uniforms, a sun hat, a bandanna, a pair of rubber boots, heavy shoes with low heels and one complete dress uniform:

Apart from promoting the camp spirit, this uniform serves another good psychological purpose. The girls come from families in all walks of life. If one were able to doll up in fancy sports clothes after the day's work while another wore shoddy clothing, the democratic aspect of the camp life might suffer. So they all dress alike and seem quite happy about the whole thing.

Among the farmerettes are a large number of English girls who were sent to Canada by their parents early in the war. The ones we spoke to seemed to be thoroughly enjoying life in the open air of Canada's farmlands.

Must Be In Good Health

Before going to camp, each girl must have a certificate of health from her family doctor. She is provided with transportation from her home to the camp, but must pay her own way when she returns.

From the moment they step into the camp, the girls learn that they have to look after themselves. They have to do their own laundry and make up their own lunch boxes. They must also make their own beds and keep their rooms tidy. All of this, on top of ten hours of farm work each day. But, say the girls, jitterbugging is also hard work, and there's no money in it.

Smiling Farmerettes

These smiling farmerettes personify the spirit of the hundreds of girls who are serving on farms this summer to help relieve the situation caused by an acute shortage of manpower all over the country. Some live in individual farms, others are quartered in camps located at central points in the various agricultural districts. On this farm in the Niagara Peninsula, dozens of farmerettes were busy picking plums.

Her 12th Birthday

No special celebration was planned but it was expected the Princess would hold a tea party for her playmates and receive gifts from her father and mother, her sister Princess Elizabeth, and other members of the Royal family.

On his second operational flight in North Africa, Lieut. O'Neill's plane was hit. He fell into the sea and swam 2½ miles to shore. He suffered injuries to arm and head. Eggs Advance Ten Cents In Two Weeks

Eggs on the local market today firmly held the recent general advance of about ten cents a dozen. During the last two weeks the price has improved at least ten cents a dozen, except at the ends, that is, for the smallest grade of peewees and the extra selects at the top.

Prices this morning ranged from 25 cents to 45 cents, but the bulk of the buying was around 36 to 40 cents, and even up to 42 cents. One woman was asking only 43 cents for her specially large grade, but the same sized eggs at other spots were 45 cents. The supply was ample under a brisk demand.

Chickens were more numerous than in recent weeks. Prices were generally 30 to 32 cents a pound. One woman asked 35 cents; and year-olds were 28 cents.

Tomatoes were 30 to 45 cents a basket. E. T. Minaker of Trenton quoted 30 cents for six quarts, and Pleasant View Gardens from Bowmanville wanted 45 cents for six qu'r'. He explained the higher price by saying that these tomatoes had been staked. Potatoes were unchanged at $1.75 a bag.

Foreign Experts See 2nd Front Possible

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 22—(AP)—Foreign military specialists expressed a belief yesterday that the Allied landing raid on Dieppe proved that a second front could be opened in France.

Essential to its success, these sources said, would be sufficient superiority in land-based planes, adequate transport facilities, and a strong element of surprise.

Published neutral descriptions of the recently completed German system of Channel fortifications indicated that a full-scale Allied invasion effort would cost heavily, but would have a chance of advancing to the Meuse and Rhine provided the defenders could be outweighed in men and materials.

A correspondent for the Socialist paper La Sentinelle who recently visited some of the fortified section said that even in the most exposed areas, the German defences along the coast of France, Belgium and Holland extend barely more five to six kilometres.

Want Pay Boost

CALGARY, Aug. 22—(CP)—The Canadian National Federation of Home and School approved a resolution at the closing session of a four-day convention last night which urged Departments of Education and School Boards in Canada to advance teachers' salaries to a level where they will compare favorably with wages paid in defence industries.

Other resolutions approved urged: A central federal bureau of education in Ottawa or near Ottawa, as a means of disseminating information to all provinces.

Federal aid to equalize educational opportunities all across Canada.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (AP)—Postmaster General Frank Walker Friday ordered publishers of "National Police Gazette" to show cause Sept. 1 why their second-class mailing privilege should not be revoked on the grounds of obscurity. Walker announced at the same time that the August, September, and October issues of the magazine, published in New York, had been ruled non-mailable.

War Work Group Donates $25 To War Victims

Within the circle of the Trent River Women's Institute there is a special group which goes under the name of the War Workers of Trent River, who have been most active in raising money for various war charities, from whom the Peterboro and District British War Victims Fund have on two former occasions received donations, and in this particular they have taken the lead for their district.

Now, for the third time they are heard from with a nice contribution of $25, which came to hand per Mrs. Harry Mann, the treasurer of this group, accompanied by a letter of very goodwill for the fund, holding out hopes of further aid for the sufferers from air raids over Britain in a like manner in the days that are to come. Needless to say, this expression is much appreciated and gives every encouragement to the fund management to carry on the good work on behalf of all concerned.

For the fourth time in as many weeks, William Taylor of Crawfords Grove has made a contribution to the fund, which represents the sale of flowers from his garden, and in this manner a total of $11.00 has thus come into the fund, demonstrating that he must have a pretty good flower garden, besides a generous impulse to turn in the fruits of his labor to help the people of Britain.

One nice personal donation of $10 is listed under the name of "A Friend" which does in practical terms very much describe the gift, and serve as an inspiration to many others who could lend a helping hand. The fund management hopes in the near future to have a number of lists devoted entirely to personal help given in a smaller or greater degree, and hopes for a ready response to help in this truly Peterborough and District effort to help the people of Britain. At the present moment just a little over $600 is required to complete the 19th donation of £300, which when made will bring the total sent from this city and district above the £10,000 mark expressing in very practical terms our admiration for the courageous manner in which the people of Britain have stood up to these horrible attacks from the air, as well as our sympathy for those who have suffered through them.

HARD LUCK BOYS

A number of Peterborough people coming in on the C.P.R. local Friday night were left to "cool" their heels for an hour and a half at Cavan when a water pump on the engine seized. The train was held up until a way freight engine could be brought out from Peterborough to haul the folks home the rest of the way. Being an unusually hot night there was a steady run on the cups at the water cooler to pass the time until this refused to work. Finally to add the final drop of bitter disillusionment to one of the railway official's cup, one of the passengers called out, "I thought this was the C.P.R." What the reply was, is not for publication.—J. S.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 22 (ENS)—Pleading guilty to a charge of consuming beer in an authorized beverage room while under the required age Elmer Mouncey, 17, of Roseneath was assessed $10 and $2.75 costs when he appeared in Campbellford police court before Magistrate O. A. Langley on Friday. Declaring he had no money the accused took the alternative of seven days in the county jail. The charge was laid by Police Constable W. Wellman of Hastings who said he had warned the youth on previous occasions to stay clear of the beverage room.

Churchill Mann Roberts Senior Officer

By ROSS MUNRO

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22.—(CP Cable)—Brig. Churchill Mann of Toronto was senior officer on Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts' headquarters staff which planned and carried out the Dieppe raid.

He was general staff office (first grade) of the force and had come from his senior appointment on another Canadian formation to go on the raid.

Maj. Peter Wright of Toronto was general staff officer (second grade).

Maj. John Hjalmarson of Winnipeg also was present.

All these officers returned safely to Britain.

Raid headquarters were established aboard a destroyer which sailed up and down the coast right under the nose of the Germans with other warships which constantly bombarded targets ashore.

Headquarters officers kept contact with the Canadian raiders after disembarkation by wireless and directed operations in that manner.

In addition to infantry units ashore at Dieppe there were Canadian sappers, who, like the others, suffered heavy casualties. They were a composite force drawn from various field companies and various parts of Canada.

It is not possible immediately to identify Royal Canadian Artillery gunners who took part as, like the Royal Canadian Engineers, they were a composite force.

Capt. Denis Whitaker Gets Back Safely

Among the Toronto officers who came safely through the Dieppe battle was Captain Denis Whitaker, grandson of the late W. H. Moore, K.C., of Peterborough. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy S. Whitaker, 31 Kilbarry Road, Toronto. His mother grew up in Peterborough and is remembered as Bertha Moore by friends of that time.

Captain Whitaker went overseas two years ago, and has never seen his baby daughter Gail, now twenty months old. His only brother, Patrick, is lieutenant overseas with the Toronto Scottish.

CURTAINS AFIRE.

Fire Chief George Gimblett reported that the cause had not yet been ascertained.

Dieppe Toughest Of Nazis Coastal Areas

BERNE, Aug. 22 (AP)—The Allied landing raid at Dieppe demonstrated foreign military experts said here yesterday that a second front can be opened in France—granted sufficient superiority of land-based planes, adequate transport and the proper element of surprise.

Published neutral descriptions of the recently completed Channel fortifications indicate, furthermore that a full-scale invasion effort would cost heavily, but that the Allies would have a chance of advancing to the Meuse and Rhine if they outweighed the Germans in men and material.

Neutral observers raised the question whether in view of the costly air battles over Dieppe Wednesday, Allied airpower has yet attained sufficient strength to give the necessary protection to full-scale landings.

The availability of transports for supplies from America to Britain and for supplies and troops to cross the Channel also appeared to be a major problem.

Four Miles Deep.

The Socialist newspaper La Sentinelle noted that "the psychosis of a second front has penetrated the spirit of the masses in Germany," and added that while propaganda is directed toward belittling its chances, the German High Command "is convinced that sooner or later the problem will put itself in a direct manner."

With this in mind, "the Germans have erected in haste bases of defense all along the coasts of occupied regions," the newspaper said.

Along the coast of France, Belgium and Holland, according to a correspondent of a Sentinelle who visited the zone, "even in places most exposed, the German disposition of defense extends barely more than five to six kilometres (three to four miles) in depth."

He wrote that in many places protected by the nature of the terrain no artificial defense system has been established.

Such breaches were described as numerous and extending sometimes for several miles. The defended sectors were likened to the French defense system in the north in May, 1940, with "a multiple line of spikes (presumably concrete barriers) and furrows of machine-gun nests supported by some armored fortresses."

Boulogne, Calais, Dunkirk and Ostend were reported to be strong points, guarded by powerful coastal batteries and anti-aircraft guns.

In contrast, the correspondent of La Sentinelle wrote: "The Germans have powerfully fortified the Meuse and Rhine, which would tend to prove little confidence in their coastal defense...."

One of the Germans' difficulties is that trained troops are not available for transfer to the coast, he wrote.

He estimated that the troops now in position in France, Belgium and Holland totalled about thirty divisions formed of "three distinct elements—young recruits of 19 to 20, ...insufficiently prepared and not inured to war; secondly, elements having fought in Russia and actually on leave after suffering particularly heavy losses in hard combats in the Donets, and finally, a greater number of the 'grand reserve'" (of an average age of 40 to 45 years).

Capt. G. Matchett Dieppe Casualty

Mis many Peterborough friends have been grieved to learn that Captain George Ellwood Matchett of Hamilton is officially reported killed in action in the Dieppe action. Captain Matchett was the youngest son of a former well known local citizen, M. W. Matchett, former principal of the East City Public School. Oscar S. Matchett and Stanley Matchett of Peterborough are uncles. Captain Matchett was a crack rifle shot, attracting attention by his fine shooting while a member of the cadet corps and he went to England with the Canadian Bisley team several years before the war. He was an officer in the Royal Highland Light Infantry of Hamilton and had been overseas over two years.

His parents in Hamilton, one brother Captain Roger Matchett in charge of the military dental hospital at Hamilton and two sisters, Mrs. William Short of Calgary and Mrs. J. C. Higgins of London survive.

US Slashes Again At Military Sports Program

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(AP).—All competitive football schedules at United States Army schools where air corps mechanics get their training have been cancelled in an order possibly presaging further cuts in the widespread military sports program.

Major-General Walter R. Weaver, commanding general, wrote the several school heads under his command that inter-school or inter-camp football would interfere too much with the urgent training of techincians needed for the air forces.

A War Department officer, speaking anonymously, represented Weaver as feeling the men "couldn't be good football players and at the same time learn to be good mechanics" in the six weeks' time allotted to their courses.

Commander Gene Tunney, navy director of physical training, also has come out for elimination of spectator sports in the service and the Undersecretary of War, Robert Patterson, said yesterday, in commenting on Tunney's stand, that constant study is being given to the cutting down of such activities.

There has been no effort to eliminate intra-mural sports, such as games beween units of one command.

Power Shortage For Ontario During Winter

PORT ARTHUR, Aug. 22—(CP).—Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, said that demand for electric power has overtaken the supply and that during the Winter the Hydro will face a power shortage in Southern Ontario.

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the Northwestern section of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, Dr. Hogg estimated the shortage in Southern Dntario in the Winter months will total 250,000 horsepower.

"To meet this shortage it is imperative that some restrictive measures be put into effect whereby certain non-essential uses of electricity will be curtailed," he said.

He stressed that there should be no failure in the supply of power to plane plants, shipbuilding yards, tank and gun factories, military training centres and scores of other activities engaged in essential war work.

The Dominion Power Controller, H. J. Symington, is establishing an equitable system of power regulation which would be applied so that plants engaged in war industry would be accorded preference, Dr. Hogg said. It is expected the initial restrictions will be put into effect some time next month.

"It is also expected, although I can give you no assurance of this, that the restriction will be imposed in the first place in power shortage areas which, in the case of Ontario, will be what we term the Southern Ontario system and the Georgian Bay system."

In outlining the province's power system, Dr. Mogg said the Ogoki diversion project in Northwestern Ontario is proceeding rapidly.

As far as construction was concerned, Ogoki water should be flowing in the Nipigon River by this time next year, he said. But the commission "has not yet received the necessary approval of this major project from the Dominion Government under the Navigable Waters Protection Act."

The project was designed to divert 4,000 cubic feet per second from the Ogoki to Lake Nipigon and the Great Lakes system, providing for an increase of about 290,000 additional horsepower.

MacQueen-McLeod Vows Taken at St. Paul's Church

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, adorned with many-colored gladioli and other garden flowers, the seats trimmed with hydrangeas and white ribbon, was the scene this afternoon for the wedding of Margaret Flora MacDonald McLeod, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McLeod, Hunter street, when she became the bride of William Douglass MacQueen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter B. MacQueen of Paris, Ontario. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. J. D. Smart, with Mr. Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., playing the wedding music, and Mrs. Howard Shackleton, sister of the bride, played a violin solo, "At Dawning" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was escorted down the aisle by the groom's father. She wore a graceful gown of white silk satin fashioned in torso style with a heavy yoke of white Swiss lace and long fitted sleeves ending in points over the hands. The long gathered skirt fell to the floor in a train. Her long veil of fine white bridal tulle fell from a pretty Mary Stuart cap of matching Swiss lace and she carried a shower bouquet of rapture roses and pink sweet peas. The bride made her own lovely gown.

She was attended by her three sisters, Miss Betty McLeod, Miss Jean McLeod and Mrs. Howard Shackleton of Oshawa, and the groom's twin sister, Mrs. Wesley Collins of Toronto. Miss Betty McLeod, as maid of honor, wore pink taffeta frock made with sweetheart neckline, long torso and full gathered skirt, and carried a cascade bouquet of premier roses. Miss Jean McLeod, Mrs. Shackleton and Mrs. Collins wore similar dresses; Miss McLeod in powder blue and Mrs. Shackleton and Mrs. Collins in pale blue. All wore Dutch caps of matching taffeta, and matching lace mittens and carried nosegays of briarcliffe roses, cornflowers and sweet-peas.

The bride wore a pearl necklace belonging to her mother, and the attendants also wore pearls.

Mr. Walter MacQueen, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Jim Size of Hamilton, Mr. Allan Mackenzie and Mr. Wesley Collins of Toronto.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the Empress Hotel, where the bride's mother received guests wearing a pale green redingote ensemble with brown felt hat and brown accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother, who assisted her, wore a gown of delph blue crepe and lace with a hat of natural leghorn and matching accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec. For travelling Mrs. MacQueen chose a frock of blue printed silk, a small flowered hat, navy accessories, and a corsage of pink roses and sweet peas. They will live in Peterborough.

Theatre Highlights In Manhattan

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK August 22 — (CP). —Disdainful as ever of the traditions of the theatre, William Saroyan gave the new Broadway season its start this week with two one-act plays which left critics and public alike bewildered and unenlightened.

The colorful Armenian wrote, produced and directed both playlets assembling the weirdest group of actors ever to cross a Manhattan stage. Billed as the first production of a full season of "The Saroyan Theatre," the offerings were subjected to a merciless panning by several of the New York critics.

"Across the Board on To-morrow Morning" is the first number. The title is racing parlance, meaning a horse called To-morrow Morning is backed to win, place and show. In allegory Saroyan is toasting To-morrow, musing on the unrealities of the world, and picturing life when the glue which holds its illusions together runs out.

The scene is a Manhattan night club, through which stroll the strange Saroyan characters whom playgoers first came to know in the prize-winning "The Time of Your Life." There is richness in Saroyan's characterizations, his lines are bright and fresh and seldom tiresome, yet when it is over the whole things adds up to very little.

The second of Saroyan's one-act plays, "Talking to You," concerns a kindly prize-fighter [illegible] cannot bring himself to hurting anyone who is good. That being so he loses his fight. Much of the action is taken up by a developing friendship between the fighter and a little deaf boy. It's all highly visionary and hard to follow.

Whatever the merits of the plays, their production has served to bring to public attention a negro actor of the first order, Canada Lee. Seen last season as a killer in Orson Welles' production of "Native Son," Mr. Lee shows himself to be an actor of depth and versatility, with a voice of wide range and pleasing qualities.

"The New Moon," Sigmund Romberg's romantic operetta which ran for more than 500 performances in 1928-29 and later was shown in Montreal and Toronto, was revived this week in Joseph S. Tushinsky's summer series in Carnegie Hall.

Wilbur Evans, formerly of the Vancouver Civic Opera, plays the lead, and Ruby Mercer sings the ever popular "Lover Come Back to Me." "Wanting You" and "Marianne" are other old favorites in Rombergs tuneful score.

Rubber Salvage Campaign Begins August 24

During the month of July, the Salvage Committee of the Civic War Service Council disposed of 23,070 lbs. of scrap paper, 16,820 lbs. of newspaper, 6,620 lbs. of corrugated paper, 16,380 lbs. of iron, 426 lbs. of rags, 421 lbs. of Satinette, 343 lbs. of old mattresses. The total proceeds from the sale of salvage for the month was $491.17. July Salvage collections have been better than was expected and there has been plenty of help.

The Salvage Committee urges all citizens to note that all salvage prices and margins are set by the government and that dealers are allowed only a certain percentage of profit.

From August 24 to September 8 a nation-wide rubber campaign will be staged in the rural districts. In Peterborough the City Council, in co-operation with the Civic War Service Council, will provide a fenced off area in the market square, where farmers may deposit their scrap rubber.

On October 2 the weekly Salvage clean-up will begin. Brown paper, bags, scrap-paper are all urgently needed. Citizens are urged to wrap garbage in newspaper and to send all scrap paper to the salvage.

MORE IS NEEDED

A recent appeal for scrap rubber brought in thousands of pounds of old tires, tubes, crepe soles, toys, etc. Every ounce of scrap rubber which can be collected is required in order that Canada's armed forces may not lack supplies.

DOROTHY DIX

WIDOW ADVISED TO STOP SACRIFICING FOR CHILDREN.

Even After Marriage They Will Accept as Long as Parents Give.

DEAR MISS DIX: For twenty-two years I have been a widow. During that time I have reared and educated two children who are married now and have homes of their own. The question in my mind is what to do for the good of us all. At present I am self-supporting, and will be for many years to come. I never intend to be dependent upon my children. They have a right to their own lives and will be happier to themselves.

I am wondering whether I should consider marriage, or continue to work and make an effort to save enough for my old age when I can no longer support myself? But when I think of marriage I realize that it would change things between my children and myself, and if they ever needed help I might not be able to give it to them. I have shared everything that I have had with them ever since they married, and I know that no husband would accept a situation of that sort ,and I would not expect him to.

Should I consider my children further or should I think of myself? I get very lonely for companionship. W.V.

ANSWER: I think that whether you marry or stay single you should consider yourself. Certainly you are not doing that, nor are you laying up any thing for your old age when you are giving every cent that you can spare to your married children. That is not best for you, nor is it best for them. You should force them to stand on their own feet and support their own families. Even an English sparrow has sense enough to push its young out of the nest when the time comes for it to use its own wings.

As long as parents give to their children the children will take, because they have been accustomed to it; they think of Father and Mother only as a source of supply. But when Father and Mother fail to lay up something for their old age, the children especially the children's husbands or wives, consider it a great hardship to have Father and Mother live with them. Think that over. You have seen it happen too often to others not to know how tragic will be your situation if you, too, become a dependent mother.

Much to Be Considered.

As to the wisdom of your marrying, that depends upon so many things that would make it either advisable, or like jumping from the frying pan into the fire. Is there some definite man who wants to marry you, or are you just considering marriage in general from the point of view of wishful thinking? If there were some ideal man of your own age and social class, whom you have known for a long time and with whom you have had a pleasant friendship so that you know you would be congenial companions on the last lap of your life's journey and if the man could give you a good home and leave you enough money to live on if he died, and if he had no encumbrances in the way of married children who would resent their father's taking a wife, I should say go to it And God bless you.

But if, on the contrary, you have no common background with the man and if he is poor and would have nothing to give you I should say it would be the wildest folly to marry him, because the chances would be that you would have to

The Crowning Hat Style

Made of bright blue soft felt, this hat with its becoming visor brim has a crown which can soar or be poked into a squashed drape. Black grosgrain in trim; hair must be sleek to wear it.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS is the newest crown in fall millinery, one which makes a hat its owner's individual affair, since it toots up or crushes down to becoming lines with a deft poke. With it one can achieve the backward slant of a high crown, somewhat like that which the Goddess of Liberty wears, and which is a coming convention in millinery.

This designer has put variations of the adjustable crown into many of his hats; likewise, he has faceted the idea in another direction by making some helmet cloches in such a way that if the lady wishes she can turn the whole lid upside down, and wear her hat as a Breton sailor with upturned brim.

continue with your job and support him and, in addition, would have to nurse him and put up with his cranky ways.

Don't forget that you can hang on to your job for probably many years, but if you lose it, at your age you couldn't get another. Think over all these angles of your case before you make a decision.

ONLY SALVATION IS FLIGHT.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a young man, 21 years of age. I have been going with a girl for nearly two years and she is determined to marry me whether or no, but I am not ready to marry and wouldn't marry even a king's daughter because I am too young and I have seen too much of this young married life among my friends, most whom are sorry they married. However, this girl has told people that she is going to get me, so what can I do?

It doesn't do any good to tell her that I won't marry her. She just won't listen. SANDY.

ANSWER: Well Sandy, your only hope is in flight. Beat it while the going is good. Enlist in the army. That gives you a good out. And, believe me, the enemies' bullets are not so dangerous as is a girl who has the marrying complex.

It will be in vain for you to plead your youth. She will tell you that youth is the time of love and romance and anyway, that is an objection which time will remove. Nor will it do any good to tell her that you are poor and not able to support a family. She will argue that two can live cheaper than one and that she is willing to live on bread and cheese and kisses. The first thing you know you will be buying a wedding ring on the instalment plan. And you will be paying for it the balance of your life.

Take it from me, son no man is foxy enough to outwit a girl who has made up her mind to have him. If he stays around in her vicinity, she will snare him sure, no matter how warily he walks among her traps. His only salvation is flight. In your case absence of body is better than presence of mind. You may be able to outsprint this girl, but you can never outwit her.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a woman in my late thirties. Have been married thirteen years and have two children. My husband has a very responsible position. Makes an excellent salary and provides very well for us. But on several occasions he has had affairs with other women.

They have always been passing fancies but at the present time he is having an affair with a young married woman who is working in his office. She is attractive and he apparently has fallen very hard for her. I hear that she brags about how she has taken him from me. This hussy's husband works at night so he does not suspect her duplicity. What shall I do? Shall I tell my husband ALL and ask him what he intends to do? Or should I appeal to this girl's husband to help me break up the affair? D.M.

ANSWER: Don't call for a showdown from your husband. It gives him too good a chance to say that he wants a divorce. Ask the woman's husband to help you break up the affair. That will give you an ally. He probably will give her a talking to that will bring her to her senses and make her realize she can't have a husband to support her and a boy friend to take her out and give her good times.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR ARMY?

(36) .303 MACHINE GUN

The Vickers medium machine gun has been used with remarkable success by the British and Canadian forces for many years. It is capable of a high rate of accurate fire, and is water-cooled, a fact which makes it possible for it to be fired over a long period of time. One of the chief advantages of the Vickers gun is its adaptibility; and it may even be fired at targets which cannot be seen by its operators. It produces a cone of fire which is devasting, and is used to cover large areas of ground suspected of harbouring enemy troops.

This Week In Radio

She may talk about you! If you hear a radio commentator telling all Canada why your next-door neighbor hasn't been home on wash days recently, or some equally intimate and local news behind the news, you'll be listening to "They Tell Me," with Canada's famous Claire Wallace. And if she does tell you about someone in your town (maybe yourself) you can be sure that it is because there is a twist to the story that will interest every woman in Canada. Claire Wallace has risen to top rank in Canadian radio through more than seven years of continuous broadcasting. Now she broadcasts coast to coast for first time. You can hear her at 1.45 p.m., CBL, Monday through Friday. Assisting is her indispensable announcer, the jovial Todd Russell, sometimes with news, sometimes with fun. Claire Wallace digs out the stories that no one else gets. Now she has arranged to get those stories out of every part of Canada. Claire Wallace is no "arm-chair" reporter. She spent one day as a department store detective. That was one story. She put a sly "want ad" in the paper, and got a story about 250 Toronto gigolos who answered it. She is the only woman who ever spent a night alone in Toronto's 98-room Casa Loma. She did it for a wager (and a story), and declares the noises of the empty castle nearly scared her stiff. Her secretary, who lost the wager and stayed in a car at the gate all night, was plenty stiff. But you can expect anything when you go story-hunting with Claire Wallace. The only time she has ever been known to be lost for words was at Bermuda. That time she put on a diving suit to explore the underwater coral reefs... and almost strangled. Now she'll tell stories of Canadian women from coast to coast... in her own amazing way.

Jack Benny and his gang of topnotch troupers will sign off the all-star patriotic NBC-Office of War Information program, Victory Parade, on Sunday, Aug. 23, over NBC at 5.30 p.m., CWT.

Substituting for the touring Phil Harris will be the orchestra of Meredith Willson, composer, conductor and maestro deluxe of two NBC coast-to-coasters. All other Benny regulars—Mary Livingstone, Dennis Day, Don Wilson and Rochester—will be on hand for the show.

The Victory Parade series, one of the outstanding great radio features built for the war effort, was made possible by the artists, writers, directors, advertising agencies, the National Broadcasting Company and its affiliated stations who donated their services.

Lionel Barrymore, grand old man of the screen, served as "the voice of the government."

Helen Traubel, generally hailed as successor to Kirsten Flagstad since the Norwegian soprano's departure from the United States, will make her first appearance on the Telephone Hour Great Artists' Series, Monday, August 24 (NBC, 8.00 p.m., CWT).

The Metropolitan soprano will sing "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls" from Balfe's "Bohemian Girl"; Mendelssohn's "On Wing of Song," "Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind," by Ilgenfritz, and "I'm Wearin' Awa, To the Land o' the Leal," by Foote.

Before school opening be sure to have your children's eyes examined. Prepair them for the long year of close study which is ahead.
If the examination shows that lenses are needed we can prescribe correctly— if it is just exercise treatment to strengthen the eyes, we have the proper equipment—and if your child does not need lenses we will tell you.
Proper lenses may mean the difference between high marks and just a pass—don't put it off —make an appointment today.

POPULAR GIRL IS SURE OF ETIQUETTE

"Did I Do Something Wrong?"

That ghastly feeling that you've done something wrong, that people are laughing at your (or wincing!) may sometimes be perfectly right.

People DO look down on you when you commit some obvious breach of etiquette.

Like walking across a dance-floor alone! After a dance a girl who knows what to do asks her partner to take her back to her friends or wherever she may wish to go.

And a well-bred man, of course, will never leave a girl in the middle of the dance floor — any more than he'd give his order first in a restaurant—or neglect to offer his arm to his girl when crossing a crowded street or getting out of a car.

The popular girl knows her part is to receive such courtesies graciously, not with a crude "Don't bother." That's why she's dated, rushed!

You could be, too, if you were sure of the rules. Our 32-page booklet tells both girls and men how to act on dates—whether dancing, dining, motoring, at the theatre or sports events. Tells what to say in introductions, on the telephone. Discusses office and travel etiquette, petting.

For your copy of "Etiquette for Young Moderns" send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

ALSO A PSYCHIC BID

"EVERYBODY knows that a bid made by a player who has nowhere near the holding indicated by it is a psychic bid intended to mislead the opponents. By the same token, a pass with a hand containing plenty of strength for a bid, plus perhaps some additional, is also psychic, for the purpose of misleading the opponents into thinking the hand is weak. A player who uses either of these measures must be careful in the later bidding to protect his own side from the consequences of his action, if he can.

North: ♠ A J ♥ A 6 ♦ Q J 6 3 2 ♣ K Q J 5

West: ♠ K 8 7 6 ♥ Q 5 3 ♦ A K 8 4 ♣ 6 4

East: ♠ 10 3 ♥ J 9 7 4 2 ♦ 9 5 ♣ 10 9 3 2

South: ♠ Q 9 5 4 2 ♥ K 10 8 ♦ 10 7 ♣ A 8 7

What a terrific lecturing West took after this hand was played at Table 1. He had started with what he considered a "smart" pass of his good hand. East, thinking him weak, stuck in a psychic overcall, which West should later have read, after his vulnerable opponents went on to game. But, with his own strength concealed, he reckoned he was in ambush and so made a very dangerous double—a very costly one, when coupled with the playing he did.

East led the heart 4 to the 8, Q and A. The spade A won, the J was ducked by West, the heart 10 was finessed, the spade Q fell to the K, and West had a chance now to try one of his top diamonds. He did not, however, but led the 4 of the suit, which dummy's 10 won. The spade 9 and 5 were now good for tricks, also the heart K, and four clubs finished the play, giving North three extra tricks doubled.

Where West made his natural opening, of either a spade or a diamond as shown at Table 2, North and South also got into 3-No Trumps and made their game without any difficulty, but scored nothing comparable, as they were not doubled and did not take all of those surplus tricks.

Your Week-End Lesson

If your left-hand opponent makes a takeout or informative double over your original suit bid, your partner redoubles, and your right-hand opponent then bids a suit, what principle applies to the action you now should take? In other words, what is the message conveyed to you by your partner's redouble? What does it tell you to do with respect to a bid by the player on your right?

Labor Shortage Affecting Dairy Industry

Two items of particular interest to the public were mentioned by Bill Ovens, of Campbell's Dairy, in his address to Kiwanians Friday, in his description of the problems that war has created for the dairy industry. He said that this year should see a surplus of cheese in Canada as they have plenty for the British market and loads to spare. In commenting on the butter situation, he said that it was the one and only dairy product that he could see might possibly be rationed, because the amount being made so far this year has dropped considerably.

The Dairy industry is the largest in the world and exceeds the great steel and automobile industries, both as to capital invested, the number of people employed and the annual sales. Mr. Ovens stated that the dairy companies were not feeling quite as much hardship over the control system as perhaps other industries were experiencing because the fluid milk industry has been under the direction of the Ontario Milk Control Board since 1934, and so the control from the War Time Prices Board is nothing new and they have been hardened to it. Since 1934 the Milk Control Board has had complete jurisdiction over the volume and selling price, and the taking of an employee from another dairy company was rigidly controlled.

Total milk production in Canada has increased by millions of pounds, but the acute problem is that of help. Men are pulled off the farms for one thing and another, and in many cases there is just one older person left to try and keep things going. The speaker paid high tribute to the farmers who he said had met everything with flying colours.

Too Heavy For Women

"Another main problem is that of the hours worked in a dairy. In the dairies employees work on an average of 14 hours a day in a seven-day week, 365 days in the year, and there is a more serious thing affecting it now, that of the acute shortage of help. Delivering milk is a young man's job and would be very difficult for a woman, because the average case of milk weighs 81 pounds and there is a lot of heavy lifting. Older men are not as good as the young ones. But it may be that eventually we'll have to employ women, but I don't know how it will be worked."

The speaker also spoke at some length on the problems that rationing created. During the first year of the war, dairy companies were warned to put in any equipment that they would be needing in the next four or five years, and in many cases this meant a tremendous outlay of money. Stainless steel is rationed along with glass bottles. In regard to the bottles, dairies can only get their 1941 requirements, and since glass is only manufactured by two companies in Canada, one in Hamilton and one in Montreal, and there is a great demand for glass in war work, this throws a very heavy burden on all concerned.

Supplying the British market has fallen 100 per cent. on the shoulders of Canadian dairymen, Mr. Ovens said. Formerly Great Britain got a good deal of her dairy products from New Zealand, Australia and Denmark. Now all this has been absorbed by the Canadian Dairy Industry. In the first six months of 1942, there have been 96,000,000 pounds more of milk produced over the same period in 1941. While this figure looks impossible because of the number of cattle being shipped across the line, it is brought about by the farmers working longer hours and giving better feeding.

"Cheese to the people of Britain is like bread and butter to the people of this country and to date we have produced 33,000,000 pounds more cheese over the same period last year in this country. The reason for the possible rationing of butter is that cheese factories are paying a bonus to farmers who send their stuff into them and quite naturally they would rather send it there under the circumstances than to the places where butter is manufactured."

During the question period Mr. Ovens was asked whether the restriction on soft drinks at certain hours in the army camps had made any difference in the demand for milk. He replied that it had made a tremendous increase in the amount of milk used and this had thrown another heavy burden on the industry's shoulder, but that it was fairly well organized now.

AFTER GREAT ALLIED RAID

A wounded member of the British commando forces is shown chatting to a comrade at an English home port after the return across the Channel from the rip-roaring raid on the German-held fortified port of Dieppe. Canadian, British, U.S. Ranger troops and Fighting French commandos were in the undertaking, which was announced as successful, all objectives having been achieved. The commandos brought back prisoners and souvenirs of the assault.

COMMANDOS RETURN FROM DIEPPE

Leaving behind the wreckage of many German military installations and a badly-scared German garrison, tough commandos are shown as they arrived at their home port somewhere in England, after the great Allied raid on Dieppe, France. It was largely a Canadian show and many of the best known Canadian regiments were represented. For the first time the commandos were joined by U.S. Ranger troops.

"During the darkness only hand-to-hand fighting was possible," the communique said, "but with the break of day the Marines were able to manoeuvre. While one battalion held the front line another battalion moved to a flank and drove the then withdrawing Japanese to the beach.

Only 30 Live Through It

"The action continued until late afternoon. Of the 700 Japanese, 670 are dead, the rest prisoners. Marine losses were 28 killed and 72 wounded."

Marines in the Solomons, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift, U.S.M.C., thus "added another page to their history of outstanding achievement," the communique noted.

The communique also told of a marine patrol and a Japanese detachment in the Solomons last Wednesday, in which the Americans lost only six killed and 13 wounded while wiping out the enemy unit of 92 officers and men, who continued resistance "until the last man was killed."

Maj. Roosevelt, who in November, 1940, left film producing in Hollywood for active service in the Marine Corps, was second in command of the detachment which raided Makin Island Aug. 17. The commander was Lt.-Col. Evans F. Carlson, while Cmdr. John. W. Haines, U.S.N., directed the entire operation which was covered by fleet units.

Admiral Nimitz said the Marines made a successful landing and accomplished their objective of destroying seaplane installations. Following the action, the force withdrew, the admiral said, giving a different version than the Tokyo radio which broadcast that a landing force of about 200 Americans "had been repulsed."

"Known enemy losses inflicted by the Marines are at least 80 Japanese killed, radio installations and stores destroyed and one large and one small seaplane destroyed on the water," the communique said.

Japs Bomb Own Men

Losses were suffered by the enemy in heavy bombing attacks dealt by their own confused aircraft which arrived from other bases.

"Ships of our expedition gunned and sank one small transport and one gunboat," the communique said. "Considering the nature of this operation our forces suffered only moderate losses."

None of the officers in charge of the raid was on the casualty list, Admiral Nimitz said.

Makin Island is the most northerly island of the British-owned Gilbert group, and is one of the bases attacked last January when an American naval force struck in the Gilbert and Marshall Islands.

Three hundred miles north of Makin lies the Japanese base at Jaluit on the Marshall Islands, Japanese-owned. Jaluit and the further north Japanese bases at Taroa and Wotje in the Marshalls, also were hammered in the January raid.

tion were declared knocked out of action and about 300 Germans killed in a battle against an unyielding Soviet front.

New Russian withdrawals were recorded south of Pyatigorsk and Krasnodar, but the Soviet Information Bureau said Red Army mortar crews of one unit killed more than 1,000 German officers and men in three days and destroyed 12 tanks and a number of trucks.

Red Army men on the northwestern front—part of an area in which the Russians have been probing on the offensive—were reported to have driven the Germans from a populated place, killed several hundred and destroyed six German tanks and four enemy blockhouses.

Lines Still Intact.

A midnight communique indicated no abatement of the peril in the two-day thrust against Stalingrad, but the eighth week of Field Marshal Fedor von Bock's big push was ending with lines of the Red army still intact.

In the central Caucasus, German detachments assigned to the drive toward the Grozny and Baku oil fields were reported repelled yesterday southeast of Pyatigorsk.

Field dispatches said this fighting centred along a 50-mile asphalted highway toward Nalchik, itself 100 miles west of Grozny.

Natural defences of the Caucasian foothills appeared still to be behind the Russians conducting a fighting retreat south of Krasnodar, German-occupied Kuban River port. Soviet soldiers withdrew again in one sector, the communique said. More than 2,000 Germans were reported killed by a Russian unit in three days.

(A Soviet dispatch quoted by the BBC said several hundred German parachute troops were slain in a two-hour battle before Novorossisk, emergency base of the Red navy's Black Sea fleet on the Caucasian coast 60 miles southwest of Krasnodar. CBS recorded the British broadcast).

Soviet bombers and naval vessels hammered away at Hitler's factories and ships and a broadcast beamed to western European peoples said, "A great United Nations offensive against Germany is now being prepared."

Red Raiders Hit Warsaw.

A large force of Russian bombers raided war industries of Warsaw, East Prussia and Upper Silesia on Thursday night and left explosions and fires behind, it was announced.

Red Navy men were credited with sinking a 15,000-ton German tanker in Baltic waters and a minesweeper and two patrol boats in the Barents Sea.

The mid-night bulletin contained no direct reference to previously-announced German attempts to establish a bridgehead on the Don bend, reporting simply that "in the area southest of Kletskaya (80 miles northwest of Stalingrad) our troops repulsed fierce enemy attacks."

Concerning the southern arm of the Nazi pincer, it said:—

"Northest of Kotelnikovski (95 miles south of Stalingrad) repeated heavy attacks by tanks and motorized infantry were repelled. In another sector the enemy sent 100 tanks into an attack. Only a few succeeded in breaking through. The infantry which followed the tanks was cut off by Soviet troops. Its annihilation is now proceeding."

A vain attack on Russian positions in a settlement on the west bank of the Upper Don near Varonezh was declared to have cost the Germans about 200 dead.

a field wireless set keeping in communication with headquarters and passing on latest information as the Germans approached.

In their camp in Southern England some officers who came back told me the story of the South Saskatchewan Regiment in fighting in France, the fury of which I saw for myself as a correspondent with the landing force.

They were Maj. J. E. McRae, Weyburn, Sask.; Capt. F. W. Hayter, Alameda, Sask., the medical officer whom everyone praised; and Lieuts. Ross McIlveen, Gull Lake, Sask.; John Edmundson, Estevan, Sask.; L. L. Dickin, Saskatoon and G. B. Buchanan, Medicine Hat, Alta.

The Saskatchewan troops landed at 5 a.m. right at Pourville. They were the first Canadians ashore and scrambled over a 10-foot seawall and immediately occupied a section of the town. Detachments went through buildings cleaning out Germans.

One company pushed southwest of Pourville and smashed Nazi motor transport sheds and gun positions and later this same company with a platoon and a half of Camerons repelled attacks by a whole German battalion that came up from the south. This action lasted two hours.

Headquarters was established in the town which was constantly under fire from German mortars and artillery one mile to the southeast. Nazi machine-guns on the headlands kept firing down the main street.

A company attacked down the road leading inland in a southeasterly direction and was stopped by fire from a pillbox a few hundred yards outside the town. A platoon took cover behind a road block 20 yards from the pillbox from which the Germans were firing.

Corporal Fixes It

Pte. Charlie Sawden of Consul, Sask., looked over the situation and told Cpl. Charlie Devlin of Lucky Lake, Sask.: "If somebody will hold my rifle I'll knock hell out of those guys."

He slipped forward from cover of the road block with Nazis pegging shots at him all the time, made the pillbox and chucked a hand grenade through one of the firing slits. "We didn't stop to see how many Charlie killed in there but firing certainly stopped," Devlin said.

Later, as Devlin led a section in an attack on some inland guns Sawden had his leg broken by a Nazi bullet.

"We carried him down into a hollow and used our bayonets as splints to fix up his leg," said Devlin. "Then we went on to make another attack. Charlie was picked up on the way back. He's in hospital in England now and doing okay."

In mid-morning a machine-gun post on a clifftop caused the westerners some trouble and Col. Merritt attacked it was a sergeant and two men.

"We crawled up on the cliff behind the colonel and me and the other guy covered the pillbox with a Bren gun," said Pte. Les Thrussell of Weyburn. "The colonel and the sergeant went forward and wrecked the pillbox with grenades."

Lieut. Buchanan said that when the colonel came back to the unit's headquarters he told him with a boyish grin. "I just bombed out a pillbox. Try it some time before breakfast. I recommend it."

True Nazi Tactics

The South Saskatchewans had a tragic experience with Nazi treachery. A detachment surrounded a machine-gun post and the Germans waved a white flag. The Canadians advanced to take some prisoners and the Nazis opened fire, immediately killing all of them.

"We now know the truth of the statement there is only one good German and that's a dead one," said Lieut. Buchanan.

Units of the South Saskatchewan had a rocky time on their withdrawal when the Nazis closed in and machine-gunned them from high points. The tide was running and the boats couldn't get in closer than 150 yards, forcing the Canadians to walk or swim out to them.

The heroes in the eyes of the men participating in the assault were stretcher bearers. "They did wonderful work looking after the wounded and getting them to the boats," said Lieut. Dickin. "They carried men through water up to their necks time and again and came back for more."

The Germans captured were all eastern-front veterans and Dickin said they were "young men grown old."

"They were cynical, tired and fed up with war," he added.

Caucasus Crisis Near As Germans Push On

This map shows the vast territory gained by the German armies since the start of their drive on the Russian Caucasus, vital industrial, farm and oil-producing area. Now that the Germans have succeeded in crossing the Kuban river at two points, the last strong natural fortification they will encounter, military experts voice grave doubts as to the ability of Russians to save the Caucasus from the withering German onslaught.

The accident occurred at a bend in the road immediately south of Hoard's when the two trucks crashed together with terrific force that sent gravel spraying forward from the one vehicle right through the windshield of the second. One truck was owned by the Lennox Construction Company of Napanee and was headed towards Campbellford with four yards of gravel on it. Bruce Lashar of Roblin was the driver. The other truck, owned by the Trent Dehydrated Co. Ltd. of Campbellford, was empty at the time of the accident and was driven by James Forestell, Campbellford. Both drivers were able to proceed to their homes after receiving medical attention. Constable D. M. Carruthers who investigated declared both trucks were practically beyond repair.

Angered Britons Really Guard Liberties

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—Civil liberties in England are guarded by a zealous Parliament and by a people "fundamentally angry" for one of the few times in their long history.

Sir Walter Monckton, one-time controller of censorship for Great Britain, and later British information chief at Cairo, made this statement yesterday in the course of an interview at the Royal York Hotel. He is one of England's most eminent counsel.

"When I say fundamentally angry," said Sir Walter, "I mean that the British people have been stirred as rarely before by naked, Nazi philosophy of world domination. In the first Great War the Germans were pretty bad specimens, in the view of the Britisher, but there was no attempt to impose a political philosophy on the world as is being attempted today.

"Freedom of speech and freedom from capricous internment are principles which find ever-watchful guardians in the Parliament and in the people themselves," continued Sir Walter, who is scheduled to address the American Bar Association at Detroit, Monday. "Internment cases are raised in Parliament and there is full and free discussion. The same applies to censorship."

People Guard Freedom

Sir Walter saw little likelihood of a totalitarian regime emerging in England, reared on the foundation of wartime controls. The people of the Mother Country, face to face with an evil which threatened their way of life, were willing, even eager, to yield many of their precious liberties to an overriding authority, but they would not permit for a moment the prolongation of government controls beyond the point where they were no longer necessary.

Press censorship had evolved into a fairly smooth-operating organization, and there was every reason to believe that the system was successful in pleasing the press and the public and, at the same time, keeping valuable information out of enemy hands, Sir Walter said.

Censorship Problems Differ

As an illustration of his view that censorship differs in various countries, Sir Walter said that in Egypt censorship was an Anglo-Egyptian affair, and was more strict than in England. Different problems from those existing in England were responsible.

In England, freedom of speech, the principle of permitting everything to do that does not give information or assistance to the enemy, is well protected," Sir Walter declared. "Although sometimes opinion will conceal fact. Only two newspapers in England have been suppressed since the outbreak of war, one of them the Daily Worker. I think that is an excellent record.

"Freedom of opinion is rigidly adhered to, and I can't think of more than half-a-dozen cases since the war started where action has been taken because of flagrant abuse of this right."

Freedom of action, another phase of civil liberties, was curtailed today, and there were few, if any, complaints. The people did not regard it as an invasion of their rights because they wanted to be told where they could do the most good in the common cause.

There was another freedom, that of freedom from arrest. Today there existed in England a body named after the distingushed jurist, Sir Norman Birkett. Prior to its formation, it was known as the Advisory Committee of the Home Secretary, and was appointed under the emergency regulations.

BATTLE FOR STALINGRAD NEARING SUPREME TEST

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Aug. 24—(AP).—The Russians battled resolutely today in the narrow, flat corridor between the Don and the Volga to halt German forces which finally had consolidated a river crossing and struck out for Stalingrad, probably only 40 miles away.

Another thrust at the great industrial city moved slowly ahead at terrific cost on the Kotelnikovski sector southwest of Stalingrad along a railway leading from the Black Sea.

The mid-day communique reported a violent struggle southeast of Kletskaya where the Germans had reached the east bank of the Don. Tanks which ferried the placid river constituted the greatest threat to Stalingrad.

The exact location of the tank crossing—established only after Russian artillery and planes had destroyed four previous pontoon bridges—was not disclosed, but the Germans have been attacking most heavily in the Don elbow, 40 miles from Stalingrad and the Volga.

Russian forces remained on the west side of the river, despite the enemy breach and near Kletskaya itself were counter-attacking to relieve pressure. The lines on the outer defences of Stalingrad appeared to be highly mobile with both armies manoeuvring swiftly for position.

A Soviet tank detachment was sent against the flank of the German force northeast of Kotelnikovski and seven German machines were destroyed and 200 Germans killed, the mid-day communique said.

The struggle for Stalingrad appeared to be nearing the supreme test, Russian reports indicated, as a new crossing of the Don was forced southeast of Kletskaya by the Germans. The Russians were fighting stubbornly to push these Germans into the river and destroy the bridgehead.

In another sector of the Kletskaya area, Russian troops broke into an enemy position during the night and with bayonets and hand grenades, killed more than 100 Germans and destroyed a radio station and other equipment, the communique said.

Darker In Caucasus.

A tank group, which the Germans ferried across the Don at the time of their new crossing, was regarded as a serious threat to Stalingrad.

The tanks were taken across under cover provided by the German Air Force. Four bridgeheads established previously by the Germans had been destroyed by Russian artillery and the Red Air Force.

The Don itself is less than 500 yards wide in the bend and the slow-running shallow water would constitute only a minor barried to the Germans in bringing up reinforcements if the Red Army defences on the East side of the river were broken.

Ontario Drops Enforcing Defence Act

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(CP)—Ontario authorities today had orders from Attorney-General Gordon Conant not to enforce regulations 39, 39A and 39B of the Defence of Canada regulations—but to forward all data concerning future occurrences to the Attorney-General of Canada for such action as he may see fit.

Mr. Conant's order was contained in a memorandum sent out to Ontario law enforcement authorities simultaneously with disclosure of his announcement to Justice Minister Louis St. Laurent that the province no longer would enforce these regulations which make it an offence for any person to act in such manner as to prejudice the war effort and the safety of the state.

The Attorney-General said they "are not uniformly construed and applied in all the provinces" and "in other words, the brand of justice dispensed in Ontario with respect thereto is substantially different from the brand of justice dispensed in some of the other provinces."

"In my opinion the anomaly can be rectified by the Attorney-General of Canada and his department having the conduct of all such cases, so that by the submission of counsel on his behalf and by appeals some substantial degree of uniformity may be attained in the enforcement of regulations 39 and 39A," Mr. Conant wrote the justice minister.

"For the reasons above stated, it is not my intention to direct that any further consents to prosecutions under regulations 39 and 39A of the

10 Czechs To Die For Each Break

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(CP)—Execution of 35 more Czechs, Croats and Slovenes by the Germans and Italians was reported today with accompanying threats that 10 hostages would be killed for each new assault in occupied Croatia.

The Czech Government in London reported that two patriots, Vladislav Brazda of Cersenice and Frantisek Jamik of Prerory, were put to death for "treasonably favoring the enemy, possessing arm and sheltering in their flats persons wanted by the Gestapo."

The Italians were reported by Reuters news agency to have executed 15 Slovene soldiers in Rome.

A Havas (Vichy news agency) dispatch from Budapest said a "mobile military tribunal." In Croatia condemned 15 persons at Karlovac and three at Stara Pazove and that all had been executed. The dispatch said all were involved in assaults on officials, including a German officer in the Ministry of Interior in Croatia.

Explain Please

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(AP). —Tass, the Russian news agency, said Saturday Hitler has summoned Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt to Berlin to explain the Dieppe raid. Rundstedt is responsible for protecting Germany's western flank and lately has been reported on an inspection tour of the coastal defences in France, Belgium and Holland.

Dieppe Casualty List Now 520 With 79 Killed

OTTAWA, August 24 —(CP) — The number of Canadian soldiers reported missing as a result of the battle of Dieppe last Wednesday rose by 99 today with the issue of the sixth army casualty list since the battle.

The list contains 102 names. The other three were reported respecttively wounded, suffering from shock and suffering from fatique. Only one officer was on the list, Lieut. William Clement Dick of Toronto.

Today's list brings the unofficial count of casualties reported from the battle of 520 of whom 79 are killed, 316 wounded and 125 missing. The count is subject to a margin of error owing to possible repetition of names in succeeding lists.

A total of 971 men now have been reported dead and missing by the Canadian army since the start of the war.

Artillery, Engineers, The Signal Corps, Western Ontario Regiment, Central Ontario Regiment, Manitoba Regiment, Medical Corps, Army Service Corps, Ordnance Corps, Provost Corps and Divisional Troops were all represented in today's list.

The Central Ontario Regiment, represented in the fighting by the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry and the Royal Regiment of Toronto, and the Manitoba Regiment, represented by the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, provided the bulk of the list.

The fact that 13 members of the Medical Corps were reported missing indicated the men who care for the wounded were well up in the fighting area, looking after fighting men.

Eight of the men reported missing and the one reported wounded were from Toronto, seven of the missing were from Hamilton, six of the missing and the one suffering from fatigue were from Winnipeg, five of the missing were from Montreal. The others were from smaller communities in various parts of Canada.

The fourth and fifth casualty lists since the Dieppe battle were issued Sunday.

ISTANBUL, Aug. 22 (Delayed)—(AP)—Neutral diplomatic quarters here said today German and German allied propaganda agents in Turkey were preparing a "welcome Willkie" campaign in fear of the good impression Wendell L. Bren Output In Canada ToBe Doubled

Stens Quadrupled; Making 20 Guns Many Secret Weapons

OTTAWA, Aug. 24 (CP).—Munitions Minister Howe announced today that facilities now are being provided to double the production of Bren guns in Canada and that production of Sten Machine Carbines is being quadrupled.

Capacity output under the expanded Bren gun program, amounting to several thousand units per month, is expected to be attained between December, 1942, and March 1943. Planned capacity output of Sten machine carbines ultimately will equal that of the Bren gun, said the announcement, issued by the Munitions and supply Department.

The announcement added that the new Browning tank type machine gun now is in production, together with a 100-round Bren gun magazine, a 90-millimetre anti-aircraft gun barrel, and a 4.5-inch anti-aircraft gun carriage. By September, Lee-Enfield rifles will be rolling out at a rate of many hundreds a day.

Amplifying the announcement, Mr. Howe said, "There years ago the manufacture of guns was virtually unknown to Canada. Only the Ross rifle was turned out during the first Great War but today Canadian guns are in service on most battlefronts.

Some Real Equipment

25-pounder field guns, with equipment, trailer and tractors; Bofors anti-aircraft gun barrels; Bofors anti-aircraft guns, mountings, equipment and predictors; 90-milli-inch anti-aircraft gun barres; 3.7r inch anti-aircraft guns complete with equipment; tank guns and mountings, 2 types; anti-tank guns, 2 types; anti-tank gun carriages; 4-5-inch anti-aircraft gun carriages; 2-inch trench mortars; 3-inch trench mortars;

"Bren guns; 100-round Bren gun magazines; Browning aircraft machine guns; Browning tank type machine guns; Lee-Enfield rifles; safety fuze pistols; 12-pounder naval guns; 4-inch naval guns; naval gun mountains, 9 types; depth charge throwers; 4-inch smoke dischargers; Sten machine carbines; Boys' anti-tank rifles; bomb throwers; naval pom-poms.

The defending airmen's feat was the more remarkable because they intercepted the raiders at 25,000 feet, knocked down more than one of every four of the 47 enemy planes and suffered no losses themselves although they probably were outnumbered.

The damage caused by the raiders was slight the Headquarters communique said, despite the 27 bombers and 20 fighter escorts used in the attack.

Allied planes scored also on the offensive with an attack on buildings in the wharf area along Buka Passage, the narrow strait between Buka and Bougainville in the Northern Solomon Islands.

The communique said the results were unobserved.

The raid on Darwin, possibly a counter-blow against the Allied air forces which have been hammering the enemy-held Island of Timor in recent weeks, was the first big foray since July 30 when the Japanese sent over 27 heavy bombers and 22 fighters. In that attack seven fighters and two bombers were shot down at the cost of one Allied plane.

Allies Outsmart Them.

Yesterday the fliers carried out what the Allied communique called a "brilliant tactical interception."

The raiders approached Darwin from the west and the fighters attacked them first while they still were over the seas. Three enemy bombers were caught in bursts of fire. They left their formations, jet-

New Ally Let Use Ports By Argentine

Chile Remains Mum Eyes On Argentine As Continent Lines Up

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 24—(AP) —Informed sources said today that an Argentine decree granting Brazil non-belligerent status in her war with Germany and Italy would be presented to a cabinet meeting this afternoon and was expected to be approved for signature by President Ramon Castillo.

That would be the same official attitude which Argentina took toward the entry of the United States into the war, granting use of her ports to American nations regarded as non-belligerent while keeping them closed to the Axis. Peru granted Brazil non-belligerency rights today.

The position of Argentina—one of two Western hemisphere countries still maintaining relations with the Axis powers—was thrown into bold relief by an expression of solidarity with Brazil, which came from their joint neighbor, Uruguay.

In a message to President Vargas of Brazil, President Badomir of Uruguay said his country is ready to carry out the Havana agreement which he said "makes the continent a single nation against aggressions of a non-American state."

Some observers took this statement as an indication that Uruguay might follow Brazil into the war. An announcement issued in Montevideo last night by Foreign Minister Alberto Guani after a series of conference with the Brazilian and United States Ambassadors said the Uruguayan Government has decided on the terms of a decree fixing its position, but details were not immediately disclosed.

It is expected the decree certainly will grant Brazil non-belligerent status.

Roundup in Uruguay.

In direct support of her northern neighbor, meanwhile, Uruguay began a roundup of Germans and Italians who had fled across the border from Brazil.

Semi-official advices from Montevideo also reported that planes of Uruguay's small air force were cooperating in the search for two German submarines said to have been sighted off the coast of Southern Brazil.

Possibility that other South American nations might be drawn actively into the war was not excluded by observers.

Chile—the second American country still maintaining relations with the Axis — maintained official silence with regard to the situation,

To The Last Cartridge

LONDON, Aug. 24—(CP Cable).—The Germans paid high tribute to Canada's fighting men when a speaker on the Nazi-controlled Paris radio Sunday said of the Dieppe raid "The Canadians are endowed with magnificent courage," a Reuters dispatch received here today reported. Said the announcer: "The first thing that emerges from the Dieppe fighting is the stubbornness of the Canadian soldier... One has the impression these men clung to the soil and fought to the last cartridge."

New Middle East Front Looming Fast

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

It looks very much now as if we should see a new and perhaps decisive front opened before long in the Egyptian-Middle East theatre, and it's the toss of a coin whether this will be initiated by the Allies or by the Nazi dictator.

There's no doubt the Allies are actively preparing for this possibility. We see that in today's announcement of the formation of a new British command for Iran and Iraq under Gen. Sir Maitland Wilson, distinguished tactician. And that's only one of numerous recent developments pointing in this direction, including Prime Minister Churchill's unexpected visit to Egypt for a reorganization of the command there.

The fireworks might start in the Midde East, but it's much more likely they will be touched off in Egypt. Certainly we may expect either that Nazi Field Marshal Rommel will resume his effort to conquer Egypt and fight his way through to join his master in the Middle East, or that the Allies will strike at Rommel in an effort to knock him out and thus destroy one of the claws of the pincers which Hitler is trying to fix about that whole zone.

Egypt Vital Zone.

Of course, immediate establishment of a second front in Western Europe might affect the trend in the Middle East. It's unlikely, though that Hitler's attempt to capture Egypt and the Middle East would be scrapped, because the side which holds that strategically-vital zone probably will win the war.

By the way, speaking of a second front in France, it's to be hoped that the commando show at Dieppe last week finally convinced civilians who have been shouting for such a front that the time of its inauguration is definitely a matter for the high command to decide. That was a magnificent display of bravery and skill at arms, and it demonstrated the Continent can be invaded when the time is right.

However, it also demonstrated that a major invasion will be terrifically costly in men and material That cost won't stop us when the job has to be done, but it ought to cool

Ilsley Pictures Dark Scene, If Stalingrad Goes

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(CP). — A black picture of the future of democracy in the event of a German victory in Russia was painted today by Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, to more than 2,000 industrial and commercial workers of Toronto as he appealed for wholehearted support of the coming Victory Loan drive and outlined the policy of the Government to raise funds to prosecute the war.

"If the great steel centre of Stalingrad should fall and the enemy sweep through the Caucasus, I hate to think of the consequences," he said. "In all probability they would turn westward and attack Great Britain.

Steel Men Send King New Appeal

By FRASER McDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Aug. 24.—(CP)—Next development in the wage dispute which threatens to bring work stoppages in the basic steel producing plants at Sault Ste. Marie and at Sydney, N.S., appeared today to hinge on the reponse of Prime Minister Mackenzie King to appeals from the United Steel Workers of America for a national conference of primary steel producers to bring about "an equitable solution" of demands for wage increases.

C. H. Millard, national director for Canada of the U.S.W.A., who is handling appeals of the Sydney and Sault unions, announced at a mass meeting of members of the Algoma Union yesterday that he had addressed a new appeal to the Prime Minister to summon a conference of employers, employees and the government.

Mr. Millard's letter which will reach Mr. King's office today suggests such a conference be convened this week, and quotes "reliable sources" as saying that two of the larger steel producers had no objection to meeting Union representatives.

Mr. Millard told the meeting: "They will want to compromise but we just won't compromise, that's all," as he said that "a very few days" should decide whether or not work stoppages would be called to enforce union demands for a basic wage rate of 55 cents an hour in the two plants.

No Nazi Counter Attacks At Dieppe

Never Dared Leave Hideouts or Buildings to Tackle Canucks on Town's Beach

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, Aug. 24—(CP Cable)—They speak with awe in Canadian army camps of the "main beach at Dieppe" where three Canadian infantry battalions, tankmen, engineers and provost fought the longest sustained action of the raid on the old French town.

The battle of the beach was the main Canadian attack — boldly directed at the town itself. From the stories told by the men who came back this general picture has been pieced together.

The Essex Scottish landed at about 5.20 a.m. on the eastern half of the mile-long gravel and shale beach, 75 yards wide. The Royal Hamilton light infantry went in at the same time on the western half with the Calgary Tank Battalion, provost and sappers. Les Fusiliers Mont Royal landed later as reserve.

Halfway up the beach, stretched across the Canadians' path, was barbed wire. The attackers faced a thick German fire pouring from a row of buildings looking to the beach across the broad promenade edge which was supported by a long seawall.

The defenders had field guns and the row of buildings they occupied bristled with machine guns and trench mortars.

The R.A.F. and the Navy plastered Dieppe for half an hour before the Canadians swept in from small troop-carrying craft and bigger tank leading boats.

The first wave of Canadians met blistering machine-gun and mortar fire as they swept up the beach, cut their way through barbed wire and then went on again to take cover behind the seawall, 10 feet high at the eastern end and lowering gradually to two feet at the western extremity.

In 10 minutes the long wall was lined with troops of the Essex Scottish and the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry. Some tanks had been landed by then, but were having preliminary difficulty in getting a solid hold for their treads on the shale.

Heavy shelling and a torrent of small-arms fire prevented some of the troops from debarking from the tank-landing craft. German fire from the buildings along the promenade was strongly supported by Nazi artillery and machine-gun posts looking down from the tall headlands which rise up on either side.

The Hamilton battalion drove forward in force and finally captured the Dieppe casino, a group of large buildings at the western end of the beach. Taking the casino, which was filled with Germans, was one of the features of the main beach opera-

Chinese Storm Into Fuchow

Nipponese Stay In Key Enemy Base Is Brief

CHUNGKING, Aug. 24.—(AP).—Chinese forces have captured Linchwan (Fuchow) in Central Kiangsi, second most important Japanese base in the province, the Chinese High Command announced tonight. Linchwan, on the Fu River, 60 miles southeast of Nanchang, main enemy base in the province, has been under Chinese siege for two weeks. United States army planes supported the Chinese ground forces in the early phases of the siege.

The city was captured by the Japanese in June during their drive up the Fu River toward Fukien Province. It lies south of the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railway, along which the Chinese hitherto have scored their chief gains in a comeback campaign

Chuhsien, a Chekiang air base which was the principal objective of the Japanese summer campaign, and Juihung, only 30 miles east of their main Kaingsi base of Nanchang, were menaced by duel Chinese offensives.

Teach Burmese For Campaign In India

WASHINGTON, August 24—(AP) —Japan is training natives taken in Burma and Malaya as "propaganda troops" for use in the battle for India. Sirdar J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America reported on Saturday.

Singh, a New York importer and former member of the All-India Congress Party, told a press conference that the Indians and Burmese would be sent out with the message that "We are allowed to bear arms and be free men by the Japanese, something the British never let us do."

He estimated the strength of the native troops at 50,000, two-thirds of them Burmese, and predicted their Japanese - granted privileges would make a deep impression on illiterate Indians.

"Mahatma Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru the Indian leaders, were forced into their demands for review of Indian independence by the people of India," Singh said. "They would have lost leadership of the Indian masses if they had not asked some concessions now."

European Food Problem Dark For Winter

By FRANK BRUTTO

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 24 — (AP). — The peoples of Europe, most of them under the domination of Hitler, approach the winter with an anxious eye on the larder and a further tightenng of the belt.

Despatches from Axis lands to the Swiss press, stories of travellers, official restrictions and broadcasts on Europe's air waves produce a picture of a continent on which, while relatively few face death by starvation, the cumulative effects of malnutrition are ever more widely felt.

For the Germans as for the French and the Poles—this will be the fourth war winter. Older folk remember that fourth war winter in the first Great War.

The Hamilton troops moved from the casino into the town. Capt. Denny Whitaker, former Hamilton Tiger star football quarterback, led one detachment well into Dieppe proper and engaged in a terrific street engagement. There was hand-to-hand combat and at times the Canadians plowed into the Germans with bayonets. Whitaker was among the men who got back.

One of the other Hamilton detachments battling in the streets reached the post office near the heart of the town despite the exposure to Nazi snipers who were peppering away from rooftops and windows.

A number of the Essex Scottish also are believed to have broken into Dieppe and fought around the edge of the harbor. Members of Les Fusiliers Mont Royal who came back say a number of these tough French-Canadians smashed right through Dieppe to Basin Du Cana which is well back in the harbor. Their route took them clean through the town.

Street fighting is said to have gone on practically all over Dieppe amid ruined and blazing buildings which had been pounded by the R. A. F. and the navy.

Ptes. Archie Liss, John Shart, and Roy Wilkinson and L.-Cpl. Pentice Sandy, all of Hamilton, and Pte. Bill Burman of Tillsonburg, Ont., all said street battle raged for hours.

Hun Dead All Over

"German dead lay all over some of the streets," said Liss. "Snipers really were the worst menace. But our officers were cool as ice and we fought a rearguard action out of the town during the withdrawal."

Despite the heavy, unexpected German opposition in Dieppe itself, the Canadians fought with such gallantry the Nazis never could take the offensive and counter attack on the beaches. The enemy was forced to remain hidden in their buildings and harry the raiders from those vantage points.

One of the clearest and most graphic descriptions of the battle was given by Pte. Eugene Cousineau of Windsor, Ont., who joined the Essex Scottish when the regiment was mobilized at the start of the war.

"I was with 'A' company commanded by Capt. Dennis Guest and in No. 9 platoon, said Cousinneau, a tall, husky lad who proved he had all the courage in the world.

"There were explosions around the boats as we were going in," he said. "We touched down and I was the fourth man out of the boat. We got to the barbed wire on the beach and cut our way through. Heavy fire was raking the landing craft. We made the seawall and had practicaly all our section with us.

"A pillbox to the right was taken out by the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry. We worked up the wall until we got opposite the tobacco factory. This was just 100 yards away over the Promenade and at the corner of Verdun Boulevard and Rue Duquesne. From the tobacco factory and the other buildings around it we were getting artillery fire and machine-gun stuff. The Essex opened fire right away from the seawall on the buildings along the opposite side of the Promenade.

Stick To Seawall

"The gang I was with stayed there fighting from the seawall from six a.m. to 11:30 a.m. We couldn't move from there but we gave the Germans plenty to worry about even then. There was a castle on the cliff on the west headland and its machine guns walloped us a lot. Besides, German aircraft strafed the beach on the way back from a bombing raid on the fleet lying offshore.

"The Fuzzies (soldiers' nickname for Les Fusiliers Mont Royal) joined us behind the seawall although they had come through hellish fire. Some of them got through into the town later.

"We stuck right there until the withdrawal order came through late in the morning.

"The morale of the Essex was high all the way. The officers were mighty grand. I remember particularly Lieut. Jack Prince, Capt. Guest and Maj. John Willis who I saw with us in the fight. Mr. Prince was running up and down the seawall encouraging us and being as brave as any man could be. The others were the same, fighting like the devil.

"Our fellows crouched in firing positions at the seawall, smoking cigarets or pipes and joking and making bets on who'd get it next. We naturally were stunned when we first got to the seawall but steadied up and were away to the races.

"Our men stood by the Bren guns smoking and cursing the Germans with every curse they ever knew. We worked our way up and down the wall and wound up close by the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry on the western side of the beach.

"When we withdrew we laid down smoke with a mortar and some canisters. This smoke clouded the promenade and we rushed for the boats. We ran a couple of hundred yards down the beach under heavy fire. Bullets tickled through my clothing but never hit me.

Sheltered Behind Tank Boat

"I was one of the last off the beach. I got behind the tank-landing craft grounded on the shore and there were quite a few lads there. The landing craft was coming and we waded out to our waists to get aboard her.

"Every Essex who was there and who got it went down fighting. There wasn't any guy who wasn't battling like mad. And those of us who came back want only to get back and knock the hell out of the Nazis for what they did to our boys."

That wasn't just loose talk by Cousineau. His eyes gleamed and his fist clenched when he said it.

"An officer told me," he continued, "that he was five days at Dunkirk and that the fire there was nothing like that morning at Dieppe."

Cousineau put his hand to his Essex badge on his balmoral. "I'm proud to show my badge anywhere now," he said.

Cousineau wore a small khaki skull-cap throughout the fight. "I carried it through hell and high water and it's going with me for life," he said as he pulled it out of his pocket.

The provost fought with the infantry along the seawall and in the town. Tanks, after getting over the seawall, cruised up and down the promenade pasting the Germans in a building with their guns. One tank which had its tracks blown off wirelessed: "We've been knocked out but are still firing and staying right here. Incidentally, we are knocking hell out of a lot of Germans."

tisoned their bombs, and pilots saw them turn for home only to crash into the sea.

The remainder of the Japanese flight came on in three groups. Although peppered by machine-gun fire, directed at Zeros as well as bombers, the formation reached the general target area and unloaded 500-pound fragmentation bombs and incendiaries which kicked up smoke and —dust but caused comparatively little damage.

One United States flier said he got so close to one Zero fighter that "I could see the pilot's face under his red cap. Nip looked mighty worried as my bullets had set his wings afire. I saw him go down into the sea."

A Chicago lieutenant, who in the Japanese raid of July 30 destroyed an enemy bomber but was shot down himself, this time got a bomber and a Zero.

"Vickers naval guns; 4-inch naval guns, second type; naval mountings, three types; secret equipment and weapons of various types; gun carriages, two types."

"When Canada undertook the manufactures of guns," said Mr. Howe, "our industries had no knowledge of the complicated designs, of the many parts of the exexaremely fine tolerance of the metallurgical difficulties, of or the huge and expensive machine tools which are essential to their production.

"At the beginning of the war, Canada obtained an order for a very small quantity of loose barrels for anti-aircraft guns. So fine was the quality of the output of these barrels that an initial order was received from Great Britain for the manufacture of a light anti-tank gun and mobile carriage. Then, with the fall of France, Canada was called upon suddenly to turn out in quantity, guns, carriages, mountings, barrels, small arms and even the most complicated electrical fire-control instruments.

"To implement a program of this magnitude, we required plant capacity, labor, management, raw materials and machine tools on short notice. All suitable buildings and equipment were immediately put to use and capital assistance amounting to many tens of millions of dollars was made available for the construction of new plants and their equipment. A government-owned company was incorporated for the purpose of making small arms."

Mr. Howe said that it then became necessary to obtain quickly, and in sufficient quantities, the raw materials required — alloy steels, iron, copper, brass and rubber. The announcement added that 262,000 pounds of steel are required in the manufacture of 1,000 Bren guns; 80,000 pounds for 1,000 Browning anti-aircraft guns; and 148,000 pounds for 1,000 Boys anti-tank rifles.

"That our engineering and industrial talents were able to meet the challenge now is fully apparent," Mr. Howe added. "With less than three years' experience, Canada is turning out complex guns and other weapons for use wherever the men of the United Nations are in action with the enemy."

Axis Workshops Raked At Tobruk

CAIRO, Aug. 24 —(AP)—Heavy British bombers made a successful attack on the Axis supply base of Tobruk at dusk yesterday to bring to a climax a week-end of aerial activity over the Egyptian front, a communique announced today.

American fliers were reported to have attacked enemy workshop in the western desert in bright moonlight Saturday night, scoring numerous hits.

R.A.F. fighter-bombers continued their attacks on Axis overland communications yesterday, and numerour dogfights developed with indecisive results, the bulletin said.

One enemy transport plane was reported destroyed by British long-range fighters northwest of Derna and at least one Axis bomber was destroyed during an attempted attack on a British airdrome.

Except for British night patrol operations no activity was reported on land.

off those who are trying to push the high command into action against its better judgment.

Hitler has perhaps two months of fine campaigning weather left. Should he in that time be able to fight his way past the Caucasian mountain range to the border of the Middle East, he might well attempt to continue his drive. Meantime the masterful Rommel would have attempted to get his own military machine rumbling eastward again.

But if the Russians are able to stop Hitler short of the southern Caucasus he will have to develop his Middle Eastern campaign differently. He then will attempt to strike from Egypt—if the Allies haven't smashed Rommel meantime — and will be able to throw men and equipment into the operation from the winter-bound Russian front while he holds there with a greatly reduced force.

Hell is going to pop in Egypt before long, unless the signs are all wrong. When the fighting stopped neither side was strong enough to conduct an offensive. Since then they have been waiting for reinforcements and further equipment, and the side which gets set first will be the one to strike. In this contest it may be that Rommell has had the advantage, despite the fact that the Anglo-American air force has superiority in the air and has raised hob with Rommel's communications.

It must be remembered the marshal is only a few hundred miles from his sources of supply across the Mediterranean, and that while many Axis transports are being sunk, some of them get through. So we may be sure he has been gradually strengthening his army. The Allies, on the other hand, have to get reinforcements and supplies from the United States or Britain by way of the Cape of Good Hope —a long, hard haul.

We have no information as to how luck has treated the desert opponents. We aren't likely to know until one or the other launches a new offensive—and the one who strikes will be the one who has got his aid first.

Yanks Pour Over

London, Aug. 24 (CP)

THE arrival of still another American convoy—the largest yet to cross the Atlantic in this war—stirred British observers anew today to speculation on a second front.

The convoy was so large its laden troopships and transports scattered to many British ports to unload men and weapons now dispersed among waiting American bases.

At the same time, the war office announced formation of a new Iran-Iraq command under Gen. Sir Maitland Wilson in the Allies' oil reservoir behind Russia's imperilled Caucasus.

Convict Pastor On Spy Charge

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 22 (AP) —Stocky, Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn today faced a prison sentence, possibly 20 years, after conviction of a charge of conspiracy to violate the Espionage Act by attempting to deliver military secrets of the United States, his adopted country, to Axis powers.

The 47-year-old pastor of an ancient German Lutheran church in Philadelphia's Franklin Square showed no signs of emotion late yesterday as a Federal jury of eight men and four women, after two hours' deliberation, found him guilty of espionage.

Although Judge J. Joseph Smith, granting a defence plea, continued the pastor's case until Tuesday, he immediately sentenced three of the clergyman's co-conspirators, including Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former "Fuehrer" of the German-American Bund.

Kunze, 36, a self-described German citizen, although born in Camden, N.J., was sentenced to 15 years. The others, Dr. Wolfgang Ebell, 43, El Paso, Texas, physician, was given seven years, and Dr Otto Willumeit, 37, Chicago ex-Bund leader, was ordered to serve five years.

The fifth conspirator, Anastase A. Vonsiatsky of Thompson, Conn., Russian Fascist leader, drew a five-year term before the four-weeks-long Molzah trial began.

Only the pastor stood trial. The others pleaded guilty.

"Now is the time Canadians must stand shoulder to shoulder, and I say that with all the earnestness of my being."

"We must pay for the huge production which this war demands... we are now spending eight times as much in one year as we were prior to the war," the Finance Minister continued.

He urged all present, representing more than 300,000 workers in the Toronto area, to use their influence to assist in raising the $3,-900,000,000 annual cost to run the war.

He said it was the belief of his Government that the fairest and most equitable way in which to raise the money necessary was half by taxation and half by borrowing.

Mr. Ilsley warned against listening to subversive talk to the effect the Government intended to freeze bank deposits, and that bonds will not be redeemed after Sept. 1.

"These rumors are either put around through innocence, ignorance or by enemy agents, but if through innocence or ignorance the work of enemy agents was being done," he said.

Brazil Joins Allied War Ranks

RIO DE JANEIRO, August 24 — (AP). — Searchlights swept the skies over Rio de Janeiro's harbor as protection against surprise attack last night and police car sirens shrieked as authorities carried out an intersive roundup of spy suspects on Brazil's first day of war with Germany and Italy.

Great activity marked the preparation of the Government for what the people believed would be a long and hard fight with Germany and Italy.

In Rio de Janeiro and other cities civil, military and special police carried out a roundup of persons known to have had dubious association with Axis agents in South America.

Authorities started a search for secret radio transmitters, and announced they had found one in the building of the German Embassy, and others elsewhere.

The Brazilian Fleet and Air Force intensified their patrol of the coast in the region of the vital "Natal bulge," Eastern promontory which is only 1,600 miles from Dakar Africa, and a jumping-off place on a route of war supplies from the Western to the Eastern Hemisphere.

Military authorities turned closest attention to French Guiana to the north, a region assuming increasing military importance as the French Government at Vichy moves further on the road toward full collaboration with Germany. French Guiana, it was pointed out lies directly across the coastal line of communication between Brazil and the United States.

To Co-operate With U.S.

In political quarters a disposition for the closest possible co-operation with the United States, in military and economic matters, was manifest.

In political quarters also the prospect that other South American States might be drawn into the war against the Axis was being studied. The decision of Brazil for a military showdown with the Axis, it was said, is sure to have a profound influence on the attitudes of Uruguay, Colombia and Venezuela, which are believed here to be on the verge of war, and on Argentina and Chile which are still maintaining diplomatic relations with the

Weekend Toll Claims Ten

By The Canadian Press.

Ten fatalities were reported in Eastern Canada over the weekend. Four persons died as a result of traffic accidents, three were drowned, one man was killed by a fall, another by a farm tractor, and a baby was electrocuted.

Four of the fatalities were in Ontario. Harry Gilroy, 24-year-old electrician, fell 18 floors to his death from a Toronto hotel while repairing an electric sign. At Waterford, Ronald Lewis, 17, was fatally injured when the tractor he was driving got out of control and overturned, pinning him underneath.

Joseph Giovanazzi, 60, driver of a truck that caught fire after a collision, died in hospital at Fort Erie of severe burns. At Brantford John Riddolls, 20-months-old son of Major and Mrs. W. E. Riddolls, was electrocuted while playing with an electrical extension cord in his bedroom.

There were also four fatalities in Quebec, including a double drowning. Mr. and Mrs. Louis St. Jacques were drowned in the St. Lawrence near Riviere Du Loup while attempting to rescue a young girl, who later reached shore in safety.

At Montreal Bertha Morin, 36, died in hospital without regaining consciousness after being struck by a motorcycle while she was cycling and four-year-old Jacques Poirier died when a motorcar ran into a group of churchgoers.

The two other week-end fatalities were in the Maritimes. At Glace Bay four-year-old Mary Lawrence was struck and killed by a motorcar while she was crossing the street, and Sgt. Edward Saunders, back home at Saint John on leave from Newfoundland, was drowned when he lost his hold on a capsized canoe.

Alberta Tanks Dub War Personal Now

That was the message that came tonight from headquarters of the Calgary Tank Regiment, whose men fought in the bloody battle of Dieppe. A lot of them didn't return and new men came tonight to fill their places.

The young lieutenant-colonel from Calgary, who won his promotion and command of the unit at Dieppe on the fall of the original commander, grimly summed up the survivors' feelings:

"It's a personal war with this unit now. We were the first Alberta regiment and the first armored regiment to see action. Give us time to refit and we're going back."

(From St. Thomas, Ont., it was reported Saturday that the parents of Lieutenant-Colonel John Andrew, 33, had been advised by wife who lives at Barrie, Ont., that he has been reported missing. Colonel Andrews was in command of the Calgary Tank Battalion at Dieppe.

His successor told the story of the battalion's fight of its charge ashore in support of the Essex Scottish and the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry in an attack on Dieppe itself; of the withering artillery and machine-gun fire with which the Nazis prevented part of the force from landing and of the bravery of those who got ashore.

Dawn was just breaking over the area when the attack opened, the battalion's first two waves going in fifteen minutes apart and headquarters thirty minutes later, led by the adjutant who was brought up short by the seawall.

There was no room to manoeuvre the tanks in the narrow landing craft which had to withdraw from the beach without the adjutant or his crew.

Meantime, other tanks found the ramp near the Casino, went ashore and made their way up to the esplanade where they were to fight for the rest of the day.

When the commanding officer learned of this, he decided to take the battalion headquarters ashore, but by this time four hours had passed and the Germans were prepared.

33 Hits In 5 Minutes.

"We got thirty-three hits on our landing craft in five minutes," the colonel, then serving as second in command, said. "They hit us with everything they had."

Despite this opposition, which one veteran of Gallipoli said was fiercer than anything encountered there, the commanding officer tried to move in, still going forward even after a direct hit on his tank.

The shell blew off his waterproofing material and the tank sank in six feet of water. The heavy vehicle could go no further and the commanding officer radioed: "I'm getting out of my tank—toodle-oo."

That was the last message received from him.

The colonel then took command and started ashore, but his landing craft was literally blown off the beach. The bridge was hit, the coxswain was killed and the craft began spinning wildly, out of control.

A marine sergeant took the wheel and the craft was borne off-shore by the ebbing tide. Four torpedoes from a German surface craft vessel whizzed past, as the landing craft drifted out of range of the artillery fire.

"So I was left at sea," said the colonel, telling how he spent the rest of the day relaying messages to the shore for Major-General J. H. Roberts of Kingston, Ont., in command of the whole expedition.

The colonel said that every man ashore carried out his assigned task. He gave unstinted praise for the commanding officer who deserved, he said, "the whole credit" for preparing the regiment for the part it played so well.

"He worked his men hard, but he worked himself harder," the colonel said. "And then he went in with his men."

Germans Reward Dieppe Citizens

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—(AP). — The German radio boasted last night that Gen. Otto Von Stuelpnagel, German military administrator in Occupied France, had donated 10,000,000 French francs to the Prefect of the Dieppe region to pay for damages and civilian hurts suffered in the Allied raid on the French port last Wednesday.

This was done, the Berlin radio asserted, as a reward to the French population of the region for their "remarkable discipline and calmness shown during the fighting.

In that connection, the BBC at the start of the raid had warned the French that the hour of liberation had not come; that the action was not a second front, and for them to stay out of the fight.

Their Comrades Did This Work In Earnest At Dieppe

These commando troops of a Canadian Scottish regiment are shown charging ashore from assault barges during invasion practice on an unnamed Canadian lake. The scene was incorporated into the movie "The Commandos Come at Dawn," and hundred of other Canadian troops trained like these participated in the Dieppe raid and wrote another glorious chapter in the annals of Canadian arms.

Canadians Fight Hard Says Hun Officer

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP). — Men wounded at Dieppe grinned when they heard of German losses, said Drew Middleton, The Associated Press correspondent who covered the giant raid.

Describing the "deep-throated shouting of the attacking Canadians," the collapse of the hotels in Dieppe under the shelling of British destroyers and the accompanying kaleidoscopic air battles, Middleton said:

"It was one of the great military enterprises of history. It was successful because no man reckoned his life higher than the cause he stood for. Let that be an epitaph for the dead."

Middleton told how the lieutenant commanding the tiny motor launch he was on turned to him as the battle was raging and said:

"Reminds you of the stuff in books, doesn't it? Chaps sending you the beard of Philip of Spain, only this time it's Adolf's moustache."

Then there was the captured German officer whom Middleton heard declare: "They fight hard, the Canadians, and are the Americans coming, too?"

Overhead the Royal Air Force and the Germans fought "the greatest battle of the war in the air," he said. He gave the following description of a portion of that struggle:

"Out of the rising sun two Focke-Wulf 190's. They were about fifty feet off the water. As they neared us they let go with everything they had.

"I heard the Canadians fire the pom-poms on the other ships. Our own little craft shook as our Hurricane guns and machine guns began to fire. One of them climbed very high and fast. The other wavered and fell into the sea. The seaman at the nearest machine gun grunted and pulled a splinter out of his side. One of their bullets had knocked it off the woodwork around the bridge. 'I think we'll go inshore and see the fun,' said the lieutenant."

War Borrowing Costs 30 Cents Daily Per Person

OTTAWA, Aug. 24.—(CP).—Canada's borrowing needs in this fiscal year total 30 cents a day for "each man, woman and child in the country," Finance Minister Ilsley said last night in a broadcast interview with William L. Best, Canadian representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

"Since we will obtain through compulsory savings less than $100,000,000 of our $1,850,000,000 borrowing requirements, we must obtain the remainder through voluntary savings loaned to the Government," Mr. Ilsley said. "Individually, persons with incomes of more than $3,000 or $4,000 a year must greatly intensify their savings efforts, but the total of their savings will be limited by the smallness of their numbers."

Speaking over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's national network, Mr. Ilsley said nine of every 10 employed persons earn less than $2,500 a year, yet their earnings total more than 75 per cent. of all wages and salaries. Thus the major part of the Government's borrowings would have to come from these groups.

He described as "irresponsible" certain stories he said were being circulated about the Government's financial program. Canada had never defaulted on an obligation. She had always paid her bills in the past and would continue to do so.

There was no truth, for instance, in rumors that War Savings Certificates would not be redeemable after Sept. 1.

"These rumors are sheer nonsense," he said. "Why people should think new and strange things are going to happen on that date, I don't know."

CobourgFiremen Given Golden Trophy

COBOURG, August 24. —(ENS)— Members of the St. Paul's Boulevard Firemen's Association of Irondequoit, N. Y., came over on the car ferry on Saturday for a visit to the town and were entertained here by the Cobourg Fire Department and the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the town council. They were given a civic welcome at the park by Mayor Jack Burnet.

Headed by the Cobourg firemen and the Fire, Water and Light Committee, the visiting firemen paraded up from the boat and thence to the park. The U. S. fire fighters made a smart appearnce in their flue uniforms, white and black caps and white gloves. During the afternoon, Bill Grossberger, chairman of the visiting firemen's committee presented to the Cobourg firemen a handsome gold plated trophy with the figure of a fireman in long rubber coat, carrying a lantern, all in heavy gold plate.

Four Fortresses Hit Twelve Battling Twenty-five

By WES GALLGHER

With The United States Bomber Command in Britain, Aug. 24 (AP). —A slight young Florida bombardier who "washed out of flying school" and a half-conscious pilot with his arm nearly torn off emerged as the heroes today of the great North Sea sky battle which saw American Flying Fortresses shoot down or damage twelve German fighters although outnumbered five to one.

Stubble-bearded airmen who had not been to bed for 36 hours told how the gravely wounded pilot and the bombardier who had never flown a Fortress before brought the big ship back safely after Nazi bullets had riddled two of the four motors and killed the co-pilot.

A recheck of the crew's reports of the attacks showed four of nine Fortresses on the sorties had done all the fighting in the battle against about 25 Focke-Wulf 190's and Messerschmitt 109's. They shot down three confirmed and heavily damaged at least nine more instead of the six originally reported damaged or destroyed.

Story of Battle

The bombardier, Lieutenant Swart Sconiers, 26, with eyes bloodshot from loss of sleep and nervous tension, reported on the terrific fight of the plane, "Johnny Reb," in this manner:

"We were in the tail-end formation when we were jumped by about twenty-five Focke-Wulf 190's and Messerschmitt 109's at over 20,000 feet. They set up a decoy out to our right. I was lying in the nose of the ship shooting at that when over the inter-communicating system I heard the waist gunner shout: 'Here come three more from above.'

"I heard a thud in the pilot's cabin and heard the pilot grunt and ask me to come up."

The Fortress never wavered from its course although it lagged behind the formation a little, but when Sconiers entered the cabin he found the pilot, Lieutenant Richard Starks, covered with blood. His eyes were glazed with pain and his arm half torn off by the cannon shot which had killed the co-pilot, Lieutenant Donald Walter.

"I dragged the body of the co-pilot from his seat. It was a terrific job as I had no oxygen mask," Sconiers said.

"I then took his place. The pilot's oxygen mask had been ripped away and he was fighting for breath. He motioned me to take the ship down to 5,000 feet. I never had flown a Fortress before, having been washed out at flying school and coming back as a bombardier. But some way we got down.

"All this time the crew did not know what as going on as the telephone system in the plane had been knocked out."

Sergeant J. C. Simmons of Union, Miss., the tail gunner, interrupted at this point to say:

"I thought we were falling into the sea although I did not know a shell had hit the pilot's cabin."

The pilot by this time was only half conscious, the bombardier continued.

"Blood was streaming all over but he kept directing and helping me," he said.

"We were nearing England and saw a flying field and I started to set her down. Somehow between us I got her down without even a bounce. All this time the pilot did not cry out or say one words except to ask for water."

Gun Barrel Broke Up.

Simmons got one of the three confirmed Nazi planes. He fired a 150-round burst from this .50 calibre machine gun which he supposed would be good for only a 75-round burst. Great chunks came out of the barrel but the gun held together.

"I let fly with everything I had from about 300 yards and the wings started falling off the Focke-Wulf 190," Simmons said. "I caught a glimpse of her going down, but I was so busy right then firing at other ships that I didn't see her end."

The flight of four fortresses which engaged in all the fighting was led by Captain Rudolph Flack, 25.

"This fight proves beyond all question the ability of the Fortresses to fly escorted or unescorted anywhere," Flack said. "Some Germans pressed home the attack from close to 300 yards but we beat them off."

Colonel Frank A. Armstrong echoed Flack's sentiments:

"The Germans must have been amazed they could not knock the Fortress down," he added.

Dieppe Exposes Goebbels Lies

By WILLIAM STEWART

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(CP Cable)— As public excitement over Dieppe subsided, London's Sunday newspapers sought to examine the raid in its true perspective and extract the lessons is taught.

The Reynolds News said the raid "nailed Goebell's lies about impregnable Nazi fortifications and answered the faint hearts here who seek to prove we cannot open a second front this year."

On the other hand, the Sunday Chronicle said Dieppe was a "great achievement," but "only a shadow of the task to come."

"The effort this local operation demanded should open the eyes of those who imagine that a second front is as easy to achieve as ask for. We shall need all our courage and all that our brains, hands and ears can do."

The News of the World said Dieppe proved "rose-tinted glasses have gone into the salvage bin and at least we view the passing war scene with clear vision."

Wholesale Beef Prices Reduced

OTTAWA, Aug. 23. (CP)—Further reduction in wholesale beef prices becomes effective Monday in line with the graduated seasonal reduction announced on June 25. Wartime Prices and Trade Board officials announce.

The board issued a tabulation showing the new prices for cuts of beef, effective in fifteen zones across Canada. In some cases the price showed only fractional change, but a reduction of up to 16 cents a pound in the maximum price for one item is shown. This sharp reduction, applicable in all the zones, is shown for strip loin, listed at 35½ cents a pound in the Maritime zone which includes the Maritime Provinces and part of Quebec, major cities excluded.

The maximum price allowed in the period ending tomorrow was 51½ cents a pound in the Maritime zone, with comparably higher rates in other zones. In no other zone is a price higher than 35 cents for this cut permitted.

The new scale of wholesale carcass prices covers the period from Aug. 24 to Sept. 13 inclusive. Prices for beef quarters and cuts also will range correspondingly lower than those in the preceding period, Aug. 3 to 23.

This is the third successive reduction in beef prices since the order became effective.

Retailers will be allowed one week from Monday during which they may sell on the basis of cost plus their normal markup. This allowance is made to take care of beef ordered and in storage. After that period the retailer's price must be based on the newly reduced wholesale price specified for each of the fifteen zones into which Canada has been divided for beef distribution.

North Sea Grave Million Tons Of Axis Shipping

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(CP). — The ceaseless campaign by the Royal Navy and the R.A.F. has cost the Axis 1,000,000 tons of shipping sunk in the North Sea and the English Channel since the beginning of the war, out of total Axis losses of 6,000,000 tons and 124 warships destroyed, captured or damaged, the Ministry of Information reported today.

In a statement based on Admiralty figures, the Ministry of Information said the North Sea and Channel operations had cost the Axis 223 supply ships sunk or captured and 135 vessels, including warships, severely damaged.

These operations, an important part of the world-wide attack on Axis shipping, are particularly significant because the overburdening of German railways has forced the Nazis to rely more and more on coastal shipping, the Ministry said.

Elmer Partridge Sentenced To Four Years

COBOURG, Aug. 24. —(ENS) — Elmer Partridge of Warkworth, who was remanded last week on several theft charges, came up for sentence on Saturday morning and was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. The charges were laid by Provincial Constable Donald Carruthers of Campbellford and covered a substantial list of break-ins at Warkworth with one robbery at Campbellford. Most of the offenses occurred on August 9. With his arrest police recovered a large quantity of stolen goods. The sentences were as follows:

Breaking and entering and theft of C. Boyce of Warkworth, one year; theft from C. Dudley, six months; theft from A. Edgar, four years; theft from Meiklejohn's garage, four years; theft from A. Edgar (second robbery), four years; theft from C. Boyce, six months; theft from A. Dudley, six months; theft from F. Boyce, four years; theft from Mitchell Bros., one year.

Partridge was also charged with being in possession of firearms without a permit and received one year on this. All terms are concurrent.

It will be recalled that Partridge used an old Ford car on his robberies, equipped with two gas tanks. Police suspect that Partridge got much of his gas via the siphon method as his gas ration category was not sufficent to enable him to do so much travelling.

We must KEEP 'EM FLOATING!

In one of Dosco's shaping plants, this ship-plate is being formed to meet exact requirements. A ship has been damaged—but soon it will be back in the fight, one of a thousand vital vessels in our life-line.

KEEPING 'em rolling does little good—unless we keep 'em floating, unless the matériel gets through! And to get it through to our armed forces overseas requires ships—ships—and more ships! New ships, yes—but, even more important: Keeping every available United Nations ship—whether it be cargo, transport, or warship—in this fight!

We—the Allies—have the greatest sea-power ever massed under one united command. To this we must add new units—and, above all, what we have we must hold. We must keep 'em floating, keep our life-line intact!

From Dosco—one of Canada's largest industries—pours forth a constant stream of gun-mountings, shell-cases, steel for ships-in-the-building, and all other war matériel within the scope of Dosco's vast resources. Yet at Dosco we know that none is more important than the unglamourized ship-plate for repairs—the stuff to keep 'em floating!

Till The First Frost

From now until the first faint touch of frost in the Autumn air the hay-fever victims will go their melancholy way, sneezing, weeping, snuffing at inhalers, applying ice to their poor swollen noses and cursing the ragweed pollen which has reduced them in their subhuman state. Those of us who have hardier noses can do nothing; our sympathy is an added irritation to the sufferers. Our best plan is to fall flat on the ground when those thunderous sneezes seem imminent, clasping our hands behind our heads in the manner recommended for those seeking shelter from air-raids. We can also help in the arduous business of drying handkerchiefs.

E. B. White, the American writer, recently offered his opinion that the great Daniel Webster gave up his chances of becoming President of the U.S. because he knew that no man who suffered from hay-fever could ever sustain the dignity of that high office. There may be something in it. Hay-fever, like bad hiccoughs, brings ridicule upon the sufferer and unfits him for serious business. Only the blessed advent of cooler weather can cool his brow and assuage his sorrow. Sidney Smith, one of the many eminent victims of this painful malady, wrote thus of it to his friend Dr. Holland in 1835: "I am suffering from my old complaint, the hay-fever. My fear is, perishing of deliquescence; I melt away in nasal and lachrymal profluvia. My remedies are warm pediluvium, cathartics, topical application of a watery solution of opium to the eyes, ears and interior of the nostrils. The membrane is so irritable that light, dust, contradiction, and absurd remark, the sight of a Dissenter—anything, sets me sneezing." Less eloquence sufferers will endorse this description by the eminent divine. What a disease! What a hideous joke on mankind.

A Grisly Joke

Whatever disasters overtake mankind, vanity is one of the last human characteristics to be relinquished; and in our modern world there are few classes of people so pitiable, and yet withal so persistent, as those who minister to that vanity. In times of peace Paris was the centre of the dress-trade, and Parisian designers were the final arbiters of fashion. And now, in a Paris which is a bankrupt shell of its former self, a pretence of the old fashioned dictatorship goes on, painfully and precariously.

The customers, of course, are the Germans. They are the only people who can afford to buy anything so frivolous as new clothes. They pay, you understand, in occupation marks, the interesting new currency which the conquerors have devised to solve the problem of barter with a bankrupt and looted country; in the final analysis it is the French themselves who redeem the occupation marks and who thus pay for the goods which they themselves produce, but while the marks circulate they give a fictitious air of wealth.

Germany has determined to show the world that German taste is discriminating, and so special concessions have been made to the Parisian modistes; they are able to obtain materials and labor which are denied to less favored trades, for Parisian dressmaking and millinery was one of the wonders of the fashionable world, and Germany wishes to preserve it for herself. Luxurious gowns, hats, hose and lingerie are made and sold to the wives of German officers and officials, who have rarely seen such marvel before; the price of a fine gown is about five hundred dollars.

Thus Paris presents a travesty of its former self. The luxurious goods are made; there are buyers; money changes hands. But the trade is artificially kept up and the money is worthless. The whole business is one of those grisly jokes in which the New Order specializes.

Voices Of The Dead

The University Library of Yale has acquired what is believed to be the finest collection of gramophone records of the voices of celebrities in the world. It was made by Robert Vincent, a radio engineer who has followed his hobby since boyhood. When records existed he bought them or begged them; when they did not exist he made them. Among other great ones he persuaded the late Theodore Roosevelt to make a record for him. Now his collection will have an honored place at Yale and he will act as curator himself.

There is something in the quality of a human voice which tells more to the attentive ear than any biography can do. How often the nobility of a face is belied by the harshness of the voice; how often an ugly or commonplace countenance is redeemed by an expressive, melodious speech! In this collection are preserved the noble diction of Gladstone, who kept his fine voice to extreme old age, and the low, magnificently regal voice of Queen Victoria; much of the greatness of the Old Queen is to be heard in that majestic diction. The golden voice of Sarah Bernhardt is there too, and the sweet speech of Ellen Terry, of whom Nellie Melba said that to hear her pronounce the word "tipsy" was to acquire a wholly new conception of drunkenness! What a pity that Irving never made a record! The croaking utterance of Calvin Coolidge will be there, and the warm friendliness of Franklin Roosevelt, and the rolling periods and vigorous diction of Winston Churchill. John Barrymore's fine voice is on a record, and so is the rampageous, old-school elocution of Sir Frank Benson; Gielgud and Maurice Evans are preserved for posterity, and so, on two fine discs, is the noble voice of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, whom G. B. Shaw thought the finest speaker he had ever heard. Shaw himself is there, speaking with that purity bred in Dubliners, and the torrential eloquence of Lloyd George, and the rumbling hollowness of Ramsay Macdonald.

The future will have cause to be grateful to Yale and to Mr. Vincent. What we would not give to hear Shakespeare read us a sonnet, or Queen Elizabeth addressing her troops at Tilbury! But such delights will be possible for posterity.

High Cost of Parenthood

We are much interested in an article by Mr. Philip Ketchum, the Headmaster of Trinity College School, which appeared in the current issue of Saturday Night under the heading, Now We Have To Pay A Tax On Our Children! Mr. Ketchum discusses the high cost of parenthood at some length, pointing out the difficulties faced by a man who is called upon to pay heavy taxes and at the same time make adequate provision for his family. We have heard much about the necessity for "closer living" in the future, and most Canadian citizens are quite prepared to live as closely as is necessary to win the war. They would be pleased by a more even distribution of sacrifice, however.

White collar workers are the ones hardest hit. Their wages seldom rise as a result of the war boom, but their expenses rise and the variety of expenses which confront a householder who is also the head of a family is formidable. Mr. Ketchum takes as his example a man who earns $3,000 a year. If he is a bachelor with no dependents his tax will be $1,065 and he will have $1,935 left for his other expenses. But if he has a wife and three children his tax, though less, leaves him an amount which is most properly divided by five and this, according to Mr. Ketchum's figuring, allows him $488 for each person for a year, which is certainly not much.

The result, as we all know, must be a decline in our standard of living, but Mr. Ketchum argues convincingly that this decline is too steep if it is to be taken out on the children of the country, who are our chief asset and our hope for the future. At a very modest estimate it costs $200 a year to feed a child, and it will not grow fat on that. From the remaining $288 must come its share of the rent, the heat and the light, to say nothing of clothes. This is "closer living" with a vengeance; it comes near to downright penury. Mr. Ketchum in his reckonings has made no mention of deductions for insurance and similar savings and he has ignored the fact that the forced savings are returnable after the war (though nobody seems to know just when), but upon the whole his argument is sound.

There is, however, one rhetorical flourish in his article which betrays faulty preparation, and a schoolmaster should be ashamed of it. He says: "One wonders if there are not too many bachelors in the Federal Cabinet for the welfare of the country!" Of the seventeen members of the Cabinet only two, Mr. King and Mr. Mackenzie, are bachelors, so that firecracker seems a little damp. The argument stands, however, that it is poor policy to discriminate against parents and children, for in the labors of the one and the sturdy growth of the other the future of the country lies.

Food Shortage Affects Health

ACCORDING to the Stockholm "Aftontidningen," Norwegian doctors have confirmed that the difficult food situation in Norway is now beginning seriously to affect the nation's health. Present rations do not provide the necessary calories, it is maintained, and the unbalanced diet and insufficiency of vitamins is producing grave results. Scurvy proper has not yet been diagnosed, but there have occurred many cases of latent scurvy caused by the vitamin C shortage. The symptoms are tiredness and inability to work with customary efficiency. It is declared that the jaundice, diphtheria, measles and other diseases which have been very prevalent in Norway recently are also partly attributable to the shortage of vitamin C. In some parts of the country up to 25 per cent of the population has been suffering from jaundice. Since the introduction of compulsory vaccination there has been much less diphtheria. Measles were very common during the past winter and the infant mortality was much higher than usual. Extraordinary measures have been taken to combat scab, which is widespread. The shortage of pure soap and deplorable housing conditions are being keenly felt. The skin disease known as "impetigo" is common, and sufferers are required to report to doctors. Ulceration of the stomach is also more prevalent than before.

The food situation is declared worst for men working in the forests, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to get men for this type of work. Recently they were receiving nothing but potatoes for breakfast and supper; the bread ration had to be saved for dinner as it was impossible to obtain meat of any kind and fish cannot be brought into the forests.

UNDERGROUND newspapers in Norway have obtained and published the complete text of a confidential Nazi document containing the basic plan of procedure for reorganizing all groups and associations within the Norwegian business world. Included also was the preliminary draft of a decree aimed to set the plan in motion. Author of the document was an NS official named Alf L. Whist. He wrote: "As I understand it, major actions which may involve the risk of new conflicts are not desired at the present time. In order for us, despite the difficulties, to make some progress and to set up the organizational apparatus for the field of business in the shortest possible time....it will be necessary to make encroachments and to reorganize a number of organizations individually when the necessary preparations have been made and the encroachments can be made without running the risk of major disturbances. To leave the business organizations entirely alone for as long a time as now may be proposed would have an unfortunate effect on the party and would delay the work of reorganization to too great an extent."

Getting down to details the writer emphasized that before dealing with any specific organization the party would have to make sure that it was sufficiently well represented in the membership of the group to supply the men necessary to fill the positions of "dismissed" officers and directors. Whist points out that he and his party leaders have learned from experience with the teachers, textile workers and others, how people react to encroachments on their organizations, that the extent of the opposition to be met with can be estimated beforehand, and that the "degree" of the tactics necessary can be determined accordingly. He says the resignation of members and officers from the organizations must be prohibited, "otherwise we may run the risk of seeing the organization 'collapse' when attacked." Reorganization of the Union of Business and Bank Clerks could be started at once, he contends, because there "the risks and difficulties are minimal. The opposition which might arise could without doubt easily be brought under control."....Alfred W. Olsen, president of Norway's Wholesalers' Association, and Th. Mowinckel, president of Norway Wholesale Grocers' Association, have both been dismissed, and both have been replaced by a Quisling follower named Reidar Baanrud.

TO stir up confusion in the Norwegian home front the Nazis have now begun to issue an "underground" newspaper of their own. It is called "The Fight for Freedom," and the first issue appeared in June. Careful examination of the paper discloses that its obvious purpose is to cause dissension among the various groups comprising the Norwegian home front. Suspicion of its genuineness was aroused by the careful manner in which it "excused" certain NS actions and by its uncontrolled language in other respects. The trick is not entirely new in Norway, where the Nazis have long since issued false slogans and handbills for the same insidious purpose.

An artist saw an old countrymen who he thought would make a good model. So he sent his maid to bring in the man to paint him.

Still the old man hesitated. He took off his shabby hat and scratched his head in perplexity.

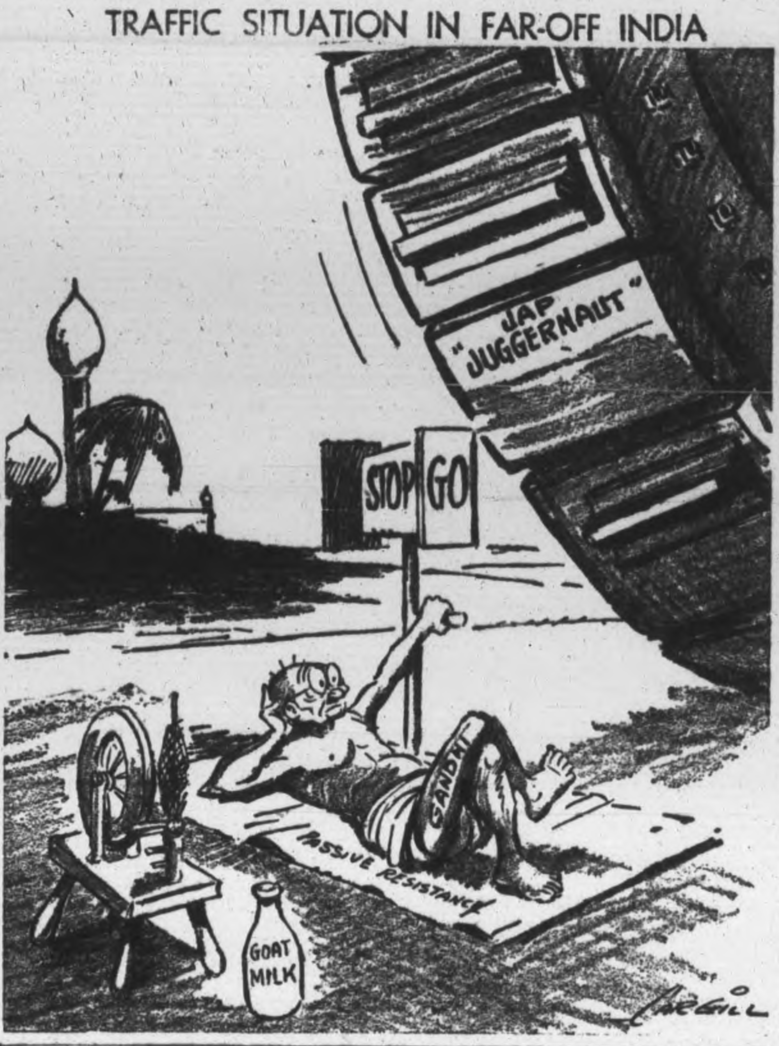
"Oh, I know that," came the reply. "I was only wondering how I'd get the paint off afterwards."

TRAFFIC SITUATION IN FAR-OFF INDIA



Japan's Caution Puzzling

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

THE Japanese have been fighting more or less defensively now for 2½ months. Unless they swing over to a strong offensive soon, one may well wonder at their inactivity since the Battle of Midway in June.

The trouble certainly is not that they lack military and naval power to strike. They have the men and equipment to attack Siberia today, if they want to do so. They have the ships and troops to make a thrust at India, Australia, Hawaii, Alaska or any of the islands guarding the United States-Australia supply line.

And until now they have had the will to fight always on the offensive. Belief in the attack has been their basic military tenet.

Two months ago—even two or three weeks ago—many well-informed military men would have laid a small wager that by this time the Japs would have pitched into the Red Armies in Siberia. One of Tokyo's traditional military aims has been to remove the threat of the maritime provinces from the Japanese homeland. Vladivostok is within easy bombing distance of Japan.

MUST ACT QUICKLY

Now military men are saying that perhaps this very danger of bombing has made Tokyo cautious. Significantly related to the inactivity in Siberia is the fact that in about four or five weeks the weather will make any military operations there almost impossible; so if the Japanese intend to act they must act quickly.

A few days ago reports came out of Australia and New Zealand that the enemy was believed to be marshalling a considerable naval force to smash the American fleet in the Southwest Pacific and isolate the marines in the Solomons. But the marines in the Solomons are still there and their supplies are still going through.

It may be that as a matter of cold realism the Japanese admirals have learned not to plunge headlong into action with the full force of Allied might in the Pacific. Since early spring they have lost war and cargo ships heavily at Lae and Salamaua, New Guinea; at Gulagi, Solomon Islands; at Midway Island, and at Kiska Island, in the Aleutians.

HARD TO REPLACE SHIPS

The Tokyo warlords made good their conquest of Burma, but pulled back closer home the amphibious forces which threatened India after Brigadier-General James Doolittle and his bomber squadron proved that Tokyo was not isolated from attack.

More recently they started a campaign to secure their cities against attack from the Chinese mainland, but soon afterward American airforces in China went into action against Japan's continental bases. And today's news from Chungking is that Chinese forces, counter-attacking, have advanced well into Chekiang and Kiangsi Provinces to throw the Japs' war machine into reverse.

It seems to be generally accepted that the Japanese are capable of desperate action when a situation demands desperation. They have squandered men in China.

They can replace their slain soldiers with recruits. But the ships they lose in sea battles and any factories they lose by aerial bombbardment cannot be quickly replaced.

Perhaps this has taught them to think twice before plunging into some costly new adventure. If and when they attack again it must be with full realization of the cost they will have to pay.

Shortage of Nurses

THE problem of securing the most advantageous distribution of manpower and womanpower applies to the armed forces and to wartime industry. But it also applies to essential services, professional and otherwise. Notably at this juncture it affects the nursing profession and the hospitals.

Under normal conditions the number of nurses in Canada approximates 23,000. Since the war, however, upwards of 1,500 have enrolled with the forces and for special service in South Africa. Add to that the increasing movement of nurses and prospective nurses to industry and the fact that at least thirty per cent of the nurses marry within two years of graduation, and it is not difficult to appreciate the magnitude of the problem.

The Canadian Nurses Association, indeed, frankly describes the situation as alarming. The Dominion Government is also aware of the seriousness of the case and has made a grant for the 1942-43 period, specifying that $25,000 thereof shall be used for the promotion of training in teaching, administration, supervision, and other phases. The C.N.A. itself urges, by way of solution, that more young women of suitable age, and possessing the necessary aptitude and disposition, consider joining the ranks of the nursing profession; that married nurses take "refresher" courses with a view to returning temporarily to this work; that renewed emphasis be laid upon instruction; and that bursaries be set up to stimulate special and instructional studies.

In Brantford this state of affairs had been anticipated and appropriate steps taken to cope with it. Under the sponsorship of the Brantford General Hospital School for Nurses Alumnae Association and the Florence Nightingale Club, the registration of married nurses resident here has been completed and a special course of instruction covered. Some of these nurses are now on duty again. Enrollment of women having some nursing experience is also proceeding, and co-operation has been accorded the Red Cross Society and St. John Ambulance Association in connection with the preparation of voluntary nursing aides. With regard to educational promotion, the Brantford General Hospital School for Nurses already has seven bursaries or scholarships. As for the standard of training there, it has always been maintained at the highest level.

It will be evident, therefore, that, while the shortage of nurses is acute, everything possible has been and is being done here to offset it. Given the public-spirited co-operation of those who are able to help, and anticipating maintained interest in the profession on the part of prospective nurses, it should be possible to keep the situation reasonably well in hand.—Brantford Expositor.

The Satanic Will

It is not astonishing that modern men find it so difficult to comprehend the inwardness of Hitler's acts. The modern skeptical world has been taught for some two hundred years a conception of human nature in which the reality of evil, so well known to the ages of faith, has been discounted. Almost all of us grew up in an environment of such easy optimism that we can scarcely know what is meant, though our ancestors knew it well, by the satanic will. We shall have to recover this forgotten but essential truth—along with so many others that we lost when, thinking we were enlightened and advanced, we were merely shallow and blind.—Walter Lippmann.

Post-War Wages

Mr. Bevin has been talking about a universal minimum wage, which is to become part of our post-war system of social security. We cordially agree with him; for the plans that are being put forward for improved social services cannot be made to work unless they are accompanied by an assured basic standard for those at work as well as for the sick and the unemployed. But we should like to know whether the proposal implies a general basic wage at less than which nobody may be employed in any industry or occupation, or whether we are to have something more like a universal extension of the Trade Board system, with separate minimum rates fixed for each industry, or even for each grade of labor within each industry. Or is there perhaps to be a combination of the two—a system of trade minimum wages, together with an overriding minimum for everybody? Again, will there be separate minimum rates for men and women, or will the principle of "equal pay" be applied? The divergence between men's and women's average earnings is still so great that different rates are likely to be unavoidable; but this need not hinder Trade Boards from fixing uniform rates for trades where men and women work side by side.—New Statesman and Nation (London).

A Bible Message For Today

O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good things, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God.

Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him.

He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young.

Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehend the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?—Isaiah 40: 9-12.

Tyranny Defined

There is a widespread tendency to regard the fact that they (governments) can do a thing as meaning that they may do it. There can be no more fatal error than this. Between "can do" and 'may do" ought to exist, the whole realm which recognizes the sway of duty, fairness, sympathy, taste, and all other things that make life beautiful and society possible. It is this confusion between "can do" and "may do" which makes me fear at times lest in the future the worst tyranny will be found in democracies. Interests which are not strongly represented in parliament may be treated as though they had no rights by governments who think that the power and the will to legislate amount to a justification of that legislation. Such a principle would be death to liberty. No part of our life would be secure from interfence from without. If I were asked to define tyrany, I would say it was yielding to the lust of governing. It is only when governments feel it an honorable duty not to step beyond that which was in reality, and not only in form, put into their hands that the world will know what true freedom is. — Lord Moulton in The Atlantic Monthly.

Million a Minute

The present federal session, like many of its predecessors, directs attention to a condition that Parliament should remedy. It is that many weeks at the beginning are wasted in oratory of no helpfulness to the country, and the vital business of the session is rushed through without adequate consideration and discussion in the closing weeks because the members want to get away to their homes. The country saw the sorry spectacle recently of the House of Commons voting a million dollars a minute of the taxpayers' money. The people may judge the character of the scrutiny given to these expenditures.—Calgary Herald.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, August 25

Opportunity may be said to be knocking at the door on this day, with urgent demands that such openings, generous and expansive, be grasped and developed to their fullest scope. This may require initiative and enterprise sustained by sound ideas, well-organized plans and practical constructive technique. New and perhaps audacious ideas may incite to decisive and even dramatic and thrilling adventure in putting over important projects. Influential persons, powerful friends with capital may bounteously co-operate where industry, initiative and workable plans are illuminated by flashes of intuition or imagination.

Those whose birthday it is may find a year in which luck may come knocking at the door with insistence. It should be responded to with alacrity, audacity and determination, backed up by sound and practical plans for putting over new and large-scale programs, possibly in fresh fields or with bold strokes of initiative. This enthusiasm and self-reliance, together with a measure of subtlety, intuition or imagination in such propositions, should appeal to influential persons of capital and prestige.

A child born on this day should be endowed with great initiative and enterprise, backed up by practical constructive ability as well as intuition and insight. It should be able to promote large affairs and attract influencial support and much success.

Carnival Raises $116.65 For War Victims

Bright lights, gay flags and pennants marked the site of the yearly Range Pals Carnival, which was held on Friday evening on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sayers. A large crowd enjoyed the various games and attractions of the evening, which netted a sum of $116.65 for the British War Victims Fund.

The highlight of the evening was the draw on the afghan made and donated by Mrs. Hagerman, 556 Water street. Mr. Gordon K. Fraser, M. P., made the draw and the lucky winner was Miss Dorothy Price of Peterborough.

Bingo and a wheel of fortune attracted a large crowd throughout the evening and a fishpond was popular with the children. A flag-bedecked booth, where aprons made by the Range Pals were on sale, was a busy spot during the first part of the evening. A refreshment booth and dance-floor were additional attractions. Music was supplied by the Coldspring Mountaineers.

Range Pals would like to express their appreciation to Mr. Gordon K. Fraser, who kindly consented to show his moving pitcoures of Stoney Lake, Ottawa, and the West, at the Range Pals Victory Theatre. Thanks are also extended to all who helped in any way to make the carnival a success.

Margaret Hayes Is Bride Of Pte. Thomas Smith

The wedding of Margaret Hayes, daughter of Mrs. Florence Hayes and the late William Hayes, to Pte. Thomas Kenneth Smith, R.C.O.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Smith, took place quietly on Saturday afternoon at Knox United Church parsonage, with Rev. H. J. Mahoney officiating.

The bride looked lovely in a street- length frock of pale blue sheer chiffon with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses and baby's breath. She was attended by Miss Dorothy Smith, sister of the groom, who wore a tea-rose French sheer chiffon with white accessories and a corsage of American beauty roses. The best man was Mr. David Bebbington of Toronto.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Eric Frizzelle, where the bride's mother received wearing a dress of navy French crepe with matching hat and accessories. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a pale blue ensemble, a pale blue felt hat and white accessories. Both wore corsages of roses.

The happy couple will live in Peterborough.

WOMEN'S SELF-PITYING HABIT IS CALLED VERY DEMORALIZING

Chief Offenders Are the Middle-Aged Who Often Blame Husband for Tears

If there is one reform that is needed more than any other it is to cure women of being sorry for themselves. The sef-pitying habit is every whit as demoralizing as the dope habit and it is lot harder on the family and friends of the addict. The morphine taker and the drunkard have their moments of sobriety, or they can be clapped into a sanatorium where only those who are paid for it have to listen to their moans, whereas there is no escape from the weeper. She is always on the spot, salting down with her tears everybody with whom she comes in contact.

Chief among these weepers are middle-aged women. There is not a mail that doesn't bring me a score of brine-soaked letters from melancholy ladies who tell their troubles and ask me to mingle my tears with theirs. Sometimes the writer sobs out that she is the most miserable creature in the world because her husband takes her for granted. He is good and kind and generous and faithful, but he never tells her he loves her, and she doesn't want to be fed on roast beef and potatoes; she is starving for lollypops.

Sometimes she is just plain bored. Her children have grown up and gone about the business of life for themselves, and she is so unhappy with nothing to do or think about that she contemplates committing suicide. Sometimes—boo-hoo, boo-hoo—she is lonely. She has lost touch with her old friends and she doesn't care for strangers. Nobody comes to see her, or writes her. She isn't asked out to dinners and parties any more. And this is a hard and cruel world for a poor, forlorn woman.

Most heart-wrenching of all her lamentations is that over her children. She sacrificed her life for them, and look at the way they treat her! They have gotten married and left her.

Only a Mother Knows—

They are absorbed in their own homes and children. They won't listen to her advice. They don't want her to live with them. When they go out of an evening they don't want her to tag along. And so on and on and on. Only a mother knows how children repay her kindness with black ingratitude.

Well, it is too bad to spoil anybody's fun, and as these women get such a kick out of being miserable it seems almost cruel to interefere with their favorite indoor pastime. But as I read these lacrimose epistles I always feel like saying, well, if you don't like being unhappy, why don't you do something about it? Nobody has to live in a slough of despond unless he or she is too lazy or too stupid to climb out of it. Anyway, you knew that the only way you could escape the conditions of middle age was by dying young. So why didn't you prepare yourself to meet them?

When all is said, what are you weeping over? Surely you have no cause to weep because your fat, bald, middle-aged husband doesn't make romantic love to you. By the time you have been married to a man for 25 or 30 years you have him so securely tied to you that you couldn't lose him if you tried; or you lost him so long ago you've forgotten what he looked like and wouldn't take him back as a gift. Anyway, when a man takes his wife for granted, he pays her his supreme compliment. He thinks she is so all right he doesn't have to mention it.

Why Didn't They Prepare

You knew your children were bound by nature to grow up and leave you, so why didn't you provide yourself with some outside work to do when you wouldn't have to put in your time wiping little noses? Why didn't you acquire some skill by which you could support yourself if need be? Why didn't you go in for clubs or philanthropy? Why did you learn to be a crackerjack bridge player? That has saved many a woman from dreary old age.

If you are lonely, that is you own fault. You didn't make new social contacts. You didn't keep your friendship fences in repair. You let yourself become a bore who was always whining, instead of a cheerful, pleasant companion.

And what grievance have you got against your children because they want to live their own lives? Why don't you fill your own life so full of interests that you will not have to depend upon them to keep you entertained and amused? Why don't you face the fact that if you want them to enjoy your society you must laugh with them, instead of expecting them to weep with you?

Of course, the crepe-hangers are not going to listen to these admonitions. They are having too good a time pitying themselves. But there you are.

The groom's mother, who also received, wore a gown of figured blue silk with a blue felt hat and white accessories and a corsage of deep pink roses.

H.M.C.S. Port Hope,
c-o Fleet Mail Officer,
Halifax, N.S.

Dear Mrs. Strong,—This letter is a little bit overdue, but I know you will forgive me as we have been kept very much on the hop during the past two weeks.

First of all I wish to express to you and your lady assistants my sincere thanks for your noble efforts on our behalf during the "minesweeper comforts campaign," and also at Port Hope on the fifth of August. It was a glorious day in every respect, and the boys are more than delighted with their 'ditty bags.'

In your speech at Port Hope you remarked, "'I am old enough to say I love you all." May I state that we are young enough to say we all love you and we will never forget you or the people of Port Hope who took us to their hearts.

The whole ship's company join with me in wishing you every happiness in the future, and it is my earnest wish that one day I may have the pleasure of meeting you again. With best wishes, yours sincerely, Wm. Turner, Lieut. R.C.N. V.R.

It is worn straight down on the forehead and is trimmed at the sides of the small rolled brim with large white velvet daisies with brown velvet centres. A sheer brown veil dotted in white forms a snood and there is a cluster of daisies under the veiling.

Wild Pitching Costs Petes Saturday Game

OSHAWA, Aug. 24.—(Special to the Examiner)—Oshawa Commercials took the first game of their O.A.S.A. first round juvenile playoffs from Peterborough when they clashed here on Saturday afternoon in one of the most weird games of the season, 18-11.

Displaying all kinds of confidence, the Liftlock City juveniles stepped into the offerings of Oshawa's portsider, Wereholaz, to pound out 4 runs in the first inning on four hits and an error. Meeting the ball hard the Peterborough youngsters appeared headed for an easy afternoon, especially when they added another run in the second inning on a walk, sacrifice bunt and a hit by Garvey, their colorful catcher.

One Big Rally

Peterborough's attack bogged down after that however and they garnered only five hits in the remainder of the afternoon. These came in 6th inning when the visitors suddenly came to life after their bad lapses, to score six runs in one big rally, aided by two walks. Those two big innings, the first and sixth, accounted for 10 of Peterborough's 11 runs. In the other innings, Wercholaz aided by great fielding support, kept the Juvenile Petes off the score sheet. A brilliant double play on a diving grass top catch by Salmers, was one of the highlights of the game.

Wildness by their hurlers cost Peterborough the game. Oshawa loaded the bases in the second inning, after having two runners "die" on the paths in the first, but the Peterborough infield cut off two runs at the plate and the only tally the Commercials could get was on a passed ball.

In the third innings Commercials again filled the bases after there was one out, on three walks. Jones, who started on the mound, continued to walk batters until three runs had been forced across the plate, then Salmers singled. Smith took a hand at pitching but he proved no better and Jones tried again. Then Leether took over finally, in the fourth inning.

In the meantime, walk after walk, plus only three clean hits and one error, had given Commercials 11 runs in their third inning. They added 4 more in the 4th when Ted Rospond connected for a homer. Barker homered for two more runs in the fifth, to make the score 18-5. Then came Peterborough rally in the sixth.

The game was called early in the ninth, when a high wind created a dust condition that made play impossible.

Leether, with his steady pitching in relief role, Garvey's sparkling work behind the bat and Carpenter's numerous catches in centre field, were the highlights of the Peterborough team's play. Anderson and Millen also stood out. Garvey also paced his team at the plate with three hits, while Anderson and Detlor had two each. Salmers and Rospond with three each were the big hitters for Commercials.

The return game will be played in Peterborough on Wednesday evening.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP). — Here are a couple of new angles on the football-for-soldiers business, presented by a guy who was closely connected with the college game before he went into the United States Army Air Force...His idea is that the only service men who can get ready to play tough schedules are the cadets who have regular hours set aside for Athletics. The ones who work with planes (or make it machine-guns, tanks, etc.) for 12 or 14 hours a day are too tired for serious athletics...Still, if they can run a big-time program and not interfere with training—and some say they can—we don't see the purposes in calling it off...A winning team is a handy way to build up the old collitch—or "we got the best dam outfit in this man's army"—spirit!

SAILOR'S SALE:

When a sailor thumbed a ride on a truck in Detroit the other day the result was the sale of $27,500 worth of tickets for the Amateur Softball Association world championships... The sailor was Chief Petty Officer Max Gail, who has been working with the association because this year's profits will go to the Detroit Navy Recreational Fund...He told the truck driver, who was Bill Barnett, athletic director of the Teamsters' Union...Barnett got a bright idea, and the eventual result was that the union bought out the U. of Detroit stadium for the night of the tournament semi-finals.

When Jimmy Hitchcock reports to the Chapel Hill Naval Pre-Flight School Thursday, Head Coach Jack Meagher of Auburn will be fresh out of assistants to help him start football practice Sept. 1...Hitchcock is the seventh Auburn coach to enter the service.

Norma Shearer Marries Ski Instructor

BEVERLEY HILLS, Cal., August 24 —(AP). — A romance begun four years ago when they met at a Sun Valley, Idaho, vacation resort where he was a professional ski instructor culminated in a quiet church wedding on Saturday for Norma Shearer, Montreal-born screen actress, and Martin Arrouge.

The ceremony, which united the 36-year-old widow of Irving Thalberg, movie producer who died six years ago, in wedlock with the sportsman eight years her junior, was conducted by Father John J. O'Donnell at the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Miss Shearer's two children by her first marriage, Irving Thalberg, Jr., 11 and Katherine Thalberg, 8, and a few close film colony friends of the couple attended the wedding.

Mrs. Sylvia Fairbanks, widow of screen actor Douglas Fairbanks, flew here from New York to be the matron of honor. Otto Lang, ski instructor and old friend of the bridegroom was best man.

The bride wore a flowered print gown. Her wedding ring was of plain gold which covered the platinum band she wore for nine years as Mrs. Thalberg.

In a pre-nuptial agreement by the couple, Arrouge waived all rights to Miss Shearer's community property from her late husband's estate, saying he wanted it known he was marrying her for love and not her money.

Miss Shearer estimated the estate at $1,500,000 and said it has been kept in trust for the support of herself and her two children.

The couple plan to honeymoon at the nearby Santa Monica home of the bride. Arrouge said he expects to enter the Army shortly.

$500,000 Raised By Big League Teams To Help Families Of Army And Navy

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR,
Associated Press Sports Writer

"Relief," a word reserved for substitute pitchers in baseball language of the past, took on new meaning 16 teams chalked up their important "assist" of the season—designed in the Major Leagues today as all to help the families of the United States' fighting men.

The program, in which the receipts of eight regularly scheduled games in each circuit were earmarked for army-navy relief, was completed yesterday when the American League staged a fast finish with a trio of doubleheaders that boosted contributions past the $500,000 mark.

A New York crowd of 69,136 paid an estimated $80,000 to see the Yankees and Washington Senators. In Detroit, the Tigers and St. Louis Browns drew 50,758 and a gate of $68,172. And approximately $30,000 came in at Philadelphia, where the Athletics met Boston Red Sox.

These doubleheaders, redesignated as relief games after the first five American League army-navy contests brought in less than $75,000, enabled the junior circuit to surpass its quota of $250,000, although it fell short of the $270,000 produced by the National League.

Babe Ruth and Walter Johnson were added attractions at Yankee Stadium. The ex-slugger of the Yankees and the former pitching ace of the Senators faced each other in an exhibition between games and the Babe obliged his followers by driving two balls into the stands.

As for the pennant races, which are moving rapidly toward the finish line, the Yankees watched their American League lead shrink to nine games while Brooklyn Dodgers hiked their margin in the National League to 7½.

Short Chips To The Green

By DAVE PRICE

Perfect weather, a large entry list, a huge gallery, and an almost perfect golf course, adds up to a successful tournament...Such was the condition yesterday for Peterborough district's greatest golf day.

Congratulations to those responsible for the condition of the course. The visiting pros were lavish in their praise of fairways and greens.

Scallions to those responsible for the setting of the pins. They threatened that they were going to make things tough for the players, but according to remarks heard in the locker room after the match, their wildest expectations were exceeded ...The pin-setters didn't fool.

Birdies were not numerous, and there was only one eagle scored. Stan Whiddon scored the only eagle, and to prove he wasn't fooling, he picked the long, par 5, sixteenth, on which to score his 3. Lionel Brown scored a birdie 2 on the fifteenth. His drive was behind the bunker on the left of the green, and he hit his second shot with a nine iron and a prayer, and holed the shot for a 2.

Further proof of the success of the tourney was the enthusiastic response of the visiting pros to a proposed 36-hole tourney next June. Hugh Borthwick promised that the leading Ontario pros would take part, and Wes. McKnight assured those responsible that transportation and war conditions permissible, he would have 150 amateurs here. Anyway it's something for the Kawartha executive to think about, and if they do decide in favor of a tourney next year, now is the time to start thumping the drums.

Sorry we couldn't locate the entire scores of the Peterborough-Kawartha match Saturday. Suffice it to say that for the next year the Glover-Dobbin Trophy will find haven at the Peterborough Club. The forty-point deficit the Kawartha shotmakers started off with Saturday afternoon was too much for them to overcome by 4 points.

Congratulations to Lex Robson. He promised the committee that the leading Ontario pros would be here, and they were...further proof of the Robson popularity among the monied golfing fraternity. Lex missed a couple of short putts yesterday which he would have scored any other time. Even so he wound up with a par 71, along with Bill Kerr and Gordie Brydson.

The pros must live right...the wind died down in the afternoon and they didn't have to do a lot of figuring, such as the amateurs did in the morning. There was such a high wind in the morning that on a couple of tees it was a case of hit your ball and duck.

By HERB MARTIN

We have been asked many times by the man on the street: "To what do you attribute the success of your Lawn Bowling Club?"

That is a difficult question to answer. It is one that will require a lot of thought and naturally would take up a lot of time in preparing an answer.

Looking through our scrap book of a period of ten years we find several writings that might be well qualified to answer that question. We will submit three of them:—

The following article appeared in The Daily Examiner under Lawn Bowling News on June 15, 1936:

Lawn bowling is a game that is played right before your eyes—no loaded dice, no packed deck, nobody receiving a ridiculous sum of money just to tickle the public's fancy for an hour or so. It is one of the games that is not "controlled" by any interests for selfish gain; it is one of the very few sports that is not being commercialized.

And then on October 3, 1936, this appeared:—

"We are very happy to know that the men and women of our club are made up of such high quality that the terrible disease of "discrimination" from which the world is suffering so much just now, has not affected them in the least, and we hope and pray that you will keep strong and healthy so that you keep strong and healthy so that you will have enough resistance to fight off any attack that may be made upon your mind to join the ranks of any organization whose teachings are hatred and intolerance to men and women whose nationality, religion and creed may be different to yours, and which is contrary to the highest ideals and fine teachings of Christ himself."

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

Plazas and Royals who have staged two great battles in the City League final series, with the former victorious in both, will tie into each other tonight in the third game of the championship round. The contest is billed for 6.30 o'clock, fifteen minutes earlier than the starting hour last week, and should be as thrilling as the first two tilts. Royals, although beaten 5 to 2 and 4 to 3, were always dangerous in both battles; as a matter of fact a hit at the right time would have made a wonderful difference. Tonight the Parnell outfit will be fighting with their backs to the wall for a third defeat in a row would leave them in a desperate situation. They are confident that they can get back in the running with a victory in the third game and that Ronnie Akers who handcuffed the Plazas after the first inning of the opening struggle will be able to take their measure tonight. Plazas will send Tom Parsons back at the Royals and the Omemee right-hander hopes to pick up his second win of the series over the second-placers. It will be a ding-dong affair all the way and should prove just as full of thrills as the first two games which were about the best of the season. The fourth tilt will be staged tomorrow night.

* * * * * *

So far as having a winner for Wednesday ready the Girls' Softball League is not in much better shape now than it was a week ago, although it has had the benefit of a week's postponement in the Ontario series. Today with the Peterborough representatives called upon to meet the Toronto winners Wednesday in the provincial playdowns, the final series still stands Westclox 3, Generals 1. The league playoffs have not moved a wheel since last Monday when Generals after losing three straight games, grabbed off the fourth contest. Tuesday night Westclox, leading 13 to 4 were within an innings of the championship when the game was called for darkness in the sixth and was therefore no contest. Thursday night another attempt was rained out and again Saturday night the downpour put an end to a game that had reached the first half of the fourth. Generals were the unlucky club on this occasion for they were leading 5 to 0 when the game was called. They had scored a run in the first innings and four in the second when Isobel Bullock had to go to the rescue of Marg Watson Meanwhile Bea McDowell had the Westclox batters stopped, holding them to one hit in the first three innings.

* * * * * *

The rival outfits will make a fourth try tonight to get the fifth game of the series completed. Westclox need a win to take the title; Generals on the other hand require three in a row to accomplish the same achievement. The Big Bens can wind the whole thing up by coming through with a victory. If they do of course the jam is cleared up and everything will be set for Wednesday. On the other hand a win for Generals would leave them only a game away from tieing up the series and would also leave the league executive with a problem on their hands. Tonight's game should be a lively battle under the circumstances. Generals have their full team back in action now, with Norma Strickland playing again while the Big Bens will also have a full team available. Tonight's game is called for 6.30 o'clock and it is up to the opposing managers to get their players out there on time. The pitching choices look like Bea McDowell for Generals and Marg Watson for the Westclockers.

Juveniles Play Wednesday

Peterborough's Juveniles met with a reverse in their opening O.A.S.A. game at Oshawa Saturday when they were beaten 18 to 11 by the Oshawa Commercials in a loose game. The second game of the series will be played at Riverside Park on Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock and the Peterborough kids will have to grab off a victory or call it a season. They are confident that they can turn the trick and force a third battle to decide the round. They point out that they lost in Oshawa last season and yet were able to come through and take the series. Saturday's defeat was just one of those things, say the Juveniles, admitting that they got a lot of bad ball out of their systems. At that they got away to a promising start Saturday, scoring five runs in the first half of the first to take an early lead. They could not stand prosperity, however, and unsteady pitching and shaky fielding cost them the verdict. Bill Jones started on the hill top for the Petes, was relieved by Warren Smith and finally Reg Leether had to be called upon to finish the game. The youngsters should have a good crowd here Wednesday as they battle to sew up the series. They have played good ball all season against strong intermediate clubs in the City League and in their own division should be able to hit their stride and come through with a win. They have earned support—and should have it in good measure Wednesday.

Another Peterborough boy, long a familiar figure in sports here has signed up for the bigger game of beating Hitler and Company. Archie Weir, for years an outstanding performer in hockey and softball, has enlisted with the Canadian artillery, joining the Western Ontario battery of which Capt. Ackhurst, formerly of the 4th Battery here is second in command. Weir, who started his hockey with the St. John's junior O.H.A. team here played with Niagara Falls when they won the junior O.H.A. championship, his work with St. John's having attracted the attention of Cataract scouts, and afterwards played senior and intermediate hockey with the Petes. For a number of years he was coach of the Peterborough junior squad. In softball he played outfield for the Sugar Bowl team, perennial City League winners a few years ago. A host of friends here will wish Weir all kinds of luck in his army career.

Red Sox Gain A Little

For the second week-end in succession the Boston Red Sox have won double-headers on Saturday and Sunday and as a result of this activity the Croninites have picked up some ground on the New York Yanks, although the latter's margin is still ample. A feature of the Red Sox twin triumph on Sunday was that they won both games by the shutout route, with Tex Hughson, rapidly becoming the pitching sensation of the year, picking off his 17th victory. Hughson held the Philadelphia Athletics to four hits in shutting them out 2 to 0, getting some help from Jim Tabor who poled out homer No. 10. In the second game Charlie Dobson came back with another pitching master-piece blanking the A's and allowing only four blows. Phil Marchildon was the victim, taking the count by 7 to 0. Another fine piece of American League pitching yesterday was contributed by crafty old Ted Lyons of the Chicago White Sox who held Cleveland Indians to three hits as the Sox took a 3 to 1 win. Then Jim Bagby retaliated with a five-hitter to shut Chicago out 1 to 0.

* * * * * *

Most sensational game of the week-end however was the first game of the double-header between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Giants, finally taken by the Bums 6 to 4 in 10 innings. That was a battle crammed full of fireworks. Brooklyn had a lead of 3 to 0. Then that great little slugger who pilots the Giants, Mel Ott, poled out his 23rd homer of the season to tie the score and the game went into extra innings. In the top of the tenth Johnny Mize, also a great hitter in his own right, slapped out a four-master with a runner on the sacks and the Giants looked to be in. But Brooklyn filled the bases in their end of the frame and still another powerhouse in the person of Dolph Camilli strode out to the plate and slapped the apple out of the orchard to score four runs and give the Bums the decision. The Dodgers also took the second game despite Mel Ott's 24th homer of the campaign.

* * * * * *

Another feature of the Sunday bill-of-fare was the fine exhibition of pitching given by two Chicago Cub veterans, Claude Passeau and Lon Warneke who shutout the Cincinnati Reds in both ends of a double-header and incidentally beat another famous pair of pitchers, Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer. The score in each case was exactly the same—3 to 0 for the Cubs. Passeau won his 17th game pitted against Walters and then Warneke came back in the second tilt and held the Reds to two hits while the Cubs were collecting nine off Derringer. The Yanks were beaten by Washington in the first game yesterday because Vernon of the Senators went on a batting spree and drove in five runs. Charlie Keller had his 23rd and Tommy Henrich his 12th homer of the season but Washington won just the same.

$500,000 Mark Set For Whirly

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., August 24 — (AP). — Ben Jones, the "Wizard of Whirlaway," has definite designs on making Warren Wright's world's leading money gleaner the first racehorse to reach the $500,000 mark and has mapped out a program accordingly.

The Calumet Farm conditioner is taking Whirly to Garden State Park for the $10,000 Trenton Handicap next Saturday.

"The infection to Whirlaway's right eyelid is getting better," Jones said. "From Camden I'll take Whirlaway to Chicago for the one and one-quarter mile Washington Park Handicap on Labor Day. Then we'll return to Belmont Park for his fall engagements on New York tracks.

"We want to pass that $500,000 mark as soon as possible and may have to shoot as often as possible. If everything pans out, we plan to take Whirlaway and the remainder of the stable to Florida next winter, where his main objective will be the $50,000 Widener Handicap.

The most glamorous of Blenheim's progeny has earned $458,336 with 25 victories in 47 starts.

Branch Rickey reports that St. Louis Cardinals' organization has sent 124 players to the armed forces, including 17 from the Columbus, Ga., farm club...And the latest P. G. A. check-up shows 148 pro golfers in uniform.

Oshawa Club 12 Runs Up

A return match between Peterboro-Whitaker and Oshawa Clubs was played at Oshawa on Saturday and a low scoring game resulted in a win for Oshawa by a margin of 12 runs. The final score being Oshawa 34, P-W 22 thus reversing the result of the match here on July 25 when the local team won by 13 runs —48 to 35.

The all-round play of Arthur Sargent was the main factor in the Oshawa win. Working in Peterborough he travelled with the local team to Oshawa and proceeded to get the day's high score of 14 out of the winners total of 34 and then took 5 wickets for 10 runs.

Oshawa batted first and against the bowling of Dyer, 6 for 11, and Colbran 4 for 23 were all out for 34, Craig (9) alone except Sargent putting up any opposition.

The total of 34 did not look like a difficult one to beat, but the local men suffering from over-confidence or nervous or over-anxiety failed completely and did not improve their chances by presenting the opposition with a good wicket by the run-out route. The innings was more or less a procession as the score sheet shows but admittedly the light was bad.

The bowling on both sides was very accurate as shown by the fact that of the 20 wickets that fell 18 were clean bowled.

The match to be played by a combined Peterboro-Oshawa team against the Picton R. A. F. will be played here but the date is not yet definitely fixed, notice will be given and so far as is now known it will be the last of the season.

Chiefs Capture Three Games, Two From Bears

(By The Associated Press)

The hitting strength of Syracuse Chiefs which has been lacking most of this season, blossomed out in full bloom during the week-end. The pitching staff has borne most of the burden.

The Chiefs went on the warpath Saturday night when they lambasted Montreal Royals 19-2 and then scalped Newark Bears, International League leaders, on Sunday by 8-3 and 6-2 scores.

In the opener, Clayton Lambert of the Chiefs, and Randy Gumpert of the Bears, duelled on even terms until the sixth, when Syracuse tallied five times to seal the contest.

Newark took a two-run lead early in the second game, but the Indians clinched the contest with a 5-run sortie in the fourth. The victories boosted the Chiefs to third place as Jersey City Giants lost a pair to the last-place Rochester Red Wings by 5-2 and 6-4 scores.

Montreal Royals took a firmer grip on second place as they beat Buffalo Bisons in a bargain bill, 6-2 and 3-0.

Ed Albosta hurled a two-hitter in the wind-up. Les Burge connected for his 25th home run of the season in the fourth. This game was played in 67 minutes—a season's record at Montreal.

Toronto and Baltimore traded shut-outs with Jack Hallett of the Leafs winning the opener, 3-0, while giving up only three hits. Clyde Smoll of the Orioles took the seven-inning contest, 7-0, allowing only five bingles.

In Saturday games Baltimore defeated Toronto 3-1, Newark triumphed 5-1 over Buffalo in the first game of a doubleheader, and the second contest was postponed. Jersey City took the opener 6-5 from Rochester and the second contest was called at the end of the fourth because of dim-out regulations.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(CP)—It will take a lot of riding to catch Emil Sporri, veteran jockey who rode 36 winners in the first four weeks Pacific Coast racing...His closest opponent at that time was Alex Haller, with 28...At that rate, it wouldn't cost much in the long run to bet Sporri on the nose every time he rides...Sporri is one of the greatest half-mile jocks on this continent.

Hockey Talk:

Paul Haynes, an important figure in Montreal Canadiens' hockey set-up, was in Toronto Friday—day of the meeting between professional and amateur hockey officials...He said it was "just a coincidence" that he happened along while the meeting was in progress...Lorne Dugald was with him...Haynes opined Gordon Drillon wouldn't be with Toronto Maple Leafs next winter...He said every other club in the league would like to have him, left the inference that the one with the most cash would get him.

Incidentally:

Maurice (Winnipeg Free Press) Smith reports that Calgary Bronks' last link with football has been broken with the sale of its equipment to a junior league...Proceeds of the sale will be used to settle Bronks' indebtedness at 50 cents on the dollar...That's as good an indication as any that the only money made in amateur football goes to the players...Larry Haynes, one of Calgary's best men when Bronks were a power in football, will coach a club in American football at the Jericho Air Station on the Pacific Coast...Four or five northwest United States football colleges will be booked into Vancouver for exhibition games...

Junior hockey players will make more money than ever before next winter, because most of the good ones will be in the N.H.L. (if it operates)...Bill Ezinicki, the husky 18-year-old who left Winnipeg for Oshawa, Ont., a couple of months ago, may be one of the little-heralded lads to go up...Ezinicki made a fine showing in the Ontario Amateur and Canadian open golf tournaments, and his pals say he's a better hockey player than golfer...If so he's a cinch for the N.H.L., because he's only a few strokes from being one of Canada's best golfers...Bill (Moncton Transcript) Hutchinson adds words of disapproval on selection of all Quebec and Ottawa district tennis juniors for the "international" invitation tennis tournament at the Seigniory Club last Saturday and Sunday...

Star Ruth, seven-year-old bay gelding by Star Elect, trotted to a new world record for seven furlongs at Randall track Cleveland 17 years ago today. W. R. Cox was in the sulky when the 1:45¾ mark was set. This was equalled in the same year by Norman Grattan, a four-year-old gelding.

Elbie Fletcher, Pirates, and Murry Dickson, Cardinals—former slammed eighth inning homer that gave Bucs first game and latter pitched four-hit ball to win afterpiece.

Kawartha Pro Lex Robson Is Top Player

Paced by 14 top-ranking professionals from well-known golf clubs in Ontario, 134 golfers competed at the Kawartha Club on Sunday afternoon in an invitation tournament that attracted the largest entry of any tournament in Canada so far this year. Counting the 44 women who played at the Peterborough club during the day, the total entry for the tourney was 178 players, and taken all round the event was eminently successful.

Arranged primarily to raise money for the Kinsmen "Milk for Britain" Fund, the tournament was given great impetus when Lex Robson, popular professional at the Kawartha club was able to bring 13 outside professional to the course, for the first time since the club was opened. A cool wind, which whistled across the course, affected the driving, but generally the course itself was in top shape, the fairways in particular being fine. Several of the golfers found the greens a bit slippery, as they were cut close, but they adjusted their playing to this condition as play progressed. Gordon Brydson of Mississauga, top placing Canadian in the recently played Canadian Open, was enthusiastic about the course, as was Bill Kerr of Cedarbrae and Dick Borthwick of Oakdale.

Robson First

In the professional play, Lex Robson and Gord Brydson played the course in par 71, running neck and neck throughout although reversing the scores, with Robson going out in 37 and back in 34 while Brydson went out in 33 and back in 38. Bill Kerr of Cedarbrae also whipped the course for a par score of 71, shooting 34 and 37. Bill Spittal, pro at the Peterborough Club, and who gave Robson refreshing co-operation in arranging the various details of the tournament, carded a 73, with 35 and 38. Close on his heels came Dick Borthwick of Oakdale who hit 74. Jack Littler of Glen Mawr was next with 75, and Bob Gray of Scarboro was next with 76.

Following the tournament, Bob Gray, Bob Burns, Gordon Brydson and Tom Williams, from golf courses in the Toronto district, gave an exhibition of shots, while Dick Borthwick presided at the mike, explaining over the public address system supplied by the C.G.E., the various favorite shots and style of the different players.

Wes McKnight Here

Among the visiting amateur players was Wes McKnight well-known Toronto sports announcer, who won first prize in the low gross score in the flight embracing players with handicaps between 10 and 19.

A gallery of close to 400 people watched the play at the tees and greens near the club house and the locker house, and as the various foursomes, wound up play at the last green just south of the locker house late in the afternoon, the green was ringed with players and spectators. On this same green Lex Robson missed his chance to break par and top all players in the tournament when he missed a three-foot putt.

One of the finest cards of the day was turned in by the veteran professional of Oshawa, Jack Roberts, who is over the 50-year mark but who kept in the van of the leading players with a 78. Senior P.G.A. golf champion in 1940, Roberts is one of the most popular men in the business, and his kindly manner and sound advice is a tonic to the younger generation of top ranking players.

Golf players from both the Peterborough and Kawartha clubs showed up well in the playing, and garnered a fair share of the prizes, while amateurs from the Cedarbrae Club, Toronto, also came in for a good portion of the silverware. The prizes donated by Quaker Oats, Canada Packers, Frankel Brothers, York Trading and G. Whitaker Company, were all practical gifts, and at the conclusion of play, Ken Smyllie of the Kinsmen Club announced the winners over the loud speaker and made the presentations.

Bill Brown Wins

Bill Brown of the Kawartha Club was top money player among the locals taking second in the low net with a 73, G. Braund of Peterborough Club and Rod Jones of Kawartha were first and second respectively in the low net, 10 to 19 handicap flight. A. K. Fraser of the Kawartha Club topped all players in the low net bracket, 20 to 32 handicap with a 66.

Getting Some Pointers

When Freddie Cochrane, world's welterweight champion, now in the U.S. Navy, visited the Newark, N.J., training gym of Ruben Shank, ex-cowboy and sensational new boxer from Denver, he undoubtedly gave him some pointers. The Denver lad was in training for his bout with Ray Robinson, Harlem star. He's seeking Freddie's crown, too.

Dodgers Take Two Games From Giants

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP). — The Dodgers, who open an important four-game series with the second-place Cardinals in St. Louis tonight, turned back New York Giants in both ends of a double bill that drew 32,886 in spite of the fact that Babe Ruth was performing only a subway ride away.

The first game went 10 innings before Dolph Camilli came up with the bases loaded and blasted the only ball pitched by reliever Harry Feldman for a grand slam homer to trip the Giants, 6-4. Camilli also drove in both the other Dodger runs.

Darkness held the second game to five frames, and again it was a last ditch rally that gave the Brooks the nod, 7-5. Ott hit his 24th home run of the year, but the Giants had to come from behind with four runs in the fifth to tie the score. Then Billy Herman decided the issue with a two-run single in the home half of the fifth.

Pittsburgh Pirates ended a St. Louis winning streak at eight games when a home run by Elbie Fletcher downed the Cards, 5-3, but Murry Dickson pitched the Red Birds to a 5-2 verdict in the afterpiece which kept them from slipping more than one full game behind.

Claude Passeau and Lon Warneke hurled a pair of shutouts as Chicago Cubs blanked Cincinnati Reds twice by identical scores of 3-0. Passeau gained his 17th win, although he yielded nine hits, while Warneke tossed a two-hitter for his best effort of the year.

Boston and Philadelphia split, the Braves taking the first game, 3-1, and the Phils grabbing the nightcap, 2-0, on Rube Melton's four-hit pitching.

Senators Beat Yanks

In the American League, the Senators handed Johnny Murphy his eighth straight setback when they rallied for three runs in the ninth inning to beat the Yanks, 7-6, but Ernie Bonham blanked Washington, 3-0, in the nightcap, halted by darkness after 5½ innings.

Boston Red Sox picked up a game on the leaders by shutting out the Athletics, 2-0 and 7-0. Tex Hughson pitched four-hit ball in the first for his 17th win and his 11th straight and Joe Dobson matched his performance in the second.

Three-hit pitching by Ted Lyons and a three-run rally in the ninth inning gave Chicago White Sox a 3-1 decision over Cleveland Indians, but Jim Bagby hurled the tribe to a 1-0 triumph in the 10-inning nightcap with a five-hit job.

St. Louis Browns pulled to within half a game of third-place Cleveland by stopping Detroit Tigers, 2-1 and 4-2, the second game going 10 innings.

In Saturday's National League games Brooklyn walloped the Giants 10-5, the Cardinals won their eighth straight game—7-6 over Pittsburgh — the Braves and Phils split a double-header and Chicago downed Cincinnati 5-4. The Braves won their first game 2-1 in 10 innings and Philadelphia taking the nightcap 5-3 behind six-hit pitching of veteran Si Johnson.

In the American Boston hit Philadelphia pitching freely to take a pair, 11-3 and 11-5. New York Yankees, with Hank Borowy hurling brilliantly in the pinches, shut out Washington 1-0. Chicago beat Cleveland 3-1 and Detroit-St. Louis was postponed.

Hockey Games War Work Must Not Mix

TORONTO, August 24. —(CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at the close of its meetings here Sunday announced that instructions are going to all its branches that under no conditions must hockey schedules interfere with war industry in the coming season.

Possibility was seen of amateur games being played during morning hours or possibly starting at midnight in order to avoid interference with working hours of players engaged in war industry.

No statement was issued regarding a proposed new agreement with the N. H. L. on junior hockey players. Under this agreement junior players may turn professional without first receiving the sanction of the C. A. H. A. formerly necessary. Officers of the C. A. H. A., including President Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, discussed this among other matters with governors of the N. H. L. here in the past few days.

The C. A. H. A. allocated $9,000 to the nine local branches for promotion of minor hockey, including juveniles and bantams and midgets, but it was not stated how the amount is being apportioned.

Proposal from Eddie Shore, new general manager of the Buffalo club of the American Hockey League, for a senior "A" club of the O. H. A. to play in Buffalo, was referred to the O. H. A. sub-committee.

Women's Institute Hears Book Review

CAVAN, Aug. 24—(ENS). — The monthly meeting of the Cavan Women's Institute was held on Thursday, August 20, at the home of Mrs. Milton Carr. Thirteen members answered the roll call "A recipe for pickles or jam that requires little or no sugar." There were three visitors present.

Mrs. J. S. Woodsworth was the guest speaker for the meeting. She gave a splendid book review on Social Security and compared the health of New Zealand with that of Canada. She pointed out how the outlook on Social Security has changed with the years and quoted several records to prove her points.

Mrs. R. S. Staples gave an interesting paper on "Economics," stressing what are the best foods for us and pointing out the food value of some articles.

It was decided at the meeting that the local club girls continue with the project for this term "The Supper Club," under the capable leadership of Mrs. Oakley Carley and Mrs. Donald Tinney.

Mrs. J. D. Hunter displayed the afghan of knitted blocks that the Institute members had made and that she had put together.

The Institute read a letter that had been received from Walter Scott, a local boy overseas, thanking them for the parcel they had sent him a short time ago.

The meeting next month is to be in charge of Mrs. Ralph Staple's group.

Personals

Mrs. Clarence Marlow and son, Bill, of Blackstock, have returned home after spending a few days with Mrs. Marlow's sister, Mrs. Oakley Carley.

Friends of Mrs. Pethick will be sorry to learn that she is quite ill at her home here.

Grandmothers Meet In Old Costumes

OMEMEE, August 24—(ENS).—The regular monthly meeting of the W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. A. Rutherford on Wednesday evening. MAIN STREET TOPICS

GETS PHEASANTS.

Fifty young pheasants were shipped to Charlie Kingan this morning from Codrington. The pheasants will be given to sportsmen at Apsley Hastings and Buckhorn, who have offered to care for the birds, to determine if they will survive the winter weather of this section. All are the ring-necked variety.

ACCEPTS GUILT PLEA.

A written plea of guilty to a drunk charge was accepted by Magistrate E. A. Gee in Police Court this morning. It was explained that the offender was engaged in war work. He was fined $10.00, and costs, in absentia. Another man who pleaded guilty to illegal consumption was also fined a similar amount.

THEY'RE SCARCE

A little boy, about four, and his sister, who was perhaps three years older, convulsed clerks in one of the bakeries Saturday. While their mother was picking out the things she wanted, the lad piped up that he wanted some raisin tarts, whereupon his sister turned with a disgusted and patronizing air and said, "Don't you know you can't get raisins now?"

FOUR MORE ENLIST.

Three men from Havelock and one from Peterborough were given transportation warrants this morning on enlistment in the active service forces. The men are Donald George Menzies, Havelock; Samuel George Edward Yeo, Havelock; Keith Douglas Hart, Havelock; and Walter Garfield Killinbeck, 489 Glengarry Ave., Peterborough. The three men from Havelock had been serving with the Prince of Wales Rangers, Reserve.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

Quite a number of men in the city and district gave up their two weeks holidays to attend the annual camp of the 4th Battery and the Prince of Wales Rangers. Today at the Armouries, Fred Barton, Examiner advertising man on holidays is holding forth in the Rangers orderly room, assistant Major Clair Stuart, the recruiting officer. The entire orderly room staff of the Rangers is taking a refresher course at Kingston.

THE HARD WAY

The story is being told of two young farmers down Springville way who have rather a busy summer. It seems they have a large number of chickens, 2,000 in fact, and in order to keep away foxes of both the animal and human kind, the two men have been taking turns sleeping in the car at nights with a rifle, to keep their chickens safe and sound.

WELL-EAREND PRAISE.

Sid Pellow greens-keeper at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club was given some nice compliments by visiting players at the big tourament on Sunday. While the greens were a little fast, they were in splendid condition, and the fairways for were particularly good, so good in fact that the top ranking professionals went so far as to remark on them.

MORE BROWN TROUT.

Charlie Kingan reported Monday that a surplus of brown trout fingerlings have been obtained for the Cavan stream. There were more than 400 frisky healthy looking trout in the cans, and the young fish were deposited in different sections of the Cavan stream this morning. This is in addition to the usual quota of trout in the Cavan stream every year.

ALWAYS ON HAND.

Gossip around the Armouries revealed this morning that Col. D. J. Lawrie, is getting praise from the boys. It seems that since the war started almost 100 men have enlisted from the battery for active service, and without fail, Colonel Lawrie has been on hand either at the station or at the Armouries to bid the boys good bye. This little gesture has been greatly appreciated by the recruits, indicating as it does a keen interest in the welfare of the Battery members.

TORONTO CARS DAMAGED.

Two Toronto cars were damaged on Saturday in a traffic accident at Water and Inverlea Streets. William Hall, 15 Traymore Crescent, Toronto driving north on Water Street, was making a turn into Inverlea Street, when another automobile driven north by Norbert Farley, also of Toronto, collided with the rear of Hall's machine. The rear bumper of Hall's car was damaged and a back fender and the tail light also suffered. The front bumper, front right fender, and the steering gear of the other vehicle were damaged.

EMERGENCY MEETING.

There will be an emergency meeting of St. John Ambulance Nursing Division for all those who have taken first-aid and home nursing examinations at St. Alphonsus Lyceum, on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

A CHAMPION HOLLYHOCK.

Mrs. S. E. Moncrief reports a record hollyhock, so far as height goes as growing at the rear of the Moncrief dairy at 641 Charlotte Street. It towers 11½ feet from the ground, and while it is past its prime in the matter of bloom, its lofty record makes it notable.

TOO MANY AHEAD

Crowds thronged George street Saturday night and a number of people all seemed to get the same idea at the same time around 9 o'clock, as a number were heard to say that no matter which theatre they went to there was such a lineup that they couldn't get in.

SAFETY FIRST

One man has devised a new idea for taking care of his pet when he hits the congested down-town area. This chap rides on his bicycle and has a leash that he attaches to the dog, and the dog runs along beside him as he pedals at a reasonable speed. Far from minding it, the animal trotted right along with his nose and tail in the air.

TWO WOMEN CHARGED.

The Monday morning crop of offenders in Police Court this morning included two women who were charged with being drunk. One who had appeared a week before and had been in jail since was allowed to go on her plea that she would look after her children in the future. The other who entered a plea of guilty to having been intoxicated on the Warsaw Road, was fined $10.00, and costs.

RELAXED A BIT.

Bob MacMorran, dour Scot who exercises supervision over the Kawartha Golf and Country Club turned on the illuminated fountain at the club Sunday night for the benefit of visitors to the big invitation golf tournament. Interested in conserving power, the Scot in his economy program has not had the fountain on, for the past two and a half years. The fountain is not so spectacular as the one at the Filtration Plant, but it makes a pretty picture in the centre of the small artifical lake.

JAIL DOG IS NO MORE.

Mascot at the Peterborough County Jail for seventeen years, Peter the big Airedale that used to be the constant attendant of Lieut.-Col. T. D. Johnston at the County bastille, has passed on. The old dog, who had seen hundreds of prisoners come and go had grown very feeble in recent months and was finally so badly crippled that it was decided that the humane course was to bring this long career to an end. Peter was an institution around the County Buildings, and will be missed.

CARGO PLANES

Howard Hughes, millionaire who briefly invaded Hollywood and produced "Hell's Angels" with several other hits, is reported to be joining Henry J. Kaiser in plans to turn out 50 cargo planes, a project which Kaiser has been advocating as a means of reducing the threat of U-boats to Allied shipping. Hughes is also said to be working on some secret device in his aeroplane plant in California.

QUICK CHANGE

Office employees were sweltering in the heat of Saturday morning. They brought their fall coats with them to work today.

SAYS MISHAPS FEW

The minor mishap to the engine of the C.P.R. local is a rare mischance, a C.P.R. man remarked today. He said it was seven or eight years ago since the last delay caused by the dropping of a bar near Kendry. His comment was that once in seven or eight years was an extremely small proportion.

A NASTY TRICK.

Saturday night at 10 o'clock the Fire Department received an alarm in from Box 19 at the DeLaval. All the apparatus turned out only to find that someone who thinks it a smart trick to do, had turned in a false alarm. False alarms have been turned into the Department with regularity all summer.

ONE CASUALTY.

Chief Gimblett reported today that Captain Archie MacDonald suffered head injuries Saturday afternoon at the fire on Simcoe Street, when part of the ceiling hit him. He has been under the doctor's care but the Chief reported he was able to be back on duty again today.

WARSAW MAN WOUNDED.

The third casualty list issued by the Department of National Defence lists the name of Pte. Fred Parcells, Warsaw as wounded. He is 37 years of age and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Parcells of the Warsaw district. For the past 18 years, Parcells has been farming at Porterve, Sask., where he enlisted and when wounded he was serving with the South Saskatchewan Regiment, at the assault on Dieppe. The extent of his injuries is not known.

HEAVY OATS YIELD.

Land along the old North Monaghan toll road seems to be retaining its fertility as manifested by the yield of oats reported Saturday by Hilliard Strong. One field he harvested was 4¼ acres of the Erban variety. It returned him 375 bushels, approximately 90 bushels to the acre. Mr. Strong's farm is on the south side of the Port Hope-Peterborough highway about half a mile beyond the top of the "water trough" hill. "And it's real good stuff' he added in a restrained reference to its quality.

CHILL STRIKES FLOWERS.

After that thermal retreat to 46 degress during the night the sunflowers were not enthusiastic about waiting for the sunshine this morning. At least they did not show it. Their heads were bowed, and they appeared dejected, like a man leaning against a post, hands in pocket and eyes along his to the line. The big 'heavenly blue' morning glories were too chilled to greet the new day at least up to a quarter to nine. They might have brightened in the next hour. The asters were gaily looking upon their little world with a fine indifference to that "September morn" breath from the north.

BIG PEACH SALE.

Sale of peaches in Peterborough must have been heavy here last week. As a sample of the volume of business, the F. & G. Store near Neill's sold 350 baskets of the No. 1 grade before 11.30 a.m. Saturday.

BELLEVILLE PRICES

Potatoes were 45c a peck or $1.65 a bushel on the Belleville market Saturday. Butter was 40c a pound, grade "A" eggs 42c.

WHEAT ESTIMATES

The wheat crop of the United States and Canada is now estimated at one and a half billion bushels. The yield from Uncle Sam's acres is not quite up to the record crop of 1915, but it is expected to be close to it British farmers are predicting a crop of 100,000,000 bushels, twice their average harvest. It is also said that the carry over of wheat in United States and Canada may exceed one billion bushels.

Freak Twister Wrecks Chemong House

Freak weather over the week-end added a touch of tropical twister in the Chemong Lake section on Saturday evening between six and seven, and the miniature cyclone left a narrow swath of destruction in its wake.

It seemed to originate along Lake Chemong, and it churned the water into a huge comber that swept across the lake from the west, clipping the end of Kelly's island, where it stood a canoe up against a tree, and tossed a heavy skiff about thirty feet into the lake. Reaching the east shore, the wind flattened elms, birches and cedars at the McConkey summer cottages, better known as Hillcrest cottages. One cottage was ripped from its base, and turned half around, and the cottage next to it, was damaged when a huge elm came crashing down on the corner.

Mrs. J. Grimison, and Mrs. Nelson Godfrey, both of Peterborough, along with the two Godfrey children, Larry and Jack, and little Anne Cripps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cripps were in the cottage when the wind struck, but they suffered no injury in the unusual experience.

On the McConkey farm, the wind flattened a field of oats, tore trees out by the roots, and continued on towards the Selwyn district, after scattering a large stack of hay.

Fortunately no person was injured in this unusual storm, and cottagers who saw the peculiar twister approaching across the lake, said it looked like a small Niagara Falls. It was as its height just about the time the heavy downpour of rain struck Peterborough City Saturday evening, trapping many downtown shoppers.

Yanofsky In Tie

DALLAS, Tex. Aug. 24 (CP)—Abe Yanofsky of Winnipeg, Canadian champion, and three other players were tied for the lead yesterday after completion of the third round in the United States Chess Federation championship here.

All four—Yanofsky, Isaac Horowitz of New York, Herman Steiner of Los Angeles, and Erich Marchand of St. Louis had won three games without a loss or a draw against their record.

Arrives In Britain

Sgt Pilot Ralph Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Johnston, McDonnel Street, landed in Britain with a big contingent of Canadian soldiers last week. His parents received the following cable a few days ago: "All well and safe, best wishes and good health; please don't worry." This young flier is a graduate of the Collegiate, where his father is principal of the Vocational section. (The Roy Studio Photo.)

School Children Do Good Work For War Victims

When the full tale of their holiday recess from school duties is written many children of this community will be able to go back to their tasks of fitting themselves for the place they will take as men and women in the affairs of the days to come, with a feeling that their time has not been wasted, and that they have at least done some good to help others, and this in itself should strengthen their own confidence in their own ability to also attain success in their scholastic training. In today's report for the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund the entire proceeds have come from the efforts of school children, so that this may indeed be termed a children's day.

Right here and now, the fund management would like to set apart the following Mondays, if possible, to record the activities of school children in their entirety, being the last two before school activities once again commence, and would suggest that children get busy during this week for next Monday's report, and in like manner during the following week, for the Monday immediately preceeding their return to school.

Twelve children, Joan Graham, Margaret and Mary LeBlanc from Montreal, Eleanor McBrien, Bobby, Grant and Paul Reader, Norma, Howard and Grant Harrison, Anne Winterbottom and Barbara Westran held a bazaar at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Reader, 504 McDonnell street, where they sold home-made cooking, groceries and garden produce to raise a sum of $11.75 for the fund, and there is prospects that more will follow in a short while. The children specially desire to thank their neighbors for the help they gave in donations and patronage. All were gaily decked out with hats and aprons of a patriotic coloring which added to the picture they presented in offering their wares.

Then a group of seven girls, Marilyn Galbraith, Barbara Outram, Isabel Moffat, Nora Gabbutt, Helen Daly, Edna Cummings and Marian Rowe, most of whom were heard from a short while ago with help for the fund, gathered salvage and made another $1.25 to help things along.

Beverley Patterson of 124 Parkmount road, Toronto, who is staying at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harrison, 733 George street, has a record any girl might well be proud of. Afflicted with infantile paralysis at the age of two years, which has since then necessitated many operations, the last of which was three years ago, she has at the age of 12 years now passed through Public school and starts High school this coming term. During her leisure hours, she has made and sold at 10 cents each sufficient pot-holders to make $5.00 for the fund, which in itself is a true characteristic of how she has done so well at school in spite of the difficulties through which she has passed, which redounds very much to her credit.

Dorothy Bagnall of London street also staged a lone effort to make nineteen cents for the fund, and wants to do further work to help on its behalf.

"There's Nothing To It" Soldier Claims Grins As He Gives First Blood Donation

Donors who pass through the Blood Donors Clinic, once they have given transfusions, cannot understand what there is to be nervous about. It seems to be a constant source of amazement to them. Two men from the Military Training Centre, Cpl. S. Kitchen and Pte. Stanley P. Lockey, who gave transfusions this morning are both quite prepared to be on hand at the end of the next three months, when they will be eligible again.

"There's nothing to it, certainly nothing to be scared of, and I'll come back anytime they'll take me," Cpl. Kitchen said.

"Talk about service," Pte. Lockey laughed. "The camp was never like this. Why they even light your cigarettes for you. I'm all for it."

Cpl. Kitchen is a Peterborough man and his family live at 381 Water street. He is a veteran of the last war having signed up with the 93rd and later transferred to the 4th Battery, known as "the Mad Fourth." He volunteered shortly after war began and has been down at the Military Training Centre working in the Ordnance Corps since October 5, 1940.

Same Doctor

As soon as he got into his white gown Cpl. Kitchen had his temperature taken and a thorough going over by Dr. G. S. Cameron. He told his nurse that this was sort of a coincidence, because Dr. Cameron examined him when he joined up in the last war. As soon as he climbed up on the cot he was given a roll of gauze to hold in his fist and his arm was placed on a wooden rest and cleansed.

When everything was set, Dr. H. A. Mitchell came in and clamped a rubber band above his elbow and gave the injection for local anesthetic. Then he immediately placed the needle in the end of the rubber tubing into the vein and the transfusion began.

When Cpl. Kitchen was asked if it hurt much, he said the only thing he felt was a slight prick when the first needle went in, after that he didn't feel a thing. As the nurse talked and joked with him, warning him to keep opening and closing his hand firmly over the roll, the blood poured through the tubing easily in a slender stream. This operation is carried on at the side of the cot, where the patient cannot watch, in case it might bother him.

This man was one of the quicker patients because he had an exceedingly good vein. After about ten minutes, he had given the required amount of blood and the float nurse bounced in to take the apparatus away.

Chat While Giving Blood

Throughout the whole affair Mrs. R. Taylor, technician, sat beside the table watching things closely and they discussed the fine job Canadians had been doing at Dieppe and how anxious he was to get overseas, the latter being a rather sore point at present, since Canadian soldiers have been in action. As soon as Mrs. Taylor disconnected the tubing, she grasped the corporal's arm and held it straight up in the air explaining that this completely empties the vein and does away with the danger of hemmorhage. Allowing him to relax and rest for about ten minutes, the nurses then escorted him to the lounge where he declared himself ready for a good healthy breakfast tray.

Pte. Lockey passed through the same treatment. He is a native of Oshawa and he works in the officers mess. So far quite a number of his buddies have been through, and out of ten men, nine have volunteered to help the Clinic out. He said that each time someone new is ready to go, those who already have passed through the Clinic are asked to give them the lowdown on just "what they do to you." He expects to take it easy for the rest of the day just so there will be no chance of any reaction. Although several of his Oshawa buddies signed up with him, they are pretty well scattered now over the country. Like Cpl. Kitchen, after the anaesthetic he didn't feel a thing and he said he found it very easy. In talking about the service, he mentioned that the ladies in charge even poured his cream and sugar for him.

The two men said they were one up on some of the other donors because they got a drive up and when they were ready to go back all they had to do was phone for a truck. That's what it is to be in the army, men.

Thrid Transfusion

Another interesting donor appeared on the scene Monday morning. Mr. W. H. Christopher, a member of the Board of Education in Toronto, has been holidaying near Peterborough and he has already given two transfusions in Toronto. He turned up at the Clinic and offered to give his third transfusion before he went home to Toronto. That's the kind of co-operation the Clinic is seeking. There were also three men of the Veterans Guard, serving in Lindsay, who reported at the Clinic. These men all hail from Montreal and were recently approached in Lindsay to help out and they were all for the idea.

Women of the Immaculate Conception Church and the Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. gave their service to the Clinic and Dr. G. S. Cameron, Dr. H. Mitchell, Dr. R. Nott, and Dr. J. M. McCulloch were the physicians in attendance.

54-Hour Week Starts On Nov. 1

Distribution of alloted time of 54 hours a week which the federal government is proposing to come into effect on November 1 will not make much change in down town stores of Peterborough according to their preference as expressed in a vote taken by the Business Men's Association.

They are recommending as their choice, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays; 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Wednesdays; and 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturdays.

Stores wishing to close at 12.30 p.m. on Wednesdays may do so, but others desiring to use the additional half hour may extend their closing time to 1 p.m.

It is understood that drug stores would be permitted to sell after 6 p.m. only prescriptions and sick room supplies. The same evening restrictions would apply to corner stores in some details. They would be permitted to sell meals, ice cream, hot dogs and other refreshments only to be consumed on the premises. It was said that the sale of ice cream bricks to be taken away from the store, for example, would be barred.

Only fifty-four of Peterborough's merchants voted on the question, about one-third of the total.

Toronto Pros Play At Cobourg

COBOURG, Aug. 24.—A large gallery of golfers from Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterborough, Oshawa and other centres saw a fine exhibition of golf here on Saturday in a match played by four outstanding Toronto district professionals. Taking part in the tourney were Bob Gray, Scarboro pro.; Bill Kerr, Cedarbrae pro.; Gord Brydson, Mississauga pro.; and Les Franks of Islington, formerly the pro. at Cobourg.

Kerr led the quartette for the eighteen holes with 70, Brydson was right behind with 71, Gray had a 72 and Franks was 73. Par for the local course is 72. The 18-hole yardage is 609, with the longest hole 530 yards, which is the 7th. The stiffest test is the sixth hole, which is 400 yards long with par at three. The shorte hole is 2nd, which is 120 yards long, with the green surrounded by a trap.

Sunday morning the four visiting pros. played with W. H. McGuire, C. Adcock, G. Wheeler and R. Parker for nine holes, which Kerr took with a 34. In the afternoon the pros. went to Peterborough to engage in a milk-for-Britain charity match.

Mrs. J. W. Fitzgerald Dies At Hamilton

HAMILTON August 24. — The death occurred in Hamilton, Ontario, to-day of Agnes Julia Fitzgerald, widow of James William Fitzgerald, O.L.S. of Peterborough, and for the greater part of her own lifetime a resident of Peterborough. A daughter of the late Thomas Cahill, she was a lifelong member of St. Peter's Cathedral parish, and during her residence in Peterborough took an active interest in parish and charitable affairs. She has been a resident of Hamilton for the past eight years.

Surviving are a son Gerald of Montreal three sisters, Miss C. M. Cahill and Miss H. M. Cahill of Hamilton, and Mrs. F. S. Ferguson of Windsor, Ontario.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

Patrol Skirmishes

ROME, (From Italian Broadcasts), Aug. 24 (AP)—The Italian high command reported today that Axis land forces had destroyed several British armored cars in patrol skirmishes on the Egyptian front and claimed that Axis fighter pilots had shot down seven R.A.F. planes.

Yesterday, the bulletin said, British air raiders attacked Gela, Sicily.

At Dieppe

SUB-LT. D. B. ROGERS

His cablegram to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Rogers, brought the grateful news at the week-end that he came through the battle at Dieppe "without a scratch" Sub-Lieutenant Rogers is with the Royal Navy, having trained in commando work. He is the first Peterborough boy known definitely to have been at Dieppe.

Delivery Order Effective November 1

Constriction of the orbit of motor vehicles used in various phases of distribution is seen in an official order taking effect November 1 limiting to 35 miles the distance that may be travelled from the home garage.

Alderman Dutton said this regulation would affect some of the routes of Stocks Bread.

"Apsley is forty miles from here," he explained. "That means we shall have to apply for a permit to continue our deliveries to that place. We deliver to Bancroft by way of Madoc, but they are more than 35 miles apart, so we shall not be able to carry on there unless we are given permission."

Bobcaygeon is served from Lindsay, and bigger trucks take supplies to lake front towns for local deliveries. Ald. Dutton said he did not think the restrictions applied to those vehicles, but it was a point that had yet to be clarified.

Express companies, especially the C.N.R., piled up with business for months past, have been expecting that this new traffic order may divert some of the rubber-borne transport to the rails.

Urgent Appeal Sent Out For Veterans

Lieut G. P. Brook, recruiting officer at the Peterborough Armouries, issued an urgent appeal for more veterans to enlist in the Veterans' Guard this morning. Lt. Brook stated that in this last recruiting campaign which started a week ago, he has only been able to secure six recruits, and the need is great.

Men up to 55 years of age, in categories up to C, are being accepted, and the lower category men will see service only in Canada. There is a rumor circulating to the effect that a veteran enlisting may choose the spot where he wishes to serve. This is entirely erroneous as the same rule exists as in the regular active Canadian army, and a recruit serves at whichever point he is detailed to.

This morning, two veterans were given warrants and both of them are from Port Hope, Wilfred Smith and Thomas Tweed. Two others went on Friday, Joseph Brethour of Campbellford and Norman Mayers from Woodville. On Wednesday, Grover Kerr of Lakefield will leave for Ottawa.

Lt. Brook and Corporals Brais and Ansell will be at the Armories until Wednesday night of this week and all veterans seeking to enlist must do so before that time.

Quite a number of war veterans offered their services, only to learn to their disappointment that their medical categories were too low to permit acceptance in the army.

Claim 17 Ships

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts), Aug. 24 (AP)—The German high command claimed today that German submarines sank 17 merchant ships totalling 107,000 tons in the eastern and western Atlantic and the Caribbean. In addition, a communique reported, the Axis raiders destroyed a sailing vessel and scored torpedo hits on two other Allied vessels.

(The announcement did not specify the period in which the reported sinkings took place, thus making any comparison with Allied reports of losses impossible.)

TOTAL COST WHEN REPAID IN SIX MONTHLY INSTALMENTS

No endorsers or guarantors needed— A quick, simple way to get a cash loan at reasonable cost

Do YOU NEED some extra cash? Would you like to pay off old bills as part of your wartime financial program? This advertisement tells about a simple plan which is helping many men and women with their present-day money problems.

Repay out of income

Suppose you need $100 for an emergency or to pay off debts. You get the money in a quick, simple transaction. Then you may repay on a regular monthly payment plan. At the end of a definite time, you are entirely in the clear. The payment plan thus becomes a personal debt-paying program.

The cost of this service is reasonable. Suppose you borrow $100 and repay in six monthly instalments of $17.85 each, a total of $107.10. The cost of your loan is just $7.10. A $50 loan, repaid in six monthly instalments of $8.93 each, a total of $53.58, costs only $3.58.

You need no endorsers or guarantors to borrow at Household. And at no time do we question friends or relatives about your credit. The principal requirement for getting a loan is a steady position or other source of income. We consider character and regular income far more important than the value of your security. You can get your loan quickly— usually in twenty-four hours or even sooner.

Loans for many purposes

People borrow at Household to pay a doctor or dentist bill, general expenses, insurance, mortgage payments, down payments on homes, old store bills, car repairs, a training course, tools, moving expenses, coal for winter—and for expenses of many other kinds.

You may repay your loan on almost any plan you wish. The table shows how loans may be repaid in 2 to 15 payments. The sooner you repay, the less your loan costs. Look in the table now for the loan you need. See how you may repay out of income.

If you can make good use of a loan, see us at once. Or just phone and tell us how much you need.

And on April 27, 1937, the following was published:—

Lawn bowling is a science, the study of a life-time.

In which you may exhaust yourself, but never your subject.

It is a contest calling for courage, skill strategy and self-control. It is a test of temper, a trial of honor, and a revealer of character. It means going out into the fresh air—exercise.

It includes companionship with friends, social intercourse, opportunity for courtesy and generosity to an opponent. It promotes not only physical health, but moral force.

Add up the meaning embodied in the foregoing articles and we believe you will find the correct answer: "To what do you attribute the success of your lawn bowling club?"

Firemen Battle Stubborn Blaze

For nearly two and a half hours Saturday afternoon, firemen battled with a stubborn fire than began in the home of Mrs. Samuel Clarke, 249 Simcoe street and spread to that of Miss Margaret Buller, 247 Simcoe. Total damage for both places is estimated to be about $600.

Both these places are part of the terrace on the south side of the street just above Aylmer and were the two closest to Aylmer street. Although he will continue his investigation, Chief Gimblet believes that the fire was the result of a defective chimney. It started about half way up the back wall and travelled up to the ceiling. Then it mushroomed across under the ceiling to the main partition. The flames continued to spread up the back wall of the bedroom upstairs at the back and then shot across to the "cockloft," which is an addition about a foot high built up to the main roof. There was no fire stop between this cockloft and the main roof and it just travelled merrily along.

The residents came over to the station and reported the blaze at 2:33, saying that it was a chimney fire. When the men arrived with the apparatus they found that the fire was between the partitions and that is what made it so difficult to combat. Chief Gimblett said that in fires such as this you never know where it will break out afresh, and that the one thing that everyone can be thankful for is that it did not occur around two or three in the morning. For then it would have gained such a foothold that the whole place would have gone up in smoke. As it was the flames were confined to the two places at the end.

The furniture in the two homes was covered with tarpaulins as soon as possible but there was considerable damage in both places from the water. In the Clarke home where the flames had crept along it was necessary to chop through the wall and ceiling, but this was confined to a relatively small place in the two back rooms. Considerable water had come through on the upper hall ceiling, but it held firmly, just the paper had to be taken off. At 5:30 while the fire had been extinguished, some of the firemen were still working away under the Fire Chief's direction clearing away debris and straightening out the mess as much as possible.

Deputy Fire Marshal Carl Caskey, happened to be in the city making some inspections and so was able to take in the smart work of the men in action. Firemen used a 2½ inch water line and a booster line in fighting the flames, and in the opinion of all those there it was one of the trickiest blazes that they have had to handle in a long time. Despite the damage in some rooms, there were others that were completely untouched by either fire or water.

Mrs. Clarke's husband is serving overseas with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, she said.

MISS ELIZABETH WALSH

The funeral service for the late Miss Elizabeth Walsh, 316 Dublin street, was held from the Bert Duffus Funeral Home, Monday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral, where Requiem Mass was offered by the Rev. James Greenan. Rev. Father Malone conducted the services at the graveside in St. Peter's Cemetery.

The many floral and spiritual tokens, as well as the number who attended the funeral showed the esteem in which she was held in the community. Pallbearers were James Nelson, Edgar Boland, Philip O'Carroll and Lorne Webster.

The late Miss Walsh was in her 93rd year and her death occurred Saturday. Daughter of the late James Walsh and Julia Burns, she was born in Dummer township, but has resided in Peterborough for the past 35 years. Before that, she lived on the homstead at the seventh concession of Dummer. Miss Walsh was the last of a family of 14 children, and had been ill about six weeks. A lady of a kind and quiet disposition, she possessed a host of friends who will mourn her death.

Out of town friends attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. T. J. McAvella of Campbellford, and Mr. Dennis Fitzpatrick of Norwood.

FRANCIS JOHN HOGAN

The death occurred Saturday of Francis John Hogan, 145 Stewart street, at the age of 55. Mr. Hogan, who had been ailing for several months, was an accountant at the C.G.E. for nearly twenty-two years and only left his post when his health failed him in March.

The late Mr. Hogan was born in Manchester, England, and resided in Kingston for some time before coming to Peterborough in 1920. A member of St. James' United Church, he had served as an elder, auditor and on the board of stewards. During the last war he was overseas as sergeant-major of the Kingston Battery.

Left to mourn his loss are his wife, the former Pearl Sedore, a daughter, Mrs. Clarence Sedore, and a son, William Hogan, of Peterborough. There is also a sister, Mrs. W. Crawshaw, of Ottawa.

The funeral will take place Tuesday at 2 p.m. from the Nesbitt Funeral Home, 347 Charlotte street. The Rev. H. J. Mahoney will officiate and interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

Public Speaking "Panic" Dispelled by Home Study

Member Makes Bad Impression

So you never thought they'd ask you to speak!

You can't avoid being asked, sooner or later, if you belong to a group. And even if you only say one little sentence, you sound lovely or awful, depending on whether or not you know public speaking rules.

Maybe you get stage fright, make a poor impression before you even open your mouth. Simple "Don'ts" help prevent this. DON'T scramble to your feet—take your time. DON'T hold anything while speaking.

It helps your poise to practise enunciation at home. Then you're sure you won't ruin people's impression of you by saying "Yes, ar c'middee's maken the samwiches"; you'll enunciate clearly "Yes, our committee is making the sandwiches."

Important, too, to be up on parliamentary rules — to know how to address the chair.

Learn to speak up confidently! Our 32-page booklet tells how you can improve your vocabulary, voice, pronounciation. Describes how to prepare a speech, hold attention, be at ease. Gives sample speeches, rules of parliamentary procedure.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service for your copy of "Public Speaking Self-Taught." Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

"PLEASE DO NOT BID"

THERE IS one situation in which your partner definitely makes that request of you. It is when he redoubles over an informative or takeout double of your bid by the player at your left. In a nutshell, he tells you that, if the opponent at your right then makes a bid, there is a very good chance the bid can be set badly, as his own hand is so strong. He tells you that, if you are unable to double that opponent's bid, you should not make a bid of your own, but should pass and give your partner a whack at it. The redoubler guarantees that, if he cannot double that opposing bid, he will make a bid of his own.

When South made that call of 2-Spades, he violated the underlying basis of the meaning of such a redouble by his partner. Since he could not double the bid himself, his job was to pass and see what North wanted to do. North would have doubled it. In fact, that is what happened at one table of a duplicate game where the bidding began the same way. East was set three tricks, losing one in spades, three in hearts, two in diamonds and two in clubs, giving North and South a score of 500 points.

South's taking out of East from 2-Hearts into 2-Spades shook him down off of the dangerous limb on which his side had climbed when West doubled. It resulted in North getting into a game contract which could be made, and which produced an extra trick. But that gave the side only 430 points.

About the only time when South should have bid on top of his partner's redouble would have been one in which he had such great suit length, in one or two suits, that the prospects were brilliant for a much better score playing the hand than on the defensive. But South had nothing freakish this time, and should have observed the customary procedure of experts.

SGT. Harry Roberts of Oakville, Ont., one of the Dieppe casualties at a Canadian army hospital, came out of the raid with a Messerschmitt machine-gun bullet in the shoulder.

Member of the Toronto Scottish, he was wounded as he stooped to help a friend who had suffered a leg injury.

Roberts was injured shortly after helping knock out a pillbox. Describing the action, he said: "I climbed up to the top of the concrete box and kicked the ventilator to bits. Then we threw hand grenades in and blew the box and the Jerries to blazes."

Box Shortage Critical At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, August 24. — (ENS). — "We've got to do something for ourselves if we want boxes," declared President Hector Arnold of the Northumberland Cheese Producers' Association to members who assembled to discuss the most critical shortage of boxes in the history of this district. The situation which has gradually become more desperate has now reached the stage where a dozen factories have their curing room floors piled full of cheese while others are being placed on make-shift benches in the make room, all because there are no boxes in which to ship them. Said J. M. Baine, Chief Dairy Instructor for Western and Central Ontario, who was called upon to speak early in the meeting: "I wish I had some good news for you." In his opinion if the box makers had taken the same attitude as the cheesemakers and producers and realized that "if we don't win the war their business will be gone anyway," there wouldn't be any shortage of boxes now. Mr. Baine went on to reiterate the important part cheese was playing in the war effort. "It is one of the main hings in the British workman's lunch pail," then he went on to emphasize how disastrous the piece-meal delivery of boxes would be in the fall, "now you can dry them in two or three days but in the fall when the humidity becomes higher the problem of green boxes and resulting soft ends will again enter the picture."

"There are some strange angles to this box shortage," went on Mr. Baine. "I think there is something behind this rather than a shortage of material," he added, implying that the smell coming from the box factories wasn't just from green headings. "Your section has gone over the top on the production of cheese and if the quality is not so high as usual with a good deal of the season still ahead, it will probably be well up to last year's."

Mr. Baine sat down and the meeting turned into a general discussion of what should be done. One member recalled that the secretary had read a letter two weeks ago from a firm up in Penetang ofering to provide high quality boxes at 50 cents. "Why not order these," he suggested, and "appeal to the Government to pay the extra 15 cents." All agreed it would not be fair to expect the cheesemaker to absorb the extra price. The letter was turned over to Mr. Baine, who was asked to take the matter up with Ottawa.

President Hector Arnold declared producers would be losing on cheese grades "if something is not done." He was of the opinion that it was the price rather than any actual shortage of material, that was causing the trouble. At the Campbellford factory it is the shortage of headings that is causing the tie-up in production. The local box maker has enough veneer for ten thousand boxes but is now held up for headings. "It looks as if there were one or two men in the box business who were trying to work for a bigger price by holding up delivery of box material." A resolution to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, explaining the situation as it appears in this district might bring about some action, thought Mr. Arnold. He reminded the cheese men that in some parts of Quebec Province boxes were being made and delivered up to 50 miles for seven cents below the ceiling price.

Another indication of what the producers were thinking came from F. W. Barnum, president of Rylstone Factory and suggested that a resolution intimating willingness to pay 40 cents for boxes be sent to Ottawa. He, however, got little support for this since, as Mr. Arnold pointed out, "We would be going over the heads of the people who have carefully investigated the problem. Other suggestions were that Ottawa might force a compromise deal between the local factory which had plenty of veneer and a Picton plant that had an adequate supply of headings. (Both plants are idle at the present time.) Several thought it would be good business for the County Association to buy a car load of headings to which Mr. Baine declared "It would be good interest on your money."

District Dairy Instructor J. A. Murray lent further suport to this contention by disclosing that on the current week's grading one factory alone had lost one dollar a box (about $100) "merely because the cheese had been handled too often." Even if the association lost $50 to $100 on the deal they would be "away ahead." Lending credence to the producers' belief that the situation was just a "hold up" was the announcement that late in July three car loads of veneer and heading were offered to factories in this district and there were no takers.

The meeting concluded following a motion apointing a committee, comprising George Elliott, J. A. Murray, and Hector Arnold, to go into the question and take such action as necessary to get a supply of boxes.

Fascist officials have announced that Italy's wheat crop exceeded last year's—but at the same time they reduced the spaghetti allotment from 70 to 50 grams (from 2.46 to 1.76 ounces) daily, while the bread ration remains 150 grams (5.29 ounces), one of the lowest in all Europe.

A Berlin despatch to the National Zeitung of Basel said Nazi officials are considering erecting public kitchens for mass feeding but, recalling the people's dislike for such feeding in 1917-18, had not come to a decision.

Direct delivery of vegetables from grower to consumer has been made subject to severe penalties.

The last two unusually cold winters wrought havoc with Germany's fruit trees which, since 1933, had been increased 50 per cent.

The Wiener Tagblatt reported that up to 80 per cent. of plums, peaches and cherries had been destroyed and several years would be required to build up the orchards. Last year berry damage was estimated at 15 per cent.

Italy's wheat harvest, which is ahead of the rest of Europe, has been announced as 75,000,000 quintals (there are about 3.67 bushels of wheat in a quintal). This compares with a crop of 70,000,000 quintals last year but still is under the country's normal consumption.

The lack of fodder, meanwhile, is the chief concern of Italian farmers who are trying to offset a poor hay crop by using millet and beans.

The egg ration in Italy has been cut from four to three monthly but the price of two lire an egg is prohibitive to most Italians.

France, whose population is estimated to have lost an average of 11 pounds a person since the German occupation, is experiencing increased woes. A Vichy report to the Basler Nachrichten said conditions in the country had created a hunger psychosis."

The Minister of Agriculture has announced that 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 persons in France are depending solely on food cards which were described as protecting adults but were insufficient for children. Further restrictions, he said, would be catastrophic.

In Hungary Premier Nicolas Kallay has warned that sharp measures will be taken against black marketers. The weekly meat ration has been cut and the fat allotment also reduced.

In the Netherlands the last winter damaged forage crops and cattle herds must be reduced.

The Serbs also have been told that all grain exports will be stopped, although Premier Milan Nedic has assured the people of a bread supply and that there will be no famine.

Bulgarian agriculture has been placed under complete state control, the Minister of Commerce explaining that the step was necessary to assure feeding the nation.

New Potatoes Quoted At $1.65 Bag

Irish Cobbler potatoes at $1.65 a bag was the price quoted by Floyd Batchellor, of Fenella, in Haldimand Township, on the produce market Saturday. That is the lowest the new crop has reached so far this season. Mr. Batchellor's stand was near the Water-Charlotte corner, on the east side.

Other growers were asking $1.75 and $1.80 the bag and 40 cents a peck.

One week's sun had cut in half, approximately, the price of local tomatoes. They were plentiful, and from all parts of the district, and 11-quart basket sold for 50 cents and the 6-quart for 30c. That price applied to most of the sales, although here and there you might have found the six-quart basket for 25c.

Demand for honey is brisk. The public is really picking up a lot of these Saturdays at the market apart from other sales during the week. The first clover honey was of fine quality, and the prices are unchanged from last year—8-pound tins for $1.15 and 4-pounds for 65c. At slightly under 14 cents a pound that is excellent food, something you can't go wrong on. A big tin will keep indefinitely.

No spinach Saturday, none in The Examiner's round. And Fred Clifford had no chard. Only lettuce in the leafy vegetable class for diet balancing. However, Mr. Clifford promises spinach for next Saturday.

"Cucumber will not be any cheaper than they were today," said Fred Stinson of North Monaghan. "People will begin buying for pickling as soon as the price moves up." Prices varied from 30 to 50 cents the six-quart basket, according to the size and kind of "cuke."

Joe Chimenti had cauliflower at 15 and 20 cents; red peppers, 5c each; greens, three for ten cents.

"Monaghan blue plums" sounds like a new name, but that was the label for good looking fruit at Norman Moncrief's counter. They were 60c for six quarts. Four kinds of apples were 50c a peck—Peerless, Duchess, Wealthy and Red Astrachan.

J. H. Johnston sold Shiro plums at 20c quart and thimbleberries at 25 and 30 cents.

One farmer who does not specialize in apples brought along some windfall apples, offering them at 25c a basket; but a federal fruit inspector looked them over and told him to put them back in his truck.

Bouquets of gladioli were 30 and 40 cents a dozen bloom. Corn was 30 cents a dozen.

Herb Doig offered carrots at $1.25 a bushel; cabbages, two for 15c; marrows were 10c. The market was not so lively as it has been at the last four or five week-ends, especially outdoors.

Butter was 38c; eggs, 25 to 43c, mostly at 36 to 40 and 42c; chickens, 30 to 32 cents, and hens, 28 to 30 cents a pound.

Tuapse, the Russians were reported holding and dealing out heavy losses.

The Germans apparently were pouring new reserves and every piece of equipment available into the fight for Stalingrad in an effort to capture one of their major 1942 objectives before the weather turns against them.

"The enemy is increasing his pressure in the centre of the Don bend, but Soviet troops are mirmly holding positions captured a few days ago," the army newspaper Red Star said. It added that the Germans had lost more than 1,000 men in one attempt to cross the Don.

In one sector of the Kletskaya region, the midnight communique reported that "not less than half the effectiveness" of the Italian Celere division had been destroyed by Russian tanks and infantry.

Farther up the Don near Kletskaya, the Russians were reported improving their positions after forcing the Germans from several populated points.

Defence of Canada regulations be given." (Section 39B gives instructions with reference to prosecutions under 39 and 39A).

Drew and Chaloult Cases

Mr. Conant referred in his communications to two recent cases under the regulations—the prosecution of Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and Rene Chaloult, Independent Liberal member of the Quebec Legislature for Lotbiniere. The Crown dropped its cast against Col. Drew. Mr. Chaloult was acquitted.

The prosecution of Mr. Chaloult is discussed by Mr. Conant as an example of his complaint against lack of uniformity in dispensing justice.

"As Attorney-General of Canada you have, presumably, directed counsel to consent to prosecutions in two important and widely publicized cases, i.e., Rex v. Drew, and Rex v. Chaloult," Mr. Conant wrote. "I presume that other prosecutions have been similarly instituted with your concurrence.

"Although the Drew case arose in this province, I did not direct counsel to consent to, and this department took no part in, the prosecuion.

"In reading the text of the judgment of the court in the Rex v. Chaloult case, I cannot avoid the impression that the interpretation and application of Regulation 39A in that case differed materially from what has been and from what I am the opinion would be the attitude of the courts of this province under similar facts and circumstances. In Chaoult case the court acquitted the accused apparently on the grounds of 'good faith'; that he did not have 'guilty knowledge' and that the statements of the accused did not go 'beyond... the limits of simple error of judgment'."

Mr. Conant said that in the Rex v. Stewart (The Daily Clarion) case in 1940 the Ontario Court of Appeal in a judgment delivered by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson, rejected all such grounds of defence and held with regard to the regulations in question that: "....Their prohibitions are absolute and that it is not a defence in a prosecution for their breach to say that what was done was done in ignorance or without intending any harm. The casts prohibited are to be stopped."

"In the result," Mr. Conant wrote, "Regulations 39, 39A and 39B are not uniformly construed and applied in all the provinces. In other words the brand of justice dispensed in Ontario with respect thereto is substantially different from the brand of justice dispensed in some of the other provnces. This situation is, in my view, impossible and a distinct denial of the fundamental principles in the administration of justice.'

Founder Of Ashburnham Parish Rt. Rev. W. J. McColl Passes

More than fifty-one years a priest of the Roman Catholic diocese of Peterborough, Right Reverend W. J. McColl, parish priest at Lindsay for the last 14 years, died at the House of Providence in this city on Sunday in his 81st year.

Monsignor McColl had been in declining health prior to retirement from St. Mary's parish, Lindsay, last Easter. Time had taken its toll of his strength, and his death was not unexpected throughout the diocese and especially by his friends in Lindsay and Peterborough. It is recalled that on the occasion of his celebration of the 50th anniversary in June, 1941, of his ordination to the friesthood, grateful acknowledgment of the felicitations that were then extended to him was made on his behalf by Rev. Dean J. B. Ferguson of Warkworth. His death on Sunday was a final effect of his enfeebled condition as the years and their burden closed upon him.

Monsignor McColl was born at Wooler in Murray township in May, 1862. He received his primary education there, and matriculated from the High School at Trenton. Following a vocation to the priesthood he took the philosophy course at St. Jerome's College, Kitchener, and St. Michael's College, Toronto, and completed his theological studies at the Grand Seminary, Montreal.

The ordination of Monsignor McColl took place at St. Mary's Church, Grafton, on June 24, 1891. The sacrament of Holy Orders was administered to him by the late

MONSIGNOR McCOLL

Right Reverend R. A. O'Connor, Bishop of Peterborough. He was appointed curate of St. Mary's Parish, Lindsay, carrying on his duties as an assistant priest for 9½ months. On July 6, 1892, he was appointed parish priest at Ennismore, continuing in that responsibility for nearly ten years until January 18, 1902, he became rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, in this city. The succeeding 12 years in the Cathedral parish were terminated by the important commission of establishing the parish of the Immaculate Conception, December 6, 1914. The next 14 years were spent by Monsignor McColl in laying the foundation of the third parish in the city, and on March 16, 1928, he received the appointment at Lindsay where his life's work in the care of souls ran its course until his resignation at Easter this year.

Of Scottish ancestry, Monsignor McColl displayed throughout his life the attributes of a good steward and administrator. A devout priest and a man of broad learning, he showed, too, a practical phase of his nature especially during his years in the rural parish of St. Martin, Ennismore. He took an interest in agriculture, particularly its dairy branch, and encouraged the improvement of the breed of cattle among the farmers of his charge. He assumed the duty of forming the parish of the Immaculate Conception during the last war when the need of money in the nation's emergency permitted only the building of the basement of the church, which was later brought to completion by its present parish priest, Monsignor P. J. O'Sullivan.

The parochial work of Monsignor McColl was marked by his love of children, and his deep concern for their sound and broad equipment in mind and spirit to face the problems of the world. He was deeply interested in education in all his charges, and it is remembered of him that the secondary school at Ennismore reached a high point of its usefulness during his ten years in that community.

Recognition of the exemplary priesty who had done all things faithfully and well came to him in September, 1920, when he received the honor of investiture as a Domestic Prelatue by the authority of the Holy See. A year later, in 1921, Monsignor McColl was made Vicar-General of the diocese in succession to Monsignor Casey. At his golden jubilee a year ago, Monsignor McCall was eloquently reminded of the high place he had won in the respect and affection of the clergy of the diocese as also of the people in those parishes which had been successively the scene of his fatherly solicitude and priestly ministrations.

Monsignor McColl is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Thomas Regan of Frankford, and Mrs. J. F. Galvin and Miss Eunice McColl of this city. His body will be at his former temporary home, the parish house of the Immaculate Conception, Monday evening, and will be removed on Tuesday afternoon to St. Peter's Cathedral where the office for the dead will be recited in the evening beginning at eight o'clock. The funeral mass will be chanted Wednesday at 10 a.m. at the Cathedral, and burial will be in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Axis powers.

On the surface the most obvious evidence that Brazil had joined the United Nations in war was the effort to break up a huge potential fifth column.

The population was calm after noisy demonstrations on Saturday night, and streets of Rio de Janeiro and other cities were still littered with signs and placards bearing the legend "death to Germany.'

Feeling against fifth column activity in Brazil was high because citizens were convinced it was agents in their midst who communicated with Axis submarines which sank five Brazilian vessels of the coast of Bahia last week.

So intense did the hunt for unreliable and suspected persons become that in several communities, especially along the coast, citizens of German and Italian blood were reported to be registering voluntarily at police headquarters to protest innocence, to give information on espionage activities which they disapproved, and to ask for protection against demonstrators.

Claim 7 Barges

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP). — The German High Command's communique yesterday suggested that the Germans are fearful the United Nations will follow up their Dieppe raid by another such attack or full-fledged invasion almost immediately.

The communique claimed the German Air Force had carried out attacks on the British south coast and had sunk seven landing barges. (There was no confirmation of such attacks from British sources.)

The attack, if it were made, evidently was a copy of the tactics of the British Air Force in 1940 when heavy assaults were made on invasion barges which the Germans had collected along the Netherlands and French coasts.

Vancouver Officer Safe

Brigadier Sherwood Lett of Vancouver, who is believed to have been in charge of the Canadian landing forces at Dieppe under Major-General J. H. Roberts, is "safe, wounded, not seriously," according to a cable received by his brother, W. R. Lett, Toronto.

Roberts' Vessel Takes Several Hits In Attack

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, August 24—(CP).—The destroyer used by Major-General John H. Roberts of Kingston, Ont., as headquarters from which he directed the raid on Dieppe was hit several times by Nazi bombers, it was disclosed last night.

General Roberts directed the raid by wireless signals from the cabin of the destroyer's captain and the bridge. The vessel cruised up and down before Dieppe during the operation, and sometimes it was only a few hundred yards off shore.

It was under fire from German shore batteries as well as German planes.

Through it all, General Roberts worked as coolly as if he were deploying troops on manoeuvres. The burly general, in battledress and steel helmet, frequently watched the fighting from the bridge through strong binoculars. Then he would go down to the operations room in the captain's cabin, where wireless sets brought him the latest information from shore. Here he had his maps and plans. His staff worked there with him.

The destroyer was the last vessel to leave Dieppe. Shortly before the final withdrawal it made a difficult trip to the waters off Pourville, west of Dieppe, where officers were able to make a check on the situation.

During the last hour or so of the raid the destroyer also made two trips close in to the beach in front of Dieppe, escorting landing craft to pick up Canadians.

Each time it was hammered by gunfire and fired dozens of salvoes back with every gun it could bear on the Germans.

The destroyer brought several hundred troops back to England, many of them wounded, who were cared for by doctors on the ship.

Wounded Writer Swims Out, Has 2 Boats Sink

MONTREAL, Aug. 24—(CP)—The Montreal Standard has received a cable from Wallace Reyburn, Standard correspondent who landed with Canadian forces in Wednesday's raid on Dieppe, stating that he has arrived back in London safely though wounded by shrapnell during the operations. His injuries are not serious.

Reyburn went into action with the South Saskatchewan Regiment, the 10th person in an assault party that swarmed up the shore.

When he left he had to swim. The first boat he reached was sunk by enemy fire. He swam to another and it too sank. Then he was picked up by an anti-aircraft ship which took him to the destroyer carrying Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, commander of the Canadian attacking forces, and was brought back to a British port.

In a cable to the Standard Reyburn said: "While all this was going on hell was blazing all around us. Mortars, heavy artillery, machine guns were whacking at us and snipers were picking off men. Overhead bombers and Focke-Wulfs were sweeping low and firing machine guns at us."

Reyburn spent the longest time ashore of any of the three newspapermen who landed. He arrived back in England wearing only his underpants, boots and a navy blanket. Other equipment had been thrown overboard to lighten the boats as they were sinking at Dieppe.

Huns Mass Tanks Over Don Dive Bombers Fill Sky Before Great City Of Stalin

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Aug. 25—(AP).—The Germans massed large forces of tanks on the eastern bank of the Don before Stalingrad today while divebombers swarmed the skies and parachutists descended in the Don and Caucasus areas with anti-tank guns and motorcycles to menace further the already-precarious Red army positions.

A front-line dispatch to Comsomol Pravda, paper of the Young Communist organization, said the Germans had been able to concentrate large masses of men and machines across the Don.

It said the Nazis brought up reserves during the night and attacked at dawn, tanks being followed by men with automatic rifles, while planes rained down "many tons of bombs."

The first wave was turned back, but a half-hour later more bombers appeared and another charge began. In hard hand-to-hand fighting the Red Army stuck to its trenches and refused to break, this dispatch declared. Night fighting in that sector was featured by rocket and tracer bullets streaking across the sky while German siren bombs screamed.

An account to Pravda, Communis Party paper, said the parachutists at one place landed in sufficient strength to permit their transport planes to alight on an air-field and unload anti-tank guns motorcycles, and trench-mortars.

In some cases the parachutists descended in groups of 100, it was declared, anywhere from 12 to 16 miles behind the Soviet front lines. Nevertheless, they are not being used on the scale the Germans employed in the Low Countries or Crete, apparently because German transport plane strength has been weakened, Pravda said.

The Soviet information bureau communique said the Germans who had crossed the Don had succeeded in making an advance southeast of Kletskaya in fierce fighting, but that the Russians were repulsing new attacks and inflicting heavy losses on the heavily-supported Nazis.

The invaders also have driven to the Prokhladnenski area 85 miles northeast of the oil town of Grozny, but 200 men of a Nazi mountain detachment were killed there and an attack in "many times greater" strength was repulsed, the information bureau said.

Although the Germans are throwing in large forces less than 40 miles from Stalingrad, life in that industrial centre was reported continuing at a normal but fast tempo.

(A Stockholm report relayed via Reuters news agency said the situation before Stalingrad was most serious, with battles already raging 30 miles from the city.

The invaders drove to the Prokhladnenski area only 85 miles northeast of the oil town of Grozny, but the Russians killed 200 of a Nazi mountain detachment there and "with the support of two armored

Aussie Premier Fraser Arrives

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(AP).—The arrival of Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand in the United States was announced today by the White House.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said Mr. Fraser reached the American west coast today and would proceed at once to Washington to be received by President Roosevelt, at whose invitation he made the trip from the South Pacific.

Early offered no details on the specific purpose of the journey nor on the probable duration of the visit. Presumably, however, it concerned United Nations strategy and problems in the war effort, particularly as they relate to the Pacific theatre of operations.

There was nothing to be said, either, on the route Fraser traversed or the means he used to get to this country.

His visit was the latest of a long series which have brought heads of numerous United Nations to the White House in recent months, including Prime Minister Winston Churchill of England.

Peterboro Brothers Survive Dieppe Raid

Mrs. Harry Brown, 285 Dalhousie Street, received word today that her two sons, Archie and Jack Brown, had arrived safely back in England after taking part in the Dieppe raid. Both boys enlisted January 21, 1940, in the Toronto Scottish as machine gunners, and have been overseas since June, 1940.

60,000 Jobless For 250,000 War Jobs To Mean Real Shuffle This Fall

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25—(CP).—More than 250,000 persons are needed in war industries and the armed forces before the end of 1942 and—with less than 60,000 unemployed—Canadians face drastic curtailment "of many of our less essential industries and occupations," Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service, said here today.

In an address which he defined at the outset as "straight talk," Mr. Little told delegates to the national convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada that "selective service will do things next week and will expect your support in doing things that neither of us would have tolerated a year ago."

He added that the selective service measures "will annoy and irritate and inconvenience most of us."

"There will be increasing disruption, dislocation and inconvenience for both the individuals and for business. The road will get rougher as we proceed. Only by adequate planning can we keep the hardships to a minimum."

He added that "insofar as we possibly can the employee or his representatives will be asked for help and advice in planning the details of the necessary dislocation."

Employable unemployed men will have to go to work whether they like it or not, the director said. An order will be issued shortly compelling such persons to go to work.

Quisling Loses To Norse Clergy

LONDON, August 25—(CP)—Vidkun Quisling, Nazi puppet in Norway, apparently has dropped his fight on the Norwegian church on orders of Hitler, a Norwegian Government source reported today.

According to information from Stockholm, this source said, Quisling returned to Norway from a visit to Berlin "with instructions to come to an agreement with the clergy."

Apparently confirmation of this was given in a speech at Gjovik yesterday, it was added, in which Quisling, in sharp contrast with his previous belligerent attitude, declared:—

"People who organize illegal church movements are too unimportant for us to take measures against them. We will let them do as they wish. They believe they can play up German authority against us, but they are mistaken."

Bombers Also Pound Frankfurt

Ex-Fashionable 'Spas' Industries Get 1st Combing

LONDON, Aug. 25—(CP).—A "strong force" of R.A.F. bombers smashed at Frankfurt and Wiesbaden and other objectives in the Upper Rhineland last night in the first R.A.F. night attack on Germany in a week, the Air Ministry said today.

The exact strength of the force sent over Germany was not quoted, but the announced loss of 16 planes indicated that some 300 planes took part, on the basis of a five-per-cent loss. However, bad weather over the continent last night may have contributed to the losses.

Frankfurt is on the Main River, 22 miles from its confluence with the Rhine at Mainz, and is an important German commercial and industrial centre.

Machinery, electrical supplies and chemicals are its most important products.

Wiesbaden is best known as a fashionable "spa," but it is also a manufacturing city of some importance and a communications centre.

Besides the two cities, railway objectives were attacked in the Low countries by planes of the Fighter Command, and some locomotives were destroyed, it added.

The attack was the first at night by the R.A.F. on Germany since August 16, when Flensburg, German shipyard and submarine-building centre near the Danish border, was bombed.

It was the first time Wiesbaden had been mentioned as an R.A.F. objective. Frankfurt had been raided 33 times previously.

EXTRA!

CAIRO August 25—(AP).—Forays by British fighters and fighter-bombers over the North African battle area were announced by the British Headquarters-R.A.F. communique today.

On the ground, the front still was quiet except for artillery exchanges yesterday in the central sector and patrol clashes on the northern flank the night before, the bulletin said.

VICHY, Aug. 25—(AP).—French ground defences opened fire on a great number of planes which passed over Lyon at a height of six miles for 90 minutes last night.

French sources, recalling the recent activity of American Flying Fortresses over Nazi-held Northern France, expressed belief the planes were of that type, but did not say how this conclusion was reached, and there was no independent evidence to support it.

Flak Ship Down

LONDON, Aug. 25—(CP).—A German anti-aircraft ship was "almost certainly sunk" in a lively engagement between four German vessels of that type and British light naval forces off Flushings, the Netherlands, last night the Admiralty announced today.

The British ships suffered no casualties and all returned safely to port. The other three German ships were heavily engaged with gunfire and it is considered that damage and casualties were inflicted. It reported the first German vessel was hit by a torpedo from a British torpedo boat.

Greatest Exodus Off The Farm Hitting Canada

OTTAWA, Aug. 25.—(CP).—The farmer's son and the hired man have marched away from the old homestead in the greatest exodus in the history of rural Canada, Federal Government figures revealed today.

A survey of the farm labor situation showed:

1. Male family help on farms between Jan. 1, 1940, and March 15, 1942, showed a net decrease of more than 141,800 or 13.2 per cent.

2. Male hired help at Jan. 15 was estimated at 148,900 compared with 247,800 on Jan. 15, 1940.

Although a selective service regulation issued in March was designed to freeze men on the farm to maintain production, officials said the farm manpower supplies were likely to be further depleted.

They recalled that Agriculture Minister Gardiner had warned of further probable losses to the farm labor brigade when he spoke in the House of Commons July 25 and said the 429,000 single men between 16 and 45 engaged in agriculture March 31 represented one of the two pools of manpower from which more men could be drawn for military service if large numbers were required.

Meantime, farm workers are at liberty to leave the farm and join the forces if they wish—and they are doing it.

Officials said their figures covered earlier periods of this year and probably showed the farm labor picture in rosier colors than it actually was at present. The movement of men from the farm to the forces has continued steadily throughout the year.

4 Hardest Hit Areas

The Economic Analyst, published by the Agriculture Department, said that Nova Scotia, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan showed the largest net decreases in male family help between 1940 and 1942, while the smallest decreases occurred in Quebec and Ontario.

The farm labor survey had revealed the reduction in the number of male hired help in the two years was 98,900, or about 12,000 more than the total of 87,500 who joined the armed forces or left farms for other

2 Plane Carriers, Battleship Several Cruisers Hit As Americans Press Attack

U.S. Fighters Down 21 Nipponese Raiders Rout Destroyer Night Assault; Sea-Air Battle Still Raging Fiercely

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—(AP).—The United States Navy announced today that the Japanese have counter-attacked American forces holding the southeastern Solomon Islands and that a great sea and air battle had developed in which the enemy had suffered more than half a dozen ships damaged.

The battle began developing on the afternoon of August 23 and already United States army and navy carrier-based planes have effectively bombed two Japanese carriers, one battleship, one transport, one cruiser, and an unspecified number of other cruisers which the Navy described only as "several."

The transport and one cruiser were left burning fiercely after an aircraft attack on them north of Guadalcanal August 24.

The main action of the battle, the Navy communique indicated, now is in progress and the Navy said that it was "a large scale battle" between American sea and air forces and a strong Japanese striking force which has approached the southeastern group of the Solomon Islands from a northeast direction.

Army and navy units backing up the American Marines in the Solomons had expected a violent attempt by the Japanese to recapture their lost bases in the Tulagi area, and so, the Navy said, apparently were fully prepared to meet it.

On this point the navy said succinctly, this counter-attack has developed and now is being met."

Fortress in Action.

As the navy related the developing battle action it said preliminary reports "indicate that the enemy striking force has been attacked by United States army flying fortresses and that our carrier-based naval aircraft are in action."

A large Japanese carrier, the name of which was not given, was attacked by United States army bombers which reported scoring four hits.

Navy carrier-based aircraft were credited with having "severely damaged" a smaller Jap carrier, the Ryuzyo, a 7,100-ton vessel completed in 1933, which carried about 24 aircraft.

In addition to this damage, the navy said 'several enemy cruisers and a battleship also have been hit by our carrier planes."

The navy referred to "our occupation of the important base at Tulagi," suggesting that Tulagi harbor itself may have been compleely captured by American forces.

Yanks Down 21

In the preliminary phases of the battle on August 23, the navy related, a "strong enemy air attack" was made against Guadalcanal Island but was intercepted by American fighters and 21 enemy planes were shot down with only "minor" losses for the Americans.

That night enemy destroyers approached Guadalcanal and shelled shore positions. The following day United States aircraft hit the enemy transport and the cruiser north of Guadalcanal.

To its account of what has happened so far, the navy added the brief remark, "The action continues.

There was no indication in the communique as to where the Japanese force came from in its approach to the Solomons battle area in the South Jacific.

There was some speculation,

Japs Shift Men From China For New Front

CHUNGKING, Aug. 25.—(AP)—A general United Nations offensive against the Japanese was urged by the Chinese press today to thwart an apparent Japanese move to shift forces in China for an attack in another direction.

The influential Chinese newspaper Ta Kung Pao said the Japanese were withdrawing from Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces to prepare "another thrust in some more useful place." An attack on Siberia, India or Australia would be more to Japan's advantage than to waste troops on unprofitable enterprises in China, the paper said.

The Chinese high command announced the recapture of Linchwan (Fuchow), second largest Japanese base in Kiangsi province last night and said another Chinese force was within 30 miles of Nanchang, main Japanese base in the province.

An Army spokesman said the Chinese had advanced within six miles of Chuhsien, an important base in Chekiang province for prospective bombing expeditions against Japan.

Casualty Total Climbs To 584

OTTAWA, August 25—(CP).—In the ninth Canadian (Active) Army casualty list since the Battle of Dieppe on August 19 National Defence Headquarters to-day reported three men killed in action, two seriously wounded, and 17 wounded.

The list with 22 names followed a few hours after the eighth list since the Dieppe operation with 28 names. The eighth list reported one killed in action, two died of wounds, two seriously wounded, one dangerously wounded, 21 wounded and one safe who was previously reported missing.

The ninth list brought the unofficial count of total casualties reported since Dieppe to 584 subject to possible errors due to repetition of names in succeeding lists. Of the total 88 have been reported dead, 372 wounded, and 126 missing.

The total number of men reported dead and missing by the Army since the start of the war now stands at 978.

The eighth list named Pte. Albert Edward Bates of the Medical Corps as previously reported missing and now safe. His next-of-kin, a brother lives in England.

Getting Close to Our Homes, Firesides

Bloody Drama of Stalingrad And Next 6 Weeks May Rock Allied War Effort

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

With the onrushing Hitlerites less than 40 miles from the great industrial city of Stalingrad on the Volga, this war is getting terribly close to our own homes and firesides.

What happens within the next six or eight weeks is likely to determine the course of the whole conflict. That's how near it's drawing to us here.

I don't mean that the fall of Stalingrad would be decisive, for it wouldn't. Still, it would be a mighty blow against the Soviet, since this namesake of Russia's war-leader is an integral part of her military and economic defence. Its capture would mean the cutting of the expansive Volga, that pulsating artery of transport which in major degree binds the Caucasus to the Russia on the north. The fall of Stalingrad would make much more difficult the defence of that all-important Caucasus where the Nazis also continue to force the gallantry resisting Reds back.

But the bloody drama of Stalingrad stands out starkly and needs no great interpretation. With this picture in our minds I should like to refer to a subject I raised more than a week ago—the fact that we haven't yet got the "feel" of this conflagration on which our survival depends. I advocated that we be given more detailed accounts of our own fighting men in action to bring us closer to realities.

What we folk back home need is to be moved right into the middle of the conflicts with them—fight along side them, bleed with them, and die with them.

It's what we need. It's what would bring realization of our dangers, of the sacrifices our boys are making, of the other sacrifices needed from us, and it is a grand breeder of the fighting spirit.

Sure, I know all about censorships—worked under 'em in war and revolution in many countries—but the fact remains that military actions can be reported graphically and fully enough without disclosing anything which would assist the enemy.

Then there's another aspect to this situation. Quite apart from the value of such publication as a morale builder, the public is entitled to all the information which possibly can be provided. They tell us that this is a people's war — and that's right.

40-Plane Raid Draws Great Finn Barrage

LONDON, Aug. 25.—(CP)—Forty Russian planes attacked Helsinki and its environs last night, a Finnish communique broadcast by the Helsinki radio said today.

Earlier a German-controlled Vichy radio report said the raid cause the longest alarm of the year in the Finnish capital.

The broadcast said bombs fell outside the city and that that alert sirens sounded three times during the night.

A Stockholm broadcast said Finnish anti-aircraft guns put up "a colossal barrage of fire" against the air raiders.

Thousands of tracer bullets could be seen making patterns in the sky, he said, but early reports did not mention bomb explosions.

The Russian Air Force smashed at Helsinki on numerous occasions during the Russian-Finnish war but since the Germans invaded Russia and made an ally of the Finns the raids have been few and on a small scale.

Ottawa Plans Paper Economy

New Director With 3 To 7 Advisors Coming

OTTAWA, Aug. 25.—(CP).—War Services Minister Thorson announced today that drastic governmental economies in the use of paper and supplies and the printing and distribution of Government books will be effected immediately through a director of Government office economies control.

The director will be Col. John Thompson, former chairman of the Canadian Pensions Commission and Dominion Franchise Commissioner, who comes out of retirement to assume this duty.

As an indication of the economies planned, the mimeographed announcement of the new office and its duties was four pages long, but required only two sheets. Both sides of the page were used for reading matter—a new departure.

The order-in-Council instituting the economy drive provides that the Minister may establish a division to be known as the division of Government Office Economies Control. It also authorizes establishment of an advisory committee of not less than three and not more than seven members.

'Money The Root Of Canada's Woe'-Hepburn

PORT ARTHUR, August 25 — (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario said here that he criticizes Prime Minister Mackenzie King because "I don't believe the Government has put its full effort into the war."

Speaking at a civic banquet tendered by 200 businessmen of Port Arthur and district last night, Mr. Hepburn said the root of the trouble in Canada was said to be "money."

He, however, urged Canadians to forget their party affiliations and demand a full-scale war effort "rather than the Ottawa version now being perpetrated on the people."

To political leaders, he suggested Liberals, Conservatives and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation members get together. He further suggested that Munitions Minister Howe, Defense Minister Ralston and Finance Minister Ilsley should forget their party affiliations and say they were for Canada.

"I want to say to the men of Ottawa..we can't carry on a policy of fooling the people with war clouds getting closer.

"I sometimes wonder whether Mr. King wants to win this was. Sometimes I have my doubts. He seems more concerned with staying in office than winning the war."

Mr. Hepburn said three years ago he tried to tell the people of the Dominion what was coming.

"I was laughed out of court."

It All Came True

He recalled that he had predicted 18 months ago that Russia would be over-run by Germany, that Japanese would attack "our coast" and that there would be sinkings in the St. Lawrence. "People laughed, but they were not laughing today."

"I want to awaken the people if I can to the necessity of a total war effort. It hope it will not be necessary to have a physical invasion of the continent or a bombing attack to achieve my purpose."

The Ontario Premier warned that the war will not be won until the Allies march into Berlin. "That day

Woman Rushed 50 Miles To Hospital

LINDSAY, Aug. 25.—Miss Sylvia Melson of 69 Walmsley Boulevard, Toronto, lies in Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, with a serious injury to her back, as a result of a fall from an apple tree at the Melson summer home on Gull Lake, Haliburton County.

After the accident a fifty-mile trip was made to Minden and then it was found that the ambulance could not get into the Melson cottage by road. The stretcher was placed in a gasoline launch and taken across Gull Lake to the cottage.

Placing the injured woman on the stretcher the journey down the steep embankment took place by aid of flashlights. Because of strong winds and current, it was decided to take the young woman across the lake to Miner's Bay, where connection was made with the ambulance.

It was well after 1 a.m. Sunday when the injured lady was placed in the Ross Memorial Hospital to receive further attention.

The Gripsholm carried diplomats, including United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and his staff, the Canadian Charge d'Affaires, D'Arcy McGreer; newspapermen, missionaries and business men and their families.

The passengers included 69 Canadians, 246 American diplomatic and consular officials, 33 United States newspapermen, 1,060 United States nationals, and 40 Latin-American nationals and diplomats. They had been at sea since June 25.

Sixty-one members of the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America, and 31 members of the Foreign Mission Society of St. Dominic, known as the Maryknoll Fathers and Sisters with headquarters at Ossinging, N.Y., were among those returning from the Orient.

The Canadians are scheduled to leave by train tonight for Montreal. Four special coaches were waiting for them on a siding near the dock and it was understood that, under an arrangement between the Canadian and United States Governments, they would not be permitted to communicate with persons outside their own group while on American soil.

With a fervid expression of happiness to be once again upon the soil of his "beloved country," the U.S. Ambassador to Tokyo, Joseph C. Grew, stepped ashore first.

The diplomat fingered his glasses nervously as he told reporters in a prepared statement how he had awaited the moment of his return to America with "inexpressible anticipation."

Unnecessary War Luxury.

"We have had some difficulty in getting some fit unemployed males to accept any work. Voluntary unemployment in the present crisis is a luxury the country cannot afford."

Other orders to be brought down shortly will provide for Government control of advertising for help in "magazines, radio or other media," and for a "cooling off period" of seven days notice for terminating employer-employee contracts.

Manpower Advisory Committees by industries are being set up, composed of employees and management representatives to advise and make recommendations to the National Selective Service director on manpower problems affecting particular industries.

Three Steps to Solution

The problem of obtaining 260,000 persons needed for the remainder of this year will be met in three ways, the director said:

1. By the more extensive use of women in essential services and production.

2. By the curtailment of less essential industries and occupations so that workers may be released for more essential work.

3. By the improvement in the efficiency in use of those already employed in essential industries.

Registration of unemployed women in the 20 to 24 age group will be started Sept. 14, the director said. The information supplied by the registration will permit planning for the bringing of women into war industry at an increasingly-rapid rate.

Mr. Little told the labor delegates that labor "should demonstrate a greater appreciation of the difficulties which face management these days." He stressed the difficulties management has had to face in obtaining supplies, priorities, manpower and in developing on a huge scale and said "it has been no bed of roses for the employers."

however, that it might have been concentrated at Truk Island in the Caroline group which lies northwest of the Solomons and from there had approached the Solomons in a wide sweeping manoeuvre.

Truk is one of Japan's greatest naval bases and is only about 1,000 miles from the Solomons.

However, the Japanese have other large bases in their mandated islands, and might have concentrated the Solomons attack force at any one or more of them.

While the course of the battle for victory or defeat could not be judged in the absence of information about damage to American units, preliminary estimates here were that the Japanese were being hit hard where they could be hurt most, that is, in their aircraft carrier strength.

Up to today the United States navy had claimed six carriers sunk, including all of Japan's biggest-type floating air fields, one probably sunk and two damaged. Today's report raised the total of damaged to four. In addition the army reported some time ago having dropped a torpedo on the deck of a carrier in the Aleutians area.

Heaviest Action Yet

The naval-air action resulting from the Japanese counter-attack is the second heavy engagement to occur in the Solomons and apparently is of fiercer nature than the first.

The first occurred on the night of Aug. 8-9 when an enemy force of cruisers and destroyers attempted to attack the American transports and cargo ships landing the marine occupation forces. The enemy war vessels were intercepted by an American screening force of cruisers and destroyers and heavy fighting ensued at close range. Both sides suffered damage—the extent of injury inflicted on the enemy being undetermined in the darkness—but the final victory then fell to the Americans because the enemy retreated before reaching the vessels engaged in landing operations.

Ammonia Fills Restaurant; Patrons Flee

There was a scramble for the front door at the Capitol Grill during the noon hour, when a faulty union in the ammonia machine used in connection with making of ice cream, released billows of acrid ammonia was into the restaurant.

The restaurant was crowded at the time, and when the fumes came up from the callar, smarting eyes and burning of the nostrils warned the patrons and staff that something was wrong. All hustled out of doors, and Joe Dean, the manager locked the place up, and called the fire department for a gas mask. With the aid of the gas mask the men were able to go into the cellar and shut off the machine.

The only near casualty was a cat. The cat was caught by Dean four years ago in the woods while he was on a deer hunt, and has since lived by the Grill. It was discovered during the ammonia attack by the cook, huddled near the door in the cellar, where it was getting a wee bit of air from under the door. The cat vomited freely, but soon recovered from its more than an hour of torture in the ammonia filled cellar.

Berlin Boasts Stalingrad To Fall This Week, Say Volga Far Enough—Claim Caucasus Peak

LONOON, Aug. 25—(CP).—The German-controlled Vichy radio quoted a Berlin spokesman today as saying "the fate of Stalingrad will be settled before the end of the week."

It added that German sources—unidentified as to whether they were official or unofficial, military or otherwise—said that when their troops had reached the Volga they would possess for the first time "the natural frontier between Europe and Asia" beyond which they would attempt no further drive for the present.

It said the Germans planned to take Stalingrad in "a classic pincers movement." The Berlin high command claimed today that several western Caucasus passes have been mastered by German troops and that the Nazi war flag was hoisted four days ago on Mount Elborus, 18,471-foot peak that is the highest in the Caucasus, or Alps.

Rotary Club Gives $300 To War Victims

The completion of the 19th donation of £500 to be sent from the citizens of the city and district through the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund to the Lord Mayor of London for the Empire National Air Raid Distress Fund, was brought very appreciably nearer by the splendid gift of $300 from the Peterborough Rotary Club, which is acknowledged in today's list of receipts for the fund.

This club, of which Ian F. McRae is president, has in the past contributed in a generous measure to many things for the good of the community at large, and in the wider field of Empire, has on more than one occasion been liberally represented in former lists on this fund's behalf, by the members individually and the club as a whole.

This particular donation represents part of the proceeds of the carnival recently held by them, and is quite generous in view of their present undertaking to sponsor locally the Air Cadet Training plan, which under the leadership they can give should be just as successful as their work on behalf of the crippled children has been.

Less than $300 is now required to complete the next £500 and it is hoped to be able to complete and send this by the end of this current month.

The penny boxes keep on maintaining their quota of assistance for the fun, with the latest collection being made from the box at Payne's Drug Store, which this time yielded $1.55 in its good work for the people of Britain.

It might be well to recall at this time, that all work in connection with the fund is given as contribution to the cause, just as the contributions are voluntary ones, and all incidental expenses without which no fund of this kind cannot operate are paid in the same manner, thus making it possibe that every cent contributed is sent direct to England for the purpose for which it was given.

Ontario To Fight Quebec Taking Power

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Aug. 25—(CP)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario last night announced at a civic dinner here the Dominion Government had issued an order closing the Thorold paper mill because of a power shortage and "if Quebec takes any of that tonnage from this province we'll protest loud and long."

Premier Hepburn said he had long protested the attitude of the Dominion Government in establishing industries in "Old Ontario where no power is available."

"Our negotiations for purchase of power from Quebec have been about as successful as if we had been dealing with the Mackenzie King Government itself," he declared. "Now because of the urgency of the situation, the Dominion issued an order closing the Thorold paper mill."

The premier said Hon. N. O. Hipel, Minister of Lands and Forests, and other Ontario officials have gone to Ottawa to try to have Thorold tonnage allocated to mills operating part-time at the lakehead.

Premier Hepburn said an industry was established at Pickering, for which labor had to be brought in and power supplied from other industries. A complete new town site also had to be developed.

The premier presented a gold watch on behalf of Port Arthur and the province to PO. Jack Swingler, D.F.C., who is on leave of absence after 39 bomber flights over enemy territory.

Air Cadet Unit Plans Outlined

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25 (ENS)—Most people in the United Nations have ceased to sit back comfortably assuming that "time is on our side" and they now realize that the winning of the war depends entirely upon how fast we can do what the military leaders have planned, Rotarian A. R. Wilmott, Cobourg, declared in an address before memers of the Campbellford club on Monday. Mr. Wilmott, who is C.O. of the 138th Cobourg Air Cadet Squadron sponsored by Rotarians of that town, came to Campbellford to outline some of the problems coincident with the formation of such a unit in view of the fact that the local club has a similar plan under consideration.

The speaker began by outlining the financial end of the project, saying that in addition to purchasing uniforms for the 25 cadets (at an average cost of from $18 to $20) the club would likely have to purchase the uniforms for at least four officers. With this and other costs the club should be prepared to contribute at least $750 during the two years it takes to complete the course.

On the subject of air training in general Rotarian Wilmott said that in his opinion the greatest single factor contributing to victory was the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme in Canada, and when it is understood that the Air Cadets tie into this scheme by giving the equivalent of four months training, the importance of these units can readily be understood.

The speaker recommended the Air Cadets to the Rotary club as an excellent boys' work project that would be extremely useful in time of peace and entirely apart from the war effort offered an excellent training in discipline. He thought the club members would be well advised to read Major Severskey's book, "Victory Through Air Power" which would help them to appreciate the importance of this work. Rotarian Harold Gummer voiced the thanks of the club to the speaker and following this R. J. Locke gave a financial statement of the Rotary Carnival last week. He said net receipts amounted to $339.90.

Block Of Plaster Falls At Court House

Price ceilings are holding steady but the ceiling in the County Court House building seems to be getting a little wobbly for a section of the plaster about six feet long and two feet wide, crashed to the floor late last Saturday afternoon.

The mishap took place in the small room, just north of the sheriff's office, which is used by lawyers for conducting examination for discovery sessions. On Saturday, two lawyers and about six other people used the room for such a session, but fortunately had left when the ceiling hit the floor. In the ordinary course of events, Wilfrid Huycke, K.C., would have been sitting directly under the big section of plaster which came loose.

This room is in the new section of the building, and the plaster is bonded to a concrete under ceiling, with a vacant attic above, so it is rather difficult to determine what caused the mishap and the mess.

Obituaries

NATHANIEL CAREW.

Friends of the late Nathaniel Carew gathered on Monday to pay final tribute at a largely attended funeral which took place from the Thomas J. Lane Funeral Home to St. Peter's Cathedral. Requiem Mass was sung by the Rev. Father H. Archambault, nephew of the late Mr. Carew, and the Rev. Father Finn preached an eloquent sermon on death. The graveside service was taken by the Rev. Father G. Wolfe and the Rev. Father Archambault.

The floral and spiritual tokens showed the esteem in which he was held by his many friends in Toronto and the Peterborough districts. Although he was born in Ennismore and operated a blacksmith shop there for some years, he was particularly well known around Peterborough and his blacksmith shop on the corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets was something of a landmark in the city.

Pall-bearers were Bert Cronin, Michael Crough, Peter Flood of Toronto, John Donough, Lindsay, Timothy Carroll and Stafford Sullivan of Peterborough.

Action Looms In Return Of Churchill

Britons Foresee Lid About To Blow If Russia To Be Saved

LONDON, Aug. 25—(CP).—Prime Minister Churchill's jaunty homecoming from Moscow at the moment of Russia's gravest peril banished doubt in many British minds today that Allied action designed to relieve the Soviet was imminent.

The questions British editorial writers asked were, when and where Allied power would explode to help lift the burden from the Red army and whether time was left to make it effective in disorganizing the Axis timetable of conquest.

Rumblings suggestive of a critical new campaign in North Africa and the day-and-night aerial bombardments in Western Europe were taken as clues to the secret plans the smiling, joking Prime Minister was assured to have brought back from his talks with Premier Stalin.

It was disclosed today that Mr. Churchill paid a second visit to Egypt on his return trip from Moscow and he also visited Iran and Iraq, where a new British command has been announced.

British observers noted that one of the first to greet Mr. Churchill in London last night was Lord Louis Mountbatten, the Commando chief who is preparing a report on the Canadian-led Dieppe raid which tested the possibilities of a continental bridgehead.

"Mr. Stalin and I have exchanged views which will be of utmost value to the Allied cause," the Daily Express quoted the Prime Minister on his return from a three-week, 14,000 mile flight.

Into Mr. Churchill's trip the Daily Telegraph read the certaintly "that the journey is the prelude to battle" and the Daily Mail that "action by

Must Sacrifice Even Life Says Mitchell

By ERIC SANDERSON

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25 —(CP)—To win this war "you and I must give life itself," Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Federal Minister of Labor told more than 700 persons at a banquet held here last night.

Speaking to the 58th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, he said "we are the only people to have mastered the technique of mass production.

"Give us the ships, organization, the will to win and in two years we will blow the Japanese completely off the earth—and I hope the Germans.

"To provide guns and tanks is not all that is necessary — you and I must give life itself."

He said the Federal Government's policies have been "laid down under the wise leadership" of Labor Minister Ernest Bevin of Great Britian and as close as possible "we hope to follow in his footsteps."

Mr. Mitchell further said that if "the United States, if based on population and wealth, make a contribution equivalent to ours, in the next two years, there will be no question as to the outcome of the war."

He said the Germans were prepared to sacrifice....and unless the United Nations are prepared to sacrifice, "we are in for difficult times."

Four resolutions were passed at the first business session yesterday and the annual report was submitted to delegates. Further discussion of resolutions will take place today.

Elliott M. Little, director of national selective service is scheduled to address the convention in the afternoon.

The convention, the largest ever held by the congress in Western Canada, continues throughout the week.

Truck Driver Fined For Drunk Driving

COBOURG, Aug. 25.—(ENS)—Arrested early Sunday morning after his truck went into the ditch at Colborne, Floyd J. Mossley of 34 Sherbrooke street, Ottawa, appeared in police court yesterday before Magistrate O. A. Langley on two charges. On a charge of drunk driving he was sentenced to 25 days in jail and on a charge of dangerous driving he was fined $20 and costs or in default ten days in jail to date from the expiration of his sentence for drunk driving.

"Ordinarily these transport drivers are the best drivers on the road but such was not the case with this man. Had he struck another vehicle with his heavy transport, there would likely have been a fatalitl," observed Crown Attorney Harry Deyman.

Provincial Constable Douglas Wilson of Colborne testified that he arrested Mossley at two a.m. on Sunday after a ten-ton transport had gone into the ditch at Colborne. The truck, which was proceeding east, had run along the north shoulder of the road, on the wrong side, for some 200 feet and then went into the ditch. He searched the vicinity and found the driver sleeping in the middle of a side road some 300 feet away. With him was a woman, who was also asleep. Both were intoxicated the officer said. Nobody was injured in the accident but the tractor of the transport was damaged to the extent of $300.

Charged with being drunk, the woman who was with Mossley was fined $15 and costs.

Farmers Oppose Sunday Work

NEWMARKET, Aug. 25.—Much as York County farmers appreciate urban offers of assistance with the crops, they definitely are not keen to receive such offers for Sunday labor, W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative for York County, declared, commenting on a Sunday harvesting plan proposed by Alderman John Innes of Toronto and others.

"Unlike most city folk, farm people are busy six days a week from dawn until dark," said Mr. Cockburn. "They would prefer Sunday as a day of rest." Mr. Cockburn stated that both men and horses needed a rest on Sunday.

Guerillas Never Give Japs Rest

By MORRIS J. HARRIS and JAMES D. WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writers

ABOARD S.S. GRIPSHOLM AT SEA, Aug. 25—(AP).—The Chinese guerillas are stabbing deep into the side of the Japanese in China today. They range the Japanese-occupied areas and front battle-lines by uncounted thousands.

Without uniforms, with whatever arms they can beg, borrow or steal, these daring hit-and-runners daily take an appr-ciable toll of Japanese life and equipment in China. Their campaigns vary from sniping a single Japanese sentry on lonely look-out duty to formidable night attacks upon military establishments and communications lines.

Raids upon Japanese supply depots and wrecked military trains yield the major supply of arms and equipment for these fast-moving forces who receive all encouragement from Chungking but little material support.

As Japanese craft pass along China's inland waterways such as the Yangtze, the irregulars frequently open fire on them with their prized artillery. A good many invading ships, both men-of-war and commercial craft or transports, have met their doom under these guns. When such a ship is bagged, the crew likewise is in for tough going. The guerillas take few prisoners

Shanghai is the major population centre under Japanese control, but even on the outskirts of this huge city which the Japanese have held since 1937, the irregulars are constantly raiding and keeping many Japanees troops busy.

Hitler And One New Minister Law In Germany

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(AP). — Germany announced yesterday that Hitler had appointed a new Minister of Justice clothed with special powers to "deviate from existing law" to enforce the Fuehrer's discipline.

Thereby Hitler made it known that he meant to fasten his rule on the people more rigidly than ever.

The Berlin radio broadcast a decree naming Dr. Otto Georg Thierack, who has been president of the powerful and somewhat mysterious People's Court, to take over the Justice Portfolio, which had been held by an acting minister since the last minister died, nineteen months ago.

The following decree was broadcast:

"The Fuehrer's decree concerning the special powers of the Reichsminister of Justice:

"For the fulfillment of the tasks of the greater German Reich, special jurisprudence is necessary. I therefore commission and empower the Reichsminister of Justice to build up a National Socialist jurisprudence according to my outlines and instructions in agreement with the chief of the Reichs Chancellery and the head of the Party Chancellery and to take all necessary measures. In so doing he can deviate from existing law."

Set Aside Laws

Thus Thierack will execute German law, but, under his extraordinary powers, he can set aside the law and impose penalties neither established nor contemplated by statute.

He, and of course Hitler himself, now are the law in Germany.

There is no question but that Germany will live under more stringent regulations than ever. Last April Hitler, appearing in an angry mood before his meek Reichstag, thundered that German justice, fierce enough in the stimation of many, in reality is soft, and that some judges imposed too mild sentences.

He obtained from the Reichstag a power which he had previously exercised without asking—to set aside law if the interest of the State required more severe penalties than the law provided.

As former president of the People's Court, Dr. Thierack comes to his new post with a tradition of the swift, one-man justice which Hitler requires. The dread of the People's Court can be attributed first to its secrecy and second to the ease with which it may construe any offense as a crime against the State.

The last Justice Minister, Dr. Franz Guertner, died Jan. 28, 1941, and the office since then has been in the hands of Dr. Franz Schiegelberger, Acting Minister, who by today's decree was placed on the retired list.

Hitler also appointed Dr. Roland Freisler, formerly Secretary of State in the Justice Ministry, to succeed Thierack as president of the People's Court, and Dr. Rothenberger, president of the Hanseatic Supreme District Court at Hamburg, to succeed Friesler in the Ministry.

Casualties Jump To 82 Dead, 330 Wounded

OTTAWA, Aug. 25—(CP).—Officially-reported casualties suffered by the Canadian army at Dieppe were computed tentatively at 536 today following release of the first seven casualty lists by the National Defence Department.

The seventh list, issued last night, reported three men killed in action, one dangerously wounded, 12 wounded and one man now wounded and safe who previously had been reported missing. This, added to the sixth list issued yesterday morning and five previous lists released at regular intervals starting Friday night, brought the estimated unofficial total of casualties to 536—82 killed, 330 wounded, and 124 missing.

The seventh Dieppe list, 131st casualty list of the war, brought total army dead and missing officially since the war began to 973. Only warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates were listed.

The sixth list contained 102 names, including 99 men missing and three reported respectively as wounded, suffering from shock and suffering from fatigue. Only officer on the list was Lieut. Clement Dick of Toronto.

The Saskatchewan Regiment was heavily represented in last night's list. In the sixth, the Central Ontario Regiment and the Manitoba Regiment provided the bulk of casualties.

It is not known how many lists remain to be prepared. The department's practice has been to make them public as fast as possible after assurance has been received that next of kin have been informed.

Mr. Conant's Move

Hon. Gordon Conant, attorney-general of Ontario, has instructed the law enforcement officers of this province to not enforce sections 39 and 39A of the Defence of Canada Regulations which deal with speeches and publications prejudicial to the safety of the state and the prosecution of the war. For this action Mr. Conant cites the Chaloult case in which Rene Chaloult, member of the Quebec Legislature, was acquitted apparently on the grounds of "good faith"; that he did not have "guilty knowledge" and that the statements of the accused did not go "beyond the limits of simple error of judgment" and that of Rex vs. Stewart (The Daily Clarion) case in 1940 when the Ontario Court of Appeal in a judgment delivered by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson rejected as such grounds of defence and held with regard to the regulations in question that: "Their prohibitions are absolute and that it is not a defence in a prosecution for their breach to say what was done was done in ignorance or without intending any harm."

In these two cases Mr. Conant shows quite successfully a lack of uniformity in dispensing justice in the two provinces and this we believe is the feeling of many people of this province. However from the ordinary layman's point of view we can hardly see what difference all this will make for if the onus of enforcing the sections is placed on the Dominion will it still not be the same courts in this province which will deal with the cases?

But the issue raised by Mr. Conant we believe is much wider than these two regulations. These regulations are the laws of Canada and Mr. Conant is only the attorney-general of one province and what we in Ontario are interested in is seeing that the laws are properly enforced by our own law enforcement officers.

Of course the way to clear up this lack of uniformity would be for the Minister of Justice in Ottawa to appeal the Chaloult case. This he apparently refuses to do.

Actions like this fail make for unity and the winning of the war, no matter how keenly we feel on the enforcement of the law in sister provinces.

Brazil Stirs Latins

The declaration of war on Germany and Italy by the South American republic of Brazil following the sinking by German submarines of five Brazilian ships forming the part of a convoy in water off the coast of that nation brings into this world conflict another continent. Brazil is the first South American nation to take up arms against the Axis; and she was the only South American nation to go to war on the Allies' side in the first World War and she is also the thirty-second country to join the United Nations.

Brazil's move has cleared the way for prompt and vigorous measures to secure the defence of the most vulnerable land area on the Atlantic side of the western hemisphere—the South American hump only 1,600 miles from Africa. Even since the war started military men have pointed to this strategic sector as the one which the Axis forces would attack if ever they were able to consolidate their European and African positions sufficiently to permit direct action against the Americas.

The spread of the battle of the Atlantic southward has created new problems for the South American republics, many of whom have imagined that the war was taking place so far from their shores that it did not distantly concern them. The majority of them would die an economic death if they were not able to use the sea for their foreign trade. Though the danger with the spread of the submarine warfare is common to at least all republics on the Atlantic seaboard reaction to it has not been uniform for the Argentina government in spite of past experiences and sinkings of that nation's ships evidently has confidence in Germany's promise that the seven seas are open to her shipping and believes her ships will be allowed to pass through areas in which those of other republics are liable to be sunk. Time alone will tell that nation how Hitler keeps his word.

The people in Canada welcome the people of Brazil as brothers in arms and her action means power and strength, moral and material, to the armies of Liberty.

Get On With The Plan

On numerous occasions during the past two years the Examiner has asked what has been done with the national registration conducted in August, 1940. We have expressed the opinion that little use was made of it except in calling men up for military service and possibly the capture of some escaped Germans who were unable to produce the little card when called upon.

Canadians believed in 1940 when they registered that Ottawa was collecting a record of what everybody in the country could do in the event of being called upon. However, we know that this has not been the case and now the Prime Minister announces a new selective service plan, the object of which the original plan was intended to carry out long ago.

The director of National Selective Office, Elliott M. Little, whose post was established four months ago, is given authority to direct the channels of man and woman power throughout the country. This apparently is an admission that up to now the government plan has been inadequate. Mr. Little is given very wide powers which will involve hardships for he can order the curtailment or elimination of non-essential jobs and factories and convert or transfer the workers or plants to war work. But what are these hardships compared with the sacrifices of those who are fighting our battles for survival?

Canadians are demanding a total war effort and all they are asking is that Mr. Little get on with the job without interference.

A New Post-War Tyranny

There appears to be an increasing tendency on the part of social groups to regard the period which will succeed this war as a sort of Golden Age, a New Jerusalem in which they will receive the deference and the power which they have not hitherto enjoyed but which they consider to be their right. The worst, of course, are the social reformers who expect to set the world to rights by equalizing incomes, or single tax, or some such economic nostrum. But recently the medical men have made their bid for post-war power, and a very comprehensive bid it is.

Consider this quotation from The Lancet, for many years the principal voice in medical opinion in Britain; it poses questions for the post-war world:

> "Will it not be necessary if the doctor is to become the guardian of the family as well as its attendant in sickness to breed a new race of doctors or a new species of the genius? Will it not be necessary to educate a new generation of citizens into seeking guidance from the family doctor in matters of conduct? Can the dual functions of guide-philosopher-friend and authoritarian healer be combined in one person? If we can overcome the deterrent effect of time, distance and expense by providing 'health centres' everywhere can we eliminate the instinctive dislike of many citizens for all the 'doctor' stands for?"

If we may erect a small personal dam against the wave of the future we should like to express our determination not to adopt our physician as a guide-philosopher-friend and authoritarian healer; we are delighted to retain his services as a healer but we don't want him interfering in our private affairs even if it is to keep us well. We assert our right to be ill if we want to be.

This quotation is complemeted by one from the New York Times, which reports the views of Dr. Roger L. Lee, a lecturer at the Mayo Clinic. "Dr. Lee would like to see more of the all-round, healthy cooperation between patient and physician which a mother usually has with her children's doctor," it says; "health and fitness cannot be achieved by mere freedom from actual disease." We protest against this move to create a new priesthood of physicians who have a right, all unasked, to advise us about our health. Shall we have a new Dark Age, when men are burned at the stake because they are infected with the heresy of common colds, or because they have blasphemed against the doctrine of Fresh Air? No; we think that doctoring had better continue to be an honored profession, without aspiring to the powers of a priesthood. Aspiring to tell everybody what they ought to think is perfectly legitimate, but when the aspiration is backed up by any power other than that of persuasion and example a form of tyranny comes into being.

Gave His Life For Freedom

By HENRY McLEMORE

JOHN DOE, marine, scrunches down inside a landing boat as it drives in toward a South Sea beach.

He feels the boat ground. He hears a command. He jumps out into armpit deep water. He wades forward.

A .50-caliber slug from a machine gun hits him.

He is dead.

John Doe, marine, has given his life for the United States.

That happened last month, last week, yesterday, and is happening right now. It will happen tomorrow, and God only knows how many more times in the days to come.

It is happening to John Doe, marine; John Doe, engineer; John Doe, pilot; John Doe, artilleryman; John Doe, tanker seaman; John Doe, bombardier; John Doe, tank driver, and all the other John Does in the service.

In the death of John Doe is the answer to why those of us who have not as yet been asked to give our lives for our country should be willing to give everything else we have.

JOHN DOE didn't want to die.

He liked life, too. Not many months ago he probably was an insurance salesman in California, or a bank clerk in Georgia, or a college student in New York, or a voice teacher in Illinois, or a farmer in Iowa.

He loved his family. He had a girl. He wanted to marry and have a home and raise a family.

He was like millions of the rest of us. He wanted to follow the Yanks and Dodgers, and maybe get a little tight on Saturday night and sing songs in the kitchen, root for his football team, go fishing, save his dough to buy a house.

But he's dead.

He didn't owe any more to this country than any of the other millions of Americans.

But he gave it all he had.

THE reading of casualty lists is tough going, but they should be required reading in this country today.

The industrialist who worries about his profits should be made to read them. Death makes percentages seem pretty small.

The labor leader should be made to read them. He won't be able to think so much in terms of hours when eternity stares him in the face.

The politician should be made to read them. There are no party lines in the battleline. When a man faces death for his country he doesn't face it as a Democrat, or as a Republican, or as a New Dealer, or as a party man. He faces it as an American.

THE citizen who complains about rationing should be made to read the casualty lists. How would he decide if he were given the choice between no luxurious living standard and—no tomorrow?

You can bet that he would choose to walk, to take his coffee black, his house chilly, cold, his days meatless.

Those who sit around round tables and talk big on what the world of tomorrow will be like should be made to study the casualty lists.

For listed they would find the names of the men who are dying to make possible a world of today.

Let beauty and truth and sweetness and light come—but only after those who are sworn to destroy such virtues are conquered.

HARSH as it may sound, we can picture no greater force of inspiration that could be loosed on the people of this country than to have read to them over the radio and printed on the front pages of the newspapers, the names of the Americans who died that day for America.

Who could but rise and respond with his best after a roll call of the gallant men who loved this country and what it stands for, and offered up their lives?

The spoken words of men, no matter how beautifully said, or the written words of men, no matter how beautifully chosen, can never summarize patriotism, loyalty and sacrifice as well as the simple lines in a casualty list that reads:

Died in action: John Doe.—Detroit Times.

Unconsidered Trifles

Jim: "She's stronger than I am, and besides, it would be murder."

Stopping a passer-by outside a police station, a constable said: "Can you spare a minute to come inside, sir?"

"What for?" was the suspicius answer.

"To take part in an identity parade," the constable explained. "You won't be kept five minutes."

"Humph!" snorted the passer-by, "They told me that yarn last time and I was kept three months."

Stalingrad Not Gone Yet

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

BUT for the successful defense of Moscow and Leningrad, the doom of Stalingrad would appear almost inevitable on the face of discouraging reports from the Caucasus.

At two or more points the invaders have managed to ram armored spearheads across the Don River, forty or fifty miles from the vital Volga city and its last remaining natural defense line. Ahead of the Nazis is only the narrow corridor between the two rivers, sloping downward to terrain which is below sea level.

Already Stalingrad has been largely isolated, the single through rail connection with Moscow and the north having been severed by bombing, the Germans assert. Nazi planes are attacking shipping on the Volga.

PERIL RECOGNIZED

Marshal Timoshenko's original southern army has in effect been cut in two while escaping entrapment, and the dire peril of the altered strategic situation has been duly recognized by the Churchill-Stalin conference and by the subsequent steps taken to bolster the Middle East.

This is only the seamy side of the picture. Actually it is definitely premature to count Stalingrad lost. The Germans themselves speak of the prospect in guarded language, venturing only a statement credited to a Government spokesman that "the great and decisive battle for Stalingrad has now begun."

Assuming that the Russians will be obliged to fall back after having checked the foe at the Don elbow, the whole nature of the struggle for the Caucasus suggests that they are prepared to make a continuing, back-to-the-wall fight for Joseph Stalin's namesake city, perhaps matching in fury last year's defense of the capital.

Exposed though Stalingrad is, with its back to the Volga and only rolling open country in front, the Russians appear to have a better chance of holding it than of retaining the Grozny oil field and other threatened parts of the North Caucasus. At the Don the Red Army has shown itself to be both strong and stubborn. There have been weeks in which to strengthen fortifications. Beyond the Volga is an unbroken, paralleling railway artery for arms and reinforcements.

Possibly of greater importance, there is some evidence that the Nazi war machine is losing much of its momentum. The original rate of progress eastward from Rostov would have carried the Germans all the way to the Volga early this month.

NAZI PROGRESS SLOWER

Von Bock's armies have pushed eastward in two months more than 300 miles, an advance nearly as great as last year's drive through the Ukraine which recoiled at Rostov in late November. Now all the military difficulties of distance which played a major role in checking the invaders previously seem to be making themselves felt. Nazi progress has been notably slower in the last week or so. Beginning next month the fall rains of the steppes are due, with their promise of slowing up progress still further.

Should Stalingrad's capture prove too difficult, Von Bock retains the alternative of bypassing the metropolis and striking southward down the Volga toward its mouth at Astrakhan on the Caspian Sea. The seizure of Astrakhan is demanded by the purpose of overrunning the Caucasus and severing the direct southern route for Russian supplies from Iran.

Astrakhan, however, is another 250 miles or so further on and Hitler cannot count on time as an ally.

Why Boys Leave the Farm

(CONTRIBUTED)

FOR Many years, the trek of rural boys and girls to the cities and towns to obtain positions, has been realized and commented upon frequently. The dire results of this migration is being felt today, and very seriously affecting our war effort, as more attractive wages are offered than can be made in rural areas on the farms.

One of the reasons for this apparent lack of interest in rural life is directly attributable to the present curriculum in use in rural schools, viz., a curriculum designed for high school and university entrance and with very little study relating to rural life.

In Denmark where the farmers have attained a degree of authority and prosperity through the co-operative folk schools (prior to world war 2), rural education is well organized. Study and work go hand in hand and practical work is constantly demonstrated by pupils and scholars at the folk schools. Everyone goes to school, old and young, and education does not stop at 14 years of age as it so frequently does in rural Canada. It is a case of education continuing through life as long as a student wishes to attend school. This type of school has kept the rural population at home and encouraged young people in the business of farming as a profitable undertaking.

In Ontario the Department of Education has in recent years given a grant for bus transportation to high schools and collegiates. This is a splendid opportunity for rural children to obtain an education. However, it is primarily a wrong system in that it educates rural children away from the country instead of educating them for the country. The depopulation of farms is another problem for governments and citizens to ponder over, especially at the present time when food is a big factor in our war effort. Our educational system has, for years, contributed very largely towards this lack of population in the country.

Interested educationists have frequently suggested that a type of rural school should be developed for Canada on lines similar to Denmark folk schools but conforming with Canadian ideas. Suppose a township could be organized into 3 to 4 school areas and a central school built in each area, where the curriculum would be suitable for farm life; where rural boys and girls could obtain an education, at home; the curriculum designed to encourage farm life and a sturdy pride in living in the country, Canada as an agricultural country would have no peer in the world.

The Loyal Moslems

All-India Congress partisans may be preparing for real trouble, compared to which the first ten days of disorder will seem like not even a minor skirmish. Meanwhile, Mohammed Ali Jinnah has warned that if Britain puts the interests of 80,000,000 Moslems in jeopardy by concessions to Gandhi's Hindus, the Moslem League will end its "co-operation" with the British Government.

The United Nations cannot safely lose India to civil war; much less can we lose the Moslems' active support. Not only are they superb fighters, but if 80,000,000 of them in India are alienated, it will follow as the night the day that millions more will follow suit, shifting Axisward, in the Middle East and in Asia.—Detroit Free Press.

Another Poland

Poland is a long way off; but what has happened there might happen here. Poland was overrun by the Nazis and now the people of "Danzig-West Prussia" are deprived of their lands, their possessions, even the use of their language. If the first should happen—if Hitler should win—where would Quebec stand?—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

A Bible Message For Today

Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock.

Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord, for wheat and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd; and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all.—Jer. xxxi, 10, 12.

Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live: and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David....For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.—Isa. lv, 3, 12.

Seek ye the Lord, and his strength: seek his face evermore....He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations....And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant....

He brought them forth also with silver and gold, and there was not one feeble person among their tribes....He spread a cloud for covering: and fire to give light in the night.

The people asked, and he brought quails, and satisfied them with the bread of heaven. He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out; they rank in the dry places like a river....And he brought forth his people with joy, and his chosen with gladness.—Psalms cv, 4, 8, 10, 37, 39-41, 53.

Stiff Penalties

Violations of the regulations governing the use of ration coupons in England are vigorously prosecuted. The London Times reports that George Black, managing director of Moss Empires, Ltd., and director of General Theatre Corporation, was fined at Bow Street Police Station in the middle of July, about $8,000 and ordered to pay costs of about $100 "for aiding and abetting Paprika, Ltd., in acquiring mercerized cotton lawn otherwise than against the surrender of the appropriate number of coupons." A similar fine was imposed on Paprika, Ltd., for acquiring the material without coupons. Both defendants pleaded guilty. The amount of material involved was 13,000 yards, representing 26,000 coupons. The material in question was sold by Stanley May, who gave assurance that it was coupon free. Counsel for defence said that only 1,000 yards had been used; that it was used for stage hangings only and was not suitable for costumes.

This is not all. As the result of 104 summonses at Rochdale, alone, alleging infringement of the food regulations, fines imposed totalled about $45,000.

As we in this country proceed along the ration course, we are likely to be—and properly so—very jealous about a rigid application of the law. The ration system is devised for the purpose of dividing the sum of goods and commodities fairly. Canadians will want neither unfairness nor black markets. If we do not cheat each other, there is no chance of the enemy cheating us.—Sarnia Observer.

Grateful Sailor Writes Thanks To Scout Auxiliary

Mrs. J. Caines, 128 Stanley avenue, entertained St. Luke's Scout Auxiliary at their regular meeting, at which two more afghans were completed for the minesweepers and shipped to Toronto. The following letter has been received by the auxiliary by a sailor on a minesweeper.

Dear Ladies:

Just a few lines thanking you so very much for the comforts I have received, through the kindness of the Seamen's Mission, Hull. I also hope that other sailors like myself are just as grateful. I suppose you will wonder my address is not a ship.

Well, you see, the last ship I was aboard was sunk at Crete and only eight of us saved. My nerve hasn't altogether gone, but I was certainly shook up, being 17½ hours in the water.

I am recuperating at present here on a shore job (a guard's job, or sentry, as you might say) but I am hoping to be back at sea shortly, fit to fight. The sentry job is at night, that's why I applied for comforts.

Thanking you again for all the wonderful jobs you are doing and here's hoping for a speedy victory.

I remain, your sincerely,

D. Long.

Talented French Women Fights Battles in Exile

Genevieve Tabouis, a prematurely white-haired French lady, who for years has learned and published the inside stories of what was happening in the different European countries behind the diplomatic scenes, is now lending every effort to help her countrymen in exile, from her home in the United States. The day before the fall of France this valiant and brilliant woman was almost forcibly taken to England aboard the destroyer Berkley and only the thought that in some other country she might be of service to France kept her aboard. She was one of the people whom Hitler feared most and he had said of her "she knows what I am going to do, before I know it myself."

This woman had a wonderful back-ground to build upon for her journalistic work in the matter of foreign affairs. She was the niece of those two famous Frenchmen who played such a role in the history of their country, Jules and Paul Cambon. Jules Cambon served as Governor-General of Algeria, and Ambassador to Washington, Madrid, and Berlin. Paul Cambon was Minister to Tunis and Ambassador to Madrid, Constantinople, and London. These two taught their niece many tricks of the trade and they were thoroughly versed in the art of diplomacy and were extremely conversant with the international situation. Their help was invaluable in her career.

In her early life, through the two uncles, Madame Tabouis visited the colourful pageantry of the Spanish Court, spent some time in Berlin where she had access to the Imperial Court held by the Kaiser in all its old fashioned stiffness and splendour. From this it was only a stepping stone later on to important gatherings held at the Royal Palace in the Hague, in London and the United States. Wherever anything important was breaking, Genevieve Tabouis was there hobnobbing with the most important men in every European country.

While getting her education Madame Tabouis specialized in archaeology and Egyptology and achieved quite a record for her knowledge in this line. This was to prove invaluable to her later on in life. She has always had to battle with poor health and when she was twenty-three, doctors insisted that she be confined to bed permanently. At first she suffered a terrible attack of despair, but when she realized that her illness might be permanent, she felt she had to make her friends overlook her handicap and so she turned to writing. Here she was able to make use of her notes on archaeology and she whote and published three fine books based on the life of ancient monarchs and civilizations.

When she was finally up and around again her Uncle Jules Cambon urged her to write articles on the sessions she had attended with him at the League of Nations in Geneva. This idea took hold and so for twelve years she was correspondent for two French papers. Petit Gironde and Petit Marseillais, with a circulation of 680,000 daily. She started off with high hopes for the League but soon foresaw the breakdown, and in this her fears took root for the safety of France.

She was acquainted with such brilliant and well known Frenchmen as Herriot, Briand, George Bonnet, Barthou, Tardieu, and others who were to play such a role in the tragic history of the past few years, Ramsey Macdonald, Baldwin, Nicholas Politis (Greek minister to Paris) Benes, Titulescu, Streseman, Mussolini, Weygand and Goebbells. She was on speaking terms with Kings and many of the people mentioned above had been friends of the family for years, who respected her even as they feared her shrewd appraisal of events.

Decided To Tell The Truth.

After some years she went to work for the liberal paper, L'Oeuvre where she became Foreign Editor. She got her job by a novel proposition to the editor. At the time she joined the circulation had fallen away below that of other papers and so she suggested that they advertise and follow up their claim to start and publish the truth, the plain truth, since no other paper was doing it for fear of displeasing this minister or that. This idea was so good that by 1940 the circulation had been raised from 80,000 to 500,000 daily. The special characteristic of this paper were that it represented every kind of opinion. Articles written on page one would contradict those on page three and so on. This gave an exact picture of France during the eight years before the war. The paper was an open forum where everyone wrote as he pleased and not another soul but the writer looked at his copy before it went to press. During the eight years she worked on the paper, this writer was never given a single order or assignment. What a change from other papers.

This job gave her opportunities for covering every important international event. She accompanied Monsieur Herriot to the United States when he went to discuss France's financial debts. She visited Moscow where she was brought to realize the value of Russia as an an idea which she never ceased to push until she fled from France. She accompanied her friend Barthou on his quest of an eastern Locarno pact, and saw it meet with failure in Poland, but success in the Balkan Entente comprising Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and other states. It was on this trip that she became acquainted with King Alexander who was soon to be assassinated along with Barthou in Marseilles. It was Madame Tabouis who discovered that this was made possible because although the Marseilles police had been warned of a possible attack, they refused to supply adequate police protection.

Uncanny Knowledge.

For years it has been almost uncanny the way she has uncovered the story behind the act. She has warned her countrymen and the world too, as to what would happen and revealed double dealing going on behind the diplomatic scenes in every country. She told France that Hitler would strike, but only to a few trusted friends did she confide the fact that she feared France might fall. After Germany's first break with the League of Nations she tried to rouse the public and the Ministers to the fact that the German threat was beginning to rise once more and the pro-German policy and the hot struggle within the various governmental parties for possesession of power was bringing the country to an abyss of destruction.

As so many other patriotic women at home and exiled she is continuing her work with the faith that some day things will be in a happier state. In the meantime she is adding all her skilled knowledge and contacts to the ever growing might of the Allied cause, and women throughout the world can be proud of what their fellow women, such as Madame Tabouis, are accomplishing.

Doris Locke Wed In Ceremony At Parents' Home

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25 (ENS) —An evergreen arch banked with gladioli formed the pretty setting for a late summer wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Locke, Seymour East, at noon on Saturday for the marriage of their younger daughter, Doris Elizabeth, to Mr. Fred Thomson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew H. Thomson, Bonarlaw. Rev. Donald McKay of Burnbrae Church officiated. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in a floor length heaven blue chiffon over taffeta with high neck line, embroidered bodice and long sleeves. Her finger tip veil of embroidered tulle was caught with a halo of flowers. She carried a cascade of Briarcliffe roses and white larkspur. Miss Josephine Locke was her sister's bridesmaid and she wore a floor length gown of dusty rose chiffon over taffeta with V neckline and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and blue cornflower. Mr. Clarence Thompson assisted the bridegroom. Miss Doreen Pollock played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Mr. Bruce Barnum sang "In The Garden of To-Morrow," accompanied by Mrs. Donald McKay at the piano.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served to about thirty guests and Mrs. Locke received wearing a blue sheer redingote with corsage of red roses. Assisting her was the groom's mother, Mrs. Thomson, who chose a blue sheer over printed crepe. Among the many messages of congratulation and best wishes was one from the groom's brother, Mr. Ross Thomson, Nova Scotia, and from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anderson, Toronto. The bride's bouquet was later divided between the two grandmothers, Mrs. E. Chaplin of Campbellford and Mrs. S. McKeown, Bonarlaw.

For travelling the bride donned a two-piece self trimmed suit of dusty rose crepe with corsage of Talisman roses. Following a honeymoon in Toronto and Niagara Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Thomson will reside in Seymour East.

Farm Service Girls Are Well Fed

By HAZEL DEAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OAKVILLE, Ont. August 25 —(CP). — Unable to enlist in the Canadian Women's Army Corps, Mrs. Georgina Hayes of Aurora, Ontario, did the next best thing—she joined the Ontario Farm Service Force.

To-day nearly 100 farmerettes at the Oakville Farm Service Camp have decided the Army's loss was their gain. They are agreed "the meals couldn't be better."

Born in Newcastle-on-Tyne England, Mrs. Hayes comes from "a cooking family." Her parents kept a restaurant in Newcastle and she often recalls "the proudest moment in my life—when father taught me to roll out a little pasty in the kitchen behind our shop."

Mrs. Hayes has come a long way since the days of her first "pasty." Queen of the kitchen at Oakville camp—formerly a tourist inn—she is proud of her well-stocked ice-boxes, mechanical bread slicer and large supply cupboards.

Big Supplies.

More than 20 pounds of butter, 48 quarts of milk nine dozen eggs are used in a day. Twelve dozen cookies disappear before sundown. Twenty pies are consumed in a meal.

Mrs. Hayes and her assistant, Miss Edith Jubb of Toronto, formerly of Pontefract, England, rise at 5 a.m to prepare 7 oclock breakfast for their hungry charges In the opinion of the farmerettes: "Breakfast is the best meal of all."

Few girls eat lunch at camp. A farmerette prepares her own noon meal and takes it with her to work. Mrs. Hayes supplies sliced bread, jams, sandwich spread, cookies and fruit for the lunches, and "the girls do the rest for themselves."

Big meal of the day is served at night when workers tumble in from the fields "to see what's cooking."

Healthy Camp.

Dinner is served in a long panelled dining-room, built on the English inn plan. But the girls are more interested in food than interior decorating. Many have gained weight since their arrival and blame this on Mrs. Hayes.

She admitted "this surely is a healthy camp. The district nurse seldom visits our girls. I don't know whether my cooking has anything to do with it or not."

Mrs. Hayes has recovered from the disappointment of her rejection from the Army.

"It's a lot more fun cooking for 100 farmerettes. If there were 500 I wouldn't mind a bit."

Some Men Don't Talk at Home for Fear of Starting an Argument.

Dear Miss Dix: I am not a talkative person. Making conversation is quite a chore for me. When I am with people other than home folks I suppose I do work at it a little harder and try to find things to say when there really isn't anything to talk about. But this is because the social order seemingly demands it, while at home I am just my natural self.

This is the sore spot of an otherwise satisfactory marriage. My wife says I do not want to talk to her. She says I have nothing to say to her when we are alone, that I never tell her the news or anything that happens in my business, and she takes this as an offense. Whatever family misunderstandings we have, we always get back to this one thing. My lack of conversation.

I've tried by the hour to explain to her that I mean no disparagement to her in not talking; that it's just my nature. I can't help it. But it does not appease her. And matters are growing worse. She is getting more definitely of the opinion that I am not companionable to her because I will not talk. I'm afraid our marriage is going on the rocks just over this one thing. What do you suggest?

Answer: I don't know. The gift of gab is a birthday present that one's fairy godmother either does or does not drop in one's cradle. And there we are—with wagging tongues, or else we are tongue-tied, and there's nothing much can do about it.

The trouble wtih the non-talkers is that they never can think of anything to say. It seems foolish to them to remark that it's a pleasant day when all can see for themselves that the sun is shining, and that the temperature is about right. Nor do they think it worthwhile to report that they met Mrs. Smith on street when neither one of them cares a rap whether they never see Mrs. S. again. Or why relate that the 7:45 train was late five minutes? Or that they had corned beef hash for lunch? Or repeat what everybody has already read in the papers? Why work oneself to death to jabber when one can pass into the silence and be peaceful and contended

Insist on Conversation

Yet the one thing that women seem to insist on in marriage more than anything else is conversation, and the pet grievance of millions of wives is that their husbands won't talk at home. They say that they didn't marry to spend their evenings sitting up with a stuffed shirt that is as inarticulate as a store dummy and that could be swapped for a clam without their ever finding out the difference.

It's easy to get the women's point of view. They really do marry for companionship, and you can't be very companionable with a man who merely grunts when you speak to him, and it's bound to make any wife feel that she's fallen pretty flat herself as an entertainer if all the response she gets to a thrilling piece of gossip she's been dying all day to tell him is 'Uh-huh." Also, women like to talk. But conversation is a give-and-take game that you can't play alone. You have to have

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, August 26.

ALTHOUGH SUDDEN upsets and antagonisms or obstructions are notable in this day's astrological chart, yet there is a sign that the most tenacious obstacles and erratic precipitations of unusual situations may be vanquished or annihilated by a keen and laudable sense of duty, obligation, justice and fair play. Inspired by such noble efforts and the patience fortitude and good judgment to go ahead against all impediments and pitfalls, success and satisfaction may crown all worthy endeavors.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of frustration and obstacles as well as sudden, surprising and singular circumstances. This may incite to sound, decisive and resolute action, mainly inspired by a sense of duty, obligation and the definite purpose of playing a just and worthy role in the trying ordeal. Patience, tact, kindliness and philosophic evaluation of the besetting and perhaps devasting course of events, may win out and bring gratification.

A child born on this day may encounter difficulties, frustrations and reversals in its affairs which may tax its patience, fortitude and good judgment. But its inherent soundness, justice and fairness as well as sense of duty and honety will eventually win against obstacles.

J. Loaring To Teach After The War

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

PORTSMOUTH, Aug. 25—(CP).—Johnny Loaring, whose flying feet carried him to the front ranks of the world's trackmen, wants to be a school teacher after the war.

That's one reason why the fair-haired Windsor, Ont., boy who scored points for Canada in the last Olympic and British Empire games is happy about the job he's doing now on the instructional staff of His Majesty's Signal School.

Loaring hasn't much to say about his present work—"the Germans would probably like to know something about it too," he explains—but it was important enough to get him a recall from the Middle East and has kept him on land for more than a year.

"I'm rather lucky to be doing this sort of thing," the young naval lieutenant said. "I always wanted to be a teacher and the work I'm doing now should come in handy after the war. And what's more, I know a lot more now than when I first joined up."

Johnny is lucky in more ways than one to be instructing. He was serving in the cruiser Fiji a year ago last May when she was dive-bombed and sunk during the Crete evacuation and spent three hours in the water before a destroyer picked him up.

Whole Class Joined

Loaring was in his final year at University of Western Ontario, London, Ont., when war began and with every member of his class joined the Canadian navy. They came oversea together in May, 1940.

Despite two years of navy life, the young lieutenant is running up to his previous standards.

"I don't think I've been in better condition since the Olympic Games than I was at Epsom last month (July)," Loaring said.

Loaring was referring to an inter-services track meet in which he won the 440-yard race in 49 seconds flat and the 440-yard hurdles in 54.4 seconds, best times turned in for these events in England since the war began.

In addition to his instructional job, Loaring is sports officer for the Royal Navy Barracks here and, although he says this doesn't involve much work, it gives him an opportunity to keep in condition. There's a cinder track near the barracks which isn't the best in the world, but is good enough for training. He organized a track meet for members of the Women's Royal Naval Service earlier this summer.

The summer track season is just about over in England, but Loaring has one more big meet on his program before putting away his spikes. It's an inter-allied services meet scheduled for early in September.

Enough To Win

"I think we have enough good Canadian trackmen over here to win it, if we can only get them together," he said. He mentioned Sgt. Joe Addison, middle distance ace from Victoria who ran with him in the Olympic Games, and Capt. Munro Bourne of Montreal, an Olympic swimmer who also is a handy man on the track.

"If we can get those two and another good quarter miler, and a couple of men for the field events, and...."

Loaring's wife, a pretty blonde girl from Dutton, Ont., broke in at this point with a reminder that, "I thought you said you were going to retire after those seven week-ends and the Epsom meet."

Johnny shrugged that one off with one of his disarming grins and resumed—"I hear Joe turned in a .156 half-mile the other day..."

Somehow or other you got the idea there are too many good races left in Loaring's legs for him to retire just yet and that whenever there are any to be run, he'll be out there showing his heels to all who think they can catch him.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

When Dr. C. Fulford and F. Dearborn met last night to break the deadlock for second place in Group No. 2 that completed the first schedule. Although we did not see much of this game the spectators tell us it was well played from beginning to end. Tied two or three times and at no stage of the game was either side so far ahead but what one end might easily alter the score. The Dr's rink was two up coming home and the Dearborn boys looked as if they might tie it up until Dr. Fulford played a beautiful shot to come in for second.

The rinks:

W. K. Meredith	E. Frost
Les Turner	M. Breckenbridge
W. Hamilton	L. Loftus
Dr. C. Fulford	F. H. Dearborn

It is a little early to make any predictions regarding the supplementary schedule. Group No. 2 played last night and judging from the scores handed in it appears some of the boys had a walk away.

Group No. 1 plays this evening.

It has been announced that it will be mixed rinks for Friday night.

In the ladies section, Mrs. J. Arnold's rink met and defeated Mrs. L. Bearn's rink for the group honours.

This also was a deadlock game. Each having won the same number of games in the season's schedule, and therefore the play off was necessary. As we were too busy with our own game we saw nothing of this final game and so we are in no position to make any comment.

The rinks were:

Mrs. G. Spence	Mrs. A. McWilliams

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Fred L. Marx of suburban Deerfield believes in the novel approach in job hunting. He sent 100 letters to presidents of Chicago companies, each containing a spoonful of sugar done up in cellophane. The letters say his wife believes he is slightly crazy, but that he frankly hopes the bribe will get him a five-minute interview.

Final Round Is Captured 4 Games To One

Westclox are champions of the Girls' Softball League, and winners of the Bond Cup and Peterborough's representatives in the provincial playdowns. The Big Bens finally cleaned up the playoff series last night when behind great pitching by Isobel "Tommy" Bullock they smothered the Generals to win 9 to 3 and take the final round four games to one.

Westclox scored four runs in the first inning and the game never was in doubt after that, so thorough was the mastery of the winners over the C.G.E. batters. Generals were held scoreless until the eighth inning and up to that stage were able to break through Isobel Bullock's pitching for only two hits, both by May Wade who beat out a bunt and a slow roller. They finally scored a run in the eighth, assisted by an error and in the final frame with Westclox leading 9 to 1, managed to bunch three hits, to score two more counters. The Big Bens pitcher struck out fourteen of the Generals during the engagement.

Her work was all the more creditable in view of the fact that she worked under a handicap. In Saturday night's rained-out game she hurt her shoulder in a collision with Eunice Armstrong and the injured arm was giving her lots of trouble but she remained in there and pitched one of the best games of the season.

Bea McDowell went the route for C.G.E. and worked hard in a hopeless cause. Four hits, a base on balls and a couple of errors gave the Westclox four runs in the first innings and when they bunched four more hits in the fourth for three runs the argument was about ended, with the losers unable to solve the delivery of the winners' pitcher.

Westclox hammered out fifteen hits with Eunice Armstrong, Marg Hawthorne and Isobel Bullock setting the pace with three blows each. May Wade was the only Generals' player to get more than one hit.

Phyllis Bigelow and May Wade contributed nice running catches, although fielding features were not numerous.

It has been quite a series. Westclox won the first three games. Generals remained in the running by taking the fourth a week ago last night and the teams spent a week trying to get the fifth game completed. It was called on account of darkness last Tuesday night with Westclox in front 13 to 4. Thursday night with the teams tied with three runs each rain stopped the excitement and Saturday night when the Generals were leading 5 to 0 along came another shower and washed out the proceedings.

The teams:

Westclox: A. Anderson, cf; V. McLean, 2b; Eunice Armstrong, 1b; M. Hawthorne, c; I. Bullock, p; M. Watson, 3b; B. Rome, lf; D. Walker, rf; A. Patterson, rf; V. Patterson, ss.

Generals: M. Wade, 3b; A. DeCarlo, c; P. Bigelow, 1b; E. Craig, 2b; B. McDowell, p; N. Strickland, ss; R. Hewitt, cf; M. McCarthy, lf; I. Perdue, rf; P. McQuade, rf.

Cub Officers To Meet

A request has been received that the club officers arrange another Sixers' conference this year. All Cub officers are requested to meet in the local association headquarters at 7.30 p.m., Wednesday, August 26, to talk over arrangements for the affair.

St. John's Pack

Last Friday the pack met on the church lawns, and a series of games were enjoyed. Next Friday the boys will meet at the foot of the path leading up to the church from Hunter street and will then proceed to Akela's home. Bring your bathing suits. Those who cannot swim or are not allowed to do so will be entertained by other sports.

Apple Day Ahead

We would ask the Scout leaders to start talking to their boys about Apple Day. Think over your district and get your group committee working with you. Let us make this Apple Day the best yet. It is expected that the date will be October 10th or 17th. Date has not yet been received from provincial headquarters.

Registration

Once again the time of our re-registration is drawing near. The group committees should get ready to call their group Scouters together and have them prepare for this work. It would also be a good thing to discuss the winter activities with the officers concerned.

First Class and King Scouts

The aim of every Scout should be the King Scout badge. The first step toward this goal is to be a first-class Scout. Let the aim of every boy in the movement be to earn this badge. What is worth doing is worth doing well.

Back Lawn Luck

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 25—(CP).—If four-leaf clovers mean anything, Jeanne Anderson of London should have lots of luck. She recently found 51 four-leaf clovers and topped the backyard search by picking up three five-leaf and two six-leaf clovers.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

With Plazas needing only one more win to grab off the championship the hockey squad and the luckless Royals who have made all three games close and yet have had to accept defeat will meet in the fourth game of the final round at Riverside Park tonight, starting at 6.30 o'clock. Royals were beaten 9-8 in the third game last night by Don Crowe's long home run in the last of the ninth but the losers made a gallant fight for a win. They were down 6 to 0 at one stage and Parsons had allowed only one hit in the first three frames but they battled back and went out in front 8 to 6, only to be overhauled and finally beaten by the narrowest possible margin. They are hopeful for a better break tonight and declare that they will remain in the running by grabbing off tonight's battle and extending the series. They have not announced their pitching selection. Bill Fraser who was nosed out 4 to 3 Friday night may be on hand for the all-important test or Akers may be sent back at Plazas. Or Manager Parnel' may pin his faith on the youthful right arm of Bob Crowe. There is no mystery about Plazas' choice for tonight. It is Dave Wilson's turn to throw and he will undoubtedly get the call. Both teams will be at full strength and tonight's game should be on a par with the first three tilts, al lof which have been exciting all the way.

* * * * * *

Several clubs in the City League, notably Soldiers and Royals, are undoubtedly wishing that Don Crowe had had to report to the R.C.A.F. around the beginning of August instead of at the end of it. Three times in five playoff games the Plazas have pulled off a win in the final inning and on each occasion it was the big bat of Mr. Crowe that did the damage. In the first game of the semi-final series with Soldiers he strode out to the plate with the Plazas trailing 4 to 2, and in the ninth, and a teammate on the sacks and promptly cracked a long homer to left centre to tie up the game. Plazas then shoved over another run to take the verdict. Last Friday night with the score tied 3-3 and two out in the first of the ninth Crowe slapped a double to right field and a few moments later ran home with the winning run on Joe Blewett's single. Last night with the teams dead-locked and one out in the last of the ninth the Plazas second-sacker, who joins the Air Force at the end of the week, blasted Royals' hopes with one of the longest home runs of the season, the ball rolling to the scoreboard. Tonight may mark Crowe's last appearance with the Plazas and he should get a great send-off from the fans.

Will Be Real Battle

Peterborough Juveniles will clash with Oshawa Commercials at Riverside Park on Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock in the second game of their O.A.S.A. juvenile playdowns and a real battle between two good young teams can be expected. It is do or die for the Peterborough youngsters. They dropped the first game of the series in Oshawa on Saturday and must win the return game or hang up their unies for the season. The local kids say they can do the trick. They were below form in Saturday's tussle but they are confident they can hit their stride in tomorrow's game and make a third battle necessary. It is expected that Bill Jones will do the pitching for the Petes and Fred Garvey will be behind the bat. The infield will consist of Starr Detlor at first, Bill Millen second, Ken Anderson at short and Reg Leether at third, while Jack White, Jack Carpenter and Bill Greatrix will take care of the outfield positions. Most of Oshawa's team played against the Petes last year. They have a club of big youngsters and the local Juveniles will have to be on their toes all the way to get a decision over the invaders and force a third game. The kids have played good ball all season and they are entitled to a real crowd to see them battle in the Ontario series.

Westclox Are Champs

Smothering Generals 9 to 3 last night the Westclox team captured the Girls' League championship, cleaning up the final series 4 games to 1 and the general verdict will be that the Big Bens who have improved steadily since the early part of the season are worthy title-holders. When the league opened this season Generals had apparently cornered the pitching crop and as Westclox had lost a number of last year's players the outlook for the team from the factory on Armour Hill did not look rosy. And it looked worse when they lost their first three games. Then they started to roll and they have been rolling ever since, showing more punch at the bat and improving defensively as the season progressed. Pat Hayden who took over the team owing to the illness of the veteran coach and manager Ab Delahaye has done a real job. The addition of Aggie Anderson to the outfield added strength to the team and other players have improved steadily. The effective pitching of Mrs. Watson and the great relief hurling of Isobel Bullock have been powerful factors in the team's success. Marg Hawthorne has been starring both at third and behind the bat when she took over the backstop duties while Isobel Bullock, regular catcher, went to the mound. From a poor start the Westclockers have come along to take the title and qualify for the Ontario playdowns. There were not many fans who would have predicted that outcome in June.

St. Peter's who finished on top in the regular schedule in the Catholic League race evened up the playoffs for the loop title and the Sullivan Trophy last night when they nosed out the East City Cubs 10 to 9 in a hard-fought and exciting game. Cubs sprang a big surprise in the opening game on Friday night when they walloped St. Peter's 19 to 7. However the Saints apparently did not let that disaster get them down for they came back last night with a fighting game that finally saw them eke out a one-run win. Now the series is all sewed up and at this stage it is anybody's battle. The two clubs met in the finals last season and the Cubs took the marbles on that occasion.

In the only game played in the majors yesterday St. Louis Cardinals broke out in front in the first game of their important series with Brooklyn by defeating the Dodgers 7 to 1 and cutting their lead to 6½ games. Max Lanier, cagey left-hander was the big factor in the Cards' win. He muffled the Bums' attack, allowing only four hits and against that kind of throwing the Dodgers never had a chance particularly as Larry French, used as a starting pitcher, was in trouble from the first frame on. French who was charged with his second defeat of the season was out of the game by the end of the fifth. The Cards bunched four hits with a double steal in the fourth to score three runs and the ball game was all over then, with in the series and they will all be bitterly fought. A Cardinal sweep would Lanier in complete control of the situation. There are three more games leave the situation decidedly interesting.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: The third game in the Catholic League playoffs between St. Peter's and Cubs will be played Thursday night, instead of Wednesday as first announced. The fourth game will be staged Friday and if a fifth is necessary it will be played Monday....Eddie Starr did not get a hit in last night's game but he drove in three runs. The first three times he came up there was a runner on third and in each case he drove a long fly to the outfield to send the marker in....Incidentally he hit to all three fields in accomplishing the feat....Last night's win was the fifth playoff victory in succession for the Plazas. Three of them have been won in the ninth innings....Dom DiMaggio of the Boston Red Sox has joined the U.S. navy but will be able to finish the season with his club ....Toronto Maple Leafs kept in the race for a playoff berth by trimming Rochester Red Wings 3-2 and 8-3 last night....Brintons and Electrics will meet Thursday night in the series for the Knox Cup....The first time the girls' teams clashed the game was deadlocked....Eddie Bush of Stratford Nationals pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Galt Terriers yesterday ....Pat Calladine has been Royals' most useful batter in the present series ....The veteran catcher has been getting on the bases regularly and scoring frequently....The Oshawa-Juveniles battle at Riverside Park gets away at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening. It rates a real crowd.

Trapshooters Head For Vandalia Championships

St. Peter's Boys Sew Up Playoff Series

St. Peter's staged a brilliant comeback in the Catholic League playoff game at Memorial Park to win a red-hot argument 10 to 9 from the Cubs and sew up the series at one win each. The East City club won the first game 19 to 7, but found the Saints a different proposition last night.

Cubs pulled up close in the final stages, getting three runs in the last two innings, but the rally fell one short of sewing up the game.

St. Peter's fired the opening gun and plugged the score sheet for two runs in the first column, and the Cubs retaliated with one. The winners couldn't do a thing in the upper section of the second inning, whereas the losers pounded them for two, making the score 3-2 in favor of the Cubs. This was too much for the victors after losing the initial contest of the three in five final, so they hammered their opponent for three in the third, establishing a two run lead. Following this rally the Saints kept ahead of the hard-hitting East City aggregation although the latter kept pressing dangerously till the last apple was heaved.

In the lower section of the third the Cubs chalked up a one counter. When the Saints marked down two more in their half of the fourth the Cubs did likewise in their half, leaving the score at 7-6. Getting three markers in the fifth and a goose egg for the sixth and seventh, St. Peter's total came to 10 and a zero in the 5th and a two and a one in the sixth and seventh, respectively. Cubs total was solidified at 9, bringing the final count to 10-9.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

TORONTO August 25 — (CP).—The 37-cent thoroughbred, Omar's Gift won't go to the races again this season....She suffered bad leg cuts during the British Columbia Futurity, and her owner, Scotty Kenned of Winnipeg will tuck her away to rest up....The filly's career has been a fairy story since she went to Kennedy for that ridiculous sum, and the way she responds to treatment will determine whether the yarn will be a short short or a serial.

Sugestion:

While hockey men are observing the closed-mouth policy with meticulous exactness in fear too much talk would queer the plans being hatched in Ottawa, constructive suggestions for the sports future have been few and far between.... Al (Montreal Herald) Parsley has one that's worth consideration, and it's quite a simple thing....He recalls that in International Baseball League a player subject to call for military service merely leaves his name and address with his draft board along with a copy of the league schedule......When the call comes, the authorities can reach him in a few hours....In hockey, observance of that policy would eliminate the passport difficulties that blighted some clubs, left others untouched, last season.

The expert says:

Bill (Vancouver Province) Dunford, on the news report that Lynn Patrick's wife had divorced him for cruelty: "He was mild enough at the party ma gave me when I was one year old."

Incidentally:

Jimmy Ripple has finally started to hit....He was slugging for a thundering .184 until he got five for seven for Toronto Leafs against Rochester in a double-header last night....The portly one usually bears down when the heat is on, and for Leafs the time is now....Vince (Winnipeg Tribune) Leah reports that hockey sticks will be 51 inches long this season, instead of 54 inches, and will be manufactured in only six models for forwards and defencemen and two for goalkeepers ....Coast reports have Jimmy McLarnin about to enter the United States Navy.....McLarnin lives around Los Angeles now but keeps his ties with Vancouver, his home town.....He was contact man in Los Angeles and Hollywood for the Lions Gate open last week, made sure the movie stars headed north in time for the big event....Gordon Gelhaye, the gigantic Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver football lineman, is still trying to crack the Army or Air Force......He turned out to one Winnipeg practice....It would seem from reports that the Bombers won't have overmuch trouble in fielding a good team in defence of their Canadian championship.

PLAZAS SHADE ROYALS 9 TO 8 FOR THIRD TRIUMPH IN A ROW

Redbirds Humble Dodgers 7-1 Before 25,588

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals may not have any more chance of catching the Brooklyn Dodgers than the slow train through Arkansas has of overtaking the Broadway Limited, but Billy Southworth has the throttle wide open.

His Red Birds tumbled the Dodgers 7-1 last night before an enthusiastic turnout of 25,588 fans who jammed Sportsman's Park at St. Louis for the first fracas of a four-game series. It was the tenth triumph in 11 games for the Cardinals and kept alive their still-throbbing hope for the National League pennant.

Actually it did no great damage to the Dodgers, who breezed into the Mound City with a record of 10 victories in their last dozen games and a 7½ game lead. All Brooklyn needs at St. Louis is an even split to make the September stretch serene. The Dodgers still have that chance.

They also have the comfort of knowing that the closing days of the season will be spent in the pleasant company of the Phils and the Boston Braves, from whom Brooklyn has won 25 out of 33 games.

To tear a really gaping hole in the Dodgers' padding at the top of the league the Cardinals would have to sweep the series and the Red Birds tackled the strenuous assignment last night with a full head of steam.

They blasted Lefty Larry French and two successors for a dozen hits, pulled off a double steal that scored a run, and edequately suppressed the Dodgers on four-hit hurling by southpaw Max Lanier.

This was the only game scheduled in either major league yesterday. The same rivals play another game tonight, then have twilight engagements the next two days.

Players whose options were recalled included Outfielders Sid Gordon and Johnny Rucker, Infielders Joe Orengo and Connie Ryan and Pitchers Hugh East, Dave Koslo, Sal Maglie, and John Wittig of Jersey City; Outfielder Howard Moss of Columbus, and Pitcher Rube Fischer of Minneapolis.

Crowe's Homer In Ninth Turns Trick

Don Crowe's mammoth homer to deep left centre with one out in the last half of the ninth inning gave Plazas another eleventh-hour victory over Royals at Riverside Park last night to make it three straight wins in the City League final series. Crowe's long drive which rolled to the scoreboard broke an 8-8 deadlock and earned the hockey squad a stranglehold on the loop title. The fourth game in the series will be played tonight at 6:30 o'clock.

Last night's contest started out like a runaway for the Plazas who scored a run in the second frame and came back with five in the third to go out in front 6 to 0. Then Royals rallied and, taking advantage of a wild streak by Tom Parsons in the fourth, and bunching four hits with an error in the fifth, scored a quartette of runs in each frame to put them in the lead 8 to 6. Parsons, however, blanked them for the rest of the game and the Plazas with single markers in the sixth and seventh tied the count and Crowe broke up the game in the ninth with his long homer.

Parsons who won his second decision of the series over Royals pitched a peculiar game. He was in trouble in only two innings but he had plenty of it then, Royals breaking through for eight runs. Then he levelled away and for the remaining four innings allowed only two hits and no runs.

Akers who went the route for the Royals was hit harder than in his first game against the league leaders, the winners getting to him for 13 safe blows.

There was plenty of good fielding plays with Pryde in centre field for the losers in the limelight with half a dozen running catches. Scriver in right field also came through with several nice grabs and Don Crowe shone with a diving one-handed catch of a hard drive from the bat of his namesake Bob Crowe.

Plazas scored a run in the second. With one out Joe Blewett doubled to right centre. Web. Starr flied to left. Ellis got a double when Parnell failed to make a shoestring catch of his drive to left. Blewett held up on third and scored when Eddie Starr poled a fly to left.

Royals threw away a chance in the first of the third when Bob Crowe drove a triple to deep right field but was out at the plate on a fast relay, Kingdon to Don Crowe to E. Starr when he tried to stretch the hit into a homer.

The winners had a field day in their half. Heal started it with a double to right, stretching it by fast running. Kingdon dropped a double into right, Heal being held at third. He scored when Crowe bounded one to Akers and Smith dropped the throw to first. Blewett ripped a single down the first base line to score Kingdon. W. Starr singled to right to send Crowe in. Bob Crowe missed a rolled from Ellis and Blewett crosses the plate. Eddie Starr's long fly to Scriver sent W. Starr home with the fifth run of the inning. Jones popped up and Parsons fanned to end the frame.

Royals got back in the ball game in the fourth. With one out Calladine and Hawks walked and Pryde bounced a double past third, scoring Calladine. Parnell walked, filling the base sand Scriver also drew a pass, forcing Hawks in. Akers flied to right and Pryde scored after the catch. McNabb singled to left scoring Parnell. Crowe fanned.

The second-placers came right back with four in the fifth. With one away Pat Calladine was safe on Heal's fumble. Hawks dropped a triple down the right field foul line, scoring Calladine. Pryde bounced a single off W. Starr's knee, Hawks scoring. Parnell rolled to Don Crowe, Pryde going to second. Scriver's high fly dropped back of second for a hit and Pryde went home. Akers doubled to left, scoring Scriver and McNabb went down on strikes, retiring the side.

That was all for Royals who only got two men on the bases for the balance of the game. Plazas closed the gap in the sixth when Ellis singled to right, went round to third on two wild pitches and scored when Eddie Starr flied to centre.

The hockey squad tied it up in the seventh and might have had more. Heal opened with a double to right, making the keystone station by fast running. Kingdon singled sharply to right and Heal was an easy out at the plate when he tried to score. Crowe singled to centre, Kingdon stopping at third. Blewett flied to right and Kingdon scored on the catch to tie up the game. Web Starr doubled to centre, Crowe holding up at third. Ellis walked filling the bases but was forced at second Eddie Starr's roller to McNabb.

That was all until the ninth when Crowe, second man up for the Plazas smashed a long drive between Parnell and Pryde to win the argument. He fell at first base but still had plenty of time to circle the bases before the ball was recovered.

Sport Shots From Britain

By ALAN RANDALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 25.—(CP)—The war's biggest tennis crowd—3,000—saw first class play when Britain's Peggy Scriven (now Mrs. F. H. Vivian) beat Chile's Anita Lizana (now Mrs. R. Ellis), 6-4, 9-7, in a Red Cross match at Bournemouth.

Five years ago, playing on the same court, Anita beat Peggy in the Hard Courts Championship Final. The Chilean girl, who couldn't speak English when she came to this country but who now talks with her husband's Scottish accent, tried hard to repeat the performance! But she couldn't match Peggy's speed and accuracy.

More news for women fans. Vera Ellery, 15-year-old London girl, clipped 13 1-5 second off the British half-mile swimming record of 12 minutes 43 2-5 seconds.

More women swimmers came to the rescue of a Canadian army water polo team scheduled to play a London Fire Force team. Because of the rubber shortage the Canadians couldn't buy headgear, so the girls loaned them their swimming caps.

Two sprightly youngsters in the 100-yard veterans race at a White City Athletic festival were Charlie Cook and A. E. Huddleston. Both are more than 80!

It took Vic Oliver, stage and screen star husband of Sarah Churchill — the prime minister's daughter, nearly a year to do it, but he's finally won a horse race. His Indian Tea won the Apprentice Handicap at Newmarket — and paid a nice 100-7 at that.

British track fans who still consider their Sydney Wooderson the world's best miler sat up and took notice at the four minutes three seconds mile recorded by George Campbell, 18-year-old Australian, at Sydney. That's 3 2-5 seconds faster than Wooderson's recognized outdoor record even if it was made on a track measured with a cloth tape instead of a steel one.

And now for some figures. The Red Cross have sent British prisoners of war: 4,500 soccer balls, 600 rugby balls, 600 hockey sticks, 2,400 pairs of boxing gloves, 1,800 cricket bats, 2,400 cricket balls, 4,500 tennis balls, 7,200 pairs of football boots, 9,000 sets of football outfits, 250,000 packs of cards, 1,500 dartboards, 3,000 shove-halfpenny boards 1,500 sets of dominoes, 4,000 checker boards, 3,000 chess boards, 5,000 table tennis bats and 18,000 table tennis balls.

Schoolboy Rowe To Montreal; Leafs Win Pair

By The Associated Press.

Schoolboy Rowe, twice a World Series hero, and with hopes of making a third appearance in the Fall classic, makes his International League debut for Montreal Royals tonight in a contest with Buffalo Bisons.

Proceeds of the game on the Canadian field will go to the fund for the purchase of sports equipment for service men.

Rowe was acquired by the Royals, a Brooklyn farm team, with the National League club only some 30-add games away from the World Series. Rowe, who went to Brooklyn from Detroit early in the summer, admitted upon joining his new Montreal mates that he was a bit disgusted with his turn of luck.

"I didn't like missing the World Series," he said. "I might never get another chance. It was a little rough being sent away."

Even without their new pitching ace the Royals entrenched themselves in second place last night by defeating the Bisons for a third straight time, 6-5, with Alex Kampouris' home run over the scoreboard in the fifth with a mate on base being the deciding blow.

The little infielder belted three hits in three trips to the plate but yielded the stick honors to Jack Redmond, Buffalo catcher, who belted four-for four, including one homer.

Giants Back In Third.

A two-run eighth inning rally brought Jersey City a 5-4 verdict over Baltimore and lifted the Little Giants back into third place in the tight league race as Syracuse lost to the league-leading Newark Bears, 5 to 2.

Joe Johnson's long-distance hitting brought Newark its victory over the erstwhile third-place Chiefs. He slapped a homer in the sixth to even the score and then drove in two more runs with a triple during a four-run outburst in the eighth.

Toronto took both ends of a double header from Rochester, outlasting the Birds for a 3-2 decision in the 10-inning opener and romping to an 8 to 3 decision in the nightcap on the hitting of Jim Ripple. The former Red Bird hit for the cycle—a home run, triple, double and single in four appearances at the plate.

It was the first time for the trick in the Toronto lot this season.

NEW YORK, August 25. — (AP)—What difference does it make if the Yankees are nine games in front and the Dodgers 6½, did you ever see such a race as they're having in the American Association....The standing (as of yesterday) show only six games from first-place Milwaukee to seventh-place Indianapolis....Count out Newark, and the International is almost as close—Five games from second to seventh .....They're still hustling for a piece of the playoff change in several other minor leagues, too....Sidelight on a great athlete: when Babe Ruth was dressing after his first workout in years at the Yankee Stadium, Red Ruffing glanced over at the Bam, surrounded by admiring younger Yankees, and remarked, "look at the guy; he still hangs up his uniform." ....No extra work for the clubhouse boy when the Babe's around.

The best policy.

Note of refreshing frankness in a football handout from Texas College of Mines: "One reason that 'Sugar' Evans may be one of the best fullback in the Border Conference is that so many good ones are in the Armed Service."

One-minute sport page.

Latest word on the hockey situation is that Madison Square Garden is preparing for 24 home games for the Rangers and none at all for the Americans....Wonder if that means the league is dropping a weak member or that Red Dutton is more interested in building air fields and such things in Canada?——Mel Allen, who airs the Yanks' games, likely will be the No. 1 talker on the World Series broadcast this year....Busiest guy at the National Tennis Championships probably will be Eugene Falkenburg, who is only a week-end player. His two boys, Tom and Bob, are entered in the men's singles, daughter Jink in the women's singles and Mrs. F. in the women's veterans event.

MILWAUKEE, August 25—(AP).—Volo Song, trained and driven by the veteran Ben White asserted his mastery of the two-year-old Grand Circuit trotting field yeserday by defeating 3 colts in the $4,721 American Stake at the Wisconsin State Fair.

The colt went an extra heat to win the feature event of the program when White was forced to pull him up in the second heat, won by Worthy Boy, piloted by Sep Palin.

Lassie Mack, a bay mare owned by E. J. Baker of St. Charles, Ill., took the 2:16 pace in straight heats and All Spencer won the 2:12 trot. Both races carried $1,000 purses.

Two Top-Ranking Pitchers On Sale Phils Need Cash

PHILADELPHIA, August 25 — (AP). — Reports circulated yesterday that the Phils may sell either Pitcher Tom Hughes or Frank Melton, or both, in order to raise money to pay their debts.

Unofficial home attendance of the Phils to date is 208,176, well below last year and Gerry Nugent, president of the National League club, declared "the dwindling attendance is disappointing." He declined comment on the reports Hughes or Melton would be sold.

Both are ranked as among the best pitchers in the league. It is estimated they would bring $150,000.

The best big deal involving the Phils was two years ago when Pitcher Kirby Higbe was sold to Brooklyn for $100,000.

4 Parties Honor Couples Near Warkworth

WARKWORTH, Aug. 25—(ENS)—At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Darling, Morganston, a large number of neighbors and friends gathered on Friday night, to express to the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Johnston (nee Helen Darling) their congratulations and best wishes. During the evening Mr. Cecil Dackins made a few remarks, after which an address was read by Miss Marjorie Gooderich and a presentation made.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnston fittingly expressed their appreciation for their friends' kindness and for the beautiful studio couch and other lovely gifts.

On Friday night, in the Masonic Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edgar and Mr. and Mrs. John Bowen, who were recently married, were given a shower.

The large number present enjoyed a fine program of songs, readings, piano solos and speeches. At the close of the program the happy couples were presented with an address read by P. S. Ewing and some lovely gifts, among which was a chest of silver with a service of eight for each couple.

Following expressions of appreciation from the grooms, all enjoyed dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Knight, Norham, were pleasantly surprised, when about eighty relatives, friends and neighbors including several from Campbellford, Castleton, Colborne, Grafton, Brighton, Warkworth, Dartford and Toronto gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Knight Thursday evening to extend to them congratulations on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of their marriage.

A fine social time and a short program was enjoyed. Among the gifts which they received were a cabinet of silver presented by their granddaughter, Joan Knight, and a bouquet of flowers presented by Margaret Oliver. Mrs. Knight also received a wrist watch, a gift from her sons, Douglas and Donald.

On suggestion of the bride of forty years ago when the anniversary cake was cut, donations amounting to over three dollars were received for the Red Cross.

Hitler Racing Time

Time, however, appeared to be a crucial factor in Hitler's race to strike home a decisive blow ahead of the Allies' gathering thunderheads. This was accented last night by Moscow's radio warning of great danger in the Caucasus.

The Russian publicist Yemelyan Yaroslavsky said the threatened isolation of the south from the rest of Russia could have grave consequences, possibly new peril for Leningrad and Moscow, possibly the release of Axis forces for action in the west.

For the fourth time in eight days United States' Flying Fortresses were back over French territory in daylight yesterday.

The big bombers, escorted by fighters of the R.A.F., R.C.A.F., the U.S. Air Force and the Polish Air Force, reached their target — Nazi shipyards at Le Trait, on the Seine River near Rouen—and all 12 came home. The fighter screen at one time held off 40 German planes which tried to intercept the bombers.

Two escorting planes are missing but two Canadian pilots—Sqdn. Ldr. Norman Bretz of Toronto, who recently took over from Sqdn. Ldr. R. E. Morrow of Ottawa, and Flt. Lt. E. Bland of Calgary—each bagged one of the two Focke-Wulf 190s shot down.

Bland came back with a head injury but waved aside help as he crawled from the cockpit at his base. "I'm O.K." he told those who went to help him.

The R.A.F., which has specialized on the night shift of the round-the-clock air assaults, again showered western Germany with incendiaries and high explosives last night, apparently in considerable force, according to a German report.

Growing air activity over the Egyptian desert and persistent Axis efforts to get more men and machines across the Mediterranean were construed as pointing to North Africa as a potential major front again.

The weather is growing more favorable for desert fighting and, British observers have pointed out, Hitler could not ignore that southern claw if he has hopes of swift mastery of the trans-Caucasus.

Women In Mine

ALMA, Colo., Aug. 25—(AP).—At least one Colorado mine is using women to fill job vacancies caused by men going into the army or to more lucrative employment. H. L. Tedrow, general manager of the London Mines and Milling Company, said six women have been hired in the ore sorting plant. Their job is to throw out rock from crushed gold and silver ore carried along on a conveyor belt.

Money The Root

is a long way off," he said.

Money was said to be the root of the trouble here, but Australia took money "by the scruff of the neck" by devaluing the pound and putting it to work to train an army of 100,000 men and build the ships and machines of war," he added.

Over at Sault Ste. Marie, the Premier said, he saw 3,000 men parading in a demonstration strike and said there should be a different spirit as between Labor and Capital and, in fact between all classes of the people. "If Hitler came the country would be entirely enslaved and as slaves the people would present no menace to their rulers."

If The Nile Goes

In Russia, he said, Hitler had captured practically every important industrial city with the exception of Stalingrad and had the chance of seriously compromising the British war effort on the Nile. If Germany started a big pincer movement with one prong around the Caucasus, the British Nile army might be forced southward, giving Hitler the opportunity to use the Italian and French fleets to advantage.

Mr. Hepburn warned that if the Germans were able to come into the open with the French and Italian fleets manned by Nazi sailors and with the enormous navy Germany had been building herself since war began, "we may really see England with her back to the wall. We may see Germany slipping around by the north, capturing Iceland and making that long-looked-for attack against this continent."

At Sault Ste. Marie negro American troops are guarding the Canadian side of the locks, a fact that after three years in the war "should make us hang our heads in shame," he said.

Mr. Hepburn recalled that before the war he had heard it said that a few drunken British tars could burn down Tokyo with cigarette butts. "Those who said that did not know the striking power of the Japs.

"I want to say to the men of Ottawa—we have our men of Ottawa, just as France had her men of Vichy—that we can't carry on a policy of fooling the people with war clouds getting closer. I know I am not popular with a lot of the Grits, but I don't care. I care for this Canada of ours."

He urged members of the Liberals, Conservatives and C.C.F. to get together and demand a real war effort.

War Finance Committee Given Praise

"We've got to get tough in this war, tougher than the Commandos. It is time to get rid of complacency," declared A. G. Walwyn, of Toronto, organizer for the city and county of Peterborough of the National War Finance Committee is discussing the coming Victory Loan drive in an address to the Peterborough Rotary Club at Monday's luncheon. Mr. Walwyn, praising the local setup and referring to the fact that Peterborough had been right at the top in the other two Victory Loan campaigns said that he had no doubt of the result of the October drive, so far as this district was concerned.

The county organizer is a partner of Gairdner and Company, investment dealers, Toronto, and a director of Canada Bread Company. Following his return from overseas service with the Royal Flying Corps in the last war he attended the University of Toronto and later entered the financial business with Dominion Securities Corporation. After ten years with that company he became a director of Gairdner and Company.

In his address on Peterborough county's position in the National financial program Mr. Walwyn, who was introduced by Rotarian Ross L. Dobbin said that financially Canada had done a great job in the present war.

"I am convinced," he said, "that there has been real leadership so far as the Department of Finance is concerned. The operation of that department has been marked by efficiency, skill and vision and in our financial program, at least, we have been approaching total war."

Canada's financial setup at the beginning of the war, the speaker said, had been sound and for that position much of the credit should be given to the establishment of the Bank of Canada which had done many good things, tangible and intangible to improve the country's financial condition.

Speaking of the situation in Peterborough Mr. Walwyn explained that the Victory Loan committee and the War Savings committee had been consolidated. "There is no lack of energy or public-spiritedness here," said the speaker. "This county has been right up at the top in the last two campaigns."

In regard to the coming drive Mr. Walwyn said that there were a number of committees that were very important. One was the corporations and special names committee, headed by Gordon S. Matthews. Many corporations, in previous loans, he said, had virtually underwritten bonds they had taken, subscribing for more than they had the capital to pay for and had thus made a very valuable contribution. More of that kind of subscription would be necessary to in the coming campaign, the speaker said because it was not clear at present just what could be expected from the middle bracket.

Mr. Walwyn, referring to the payroll committee, headed by R. E. Layfield and D. G. H. Melton, explained that ten per cent of the payroll would be the objective aimed at in the coming drive.

He urged the support of Rotarians in the campaign.

Gordon S. Matthews moved a vote of thanks to the speaker for his inspiring address.

trains, repulsed an attack by enemy forces many times greater in number," the communique said.

Planes Get 5 Hun Tanks

Soviet planes covering the Red Army withdrawal south of Krasnodar, on the Kuban River 60 miles northeast of the Black Sea port of Novorossisk, were declared to have destroyed five tanks and 70 trucks and wiped out a company (200 men) of enemy infantry in a day.

German infantry attacks were reported repulsed on a number of northwestern front sectors and a Russian assault led to hand-to-hand fighting in the Nazi trenches.

Large invasion detachments were reported wedged into Red army positions southwest of Stalingrad, Volga River shipping and factory centre, although 35 tanks were destroyed and at least 300 Germans and two companies of Rumanians were wiped out. Two dozen tanks were wrecked by a single artillery force, a Russian dispatch said.

(This theatre still was described simply as "northeast of Hotelnikovski," a reference to a German-occupied railway town 95 miles from Stalingrad, and the actual battle site was not announced.)

85 Miles From Oil

The midnight communique disclosed fighting in the area of Prokhladnenski, placing the Germans only 85 miles northwest of Grozny's oil wells and refineries in the Caucasus. This represents a Nazi advance of 50 miles from Mineralnye Vody in a week.

Large Nazi concentrations forced Soviet troops to abandon two more settlements in the fighting retreat south of Krasnodar toward the western Caucasian port of Novorossisk, the Russians said. The engagement was said to have cost the Germans 150 dead.

Red navy warships were reported to have sunk a 7,000-ton Axis transport in the Gulf of Finland.

Yemelyan Yaroslavsky, Soviet writer, declared in an address broadcast by the Moscow radio that "not only can we not afford to retreat any further, but we must at all costs throw the enemy back."

"The northern Caucasus and the Kuban must be reconquered," Yaroslavsky said. "Hitler must be destroyed this year. There is no alternative."

Morse Signal Lamp Practical At Sea

Hand-picked and carefully trained, the signalmen form a vital unit aboard Canada's fighting ships. Value Of Convoy Cargoes Keeps Sailors At Guns

By LIEUT. A. O. TATE, RCNVR.

As the Canadian destroyer zigzagged through a choppy North Atlantic her commander speculated on the moderate-sized convoy they were escorting.

"Estimating very roughly," he calculated, "I would think the 45 ships out there would be worth an average, say, of a half million dollars each....and the cargoes might work out at a half million dollars each too. There under our protection is an investment of at least $45,000,000. There might be food enough in the holds of those vessels to feed the British Isles for days."

See Light Through Fog.

The captain smiled. He was recalling in his mind the picture of the night before, when two large convoys — one going to and the other coming from Great Britain—interlaced on the high seas.

The lonely middle watch was drawing to a close, when officers on watch on the bridge tired-eyed from constant watching for the convoy they knew they might meet, saw a light blinking faintly through the fog.

Within a few minutes another two or three more lights were winking and blinking at the destroyer, and as if disturbed from its gentle rolling slumber, the sea quickly became alive with red, green and white lights. Presently through the thin mist, the indistinct shapes of ships began to appear.

Officers on the destroyer's bridge looked and silently prayed. The captain had been called and already messages between the escorting vessels of the two convoys were being cracked out by signal lamp, establishing that each was the "friend" of the other.

Then, without incident, without mishap the dozens of merchantmen and warships interlaced in the misty night and steamed on their way. As if prearranged in broad daylight, the long columns of ships in the two convoys dove-tailed neatly and precisely and disappeared into the darkness—a thrilling sight and experience.

About a week before, a destroyer had left a British port escorting a convoy. At a point where the U-boat menace was known to be acute the Canadian destroyer broke away from the convoy to attack a suspected submarine. Process of locating suspected undersea boat with the anti-submarine equipment had been in progress about 10 minutes when unaccountably the destroyer slowed to a stop. For a few seconds no one realized the ship had stopped and had begun to swing.

Then, with a quick leap one of the watchkeeping officers was at the voice-tube to the wheelhouse.

Ship Must Keep Moving.

"What's the matter? Why have we stopped?" he barked.

"I didn't know we had stopped, sir," came the muffled answer from the helmsman. "The indicator still shows revolutions."

Instantly in the minds of everyone on the bridge was one idea — STANDING TARGET FOR A SUBMARINE.

Within 30 seconds, an engine room petty officer was on the bridge, breathless — almost too breathless to speak. Then in a quiet, normal voice the captain asked: "What's the trouble?"

"The forced lubrication system has broken down, sir," the petty officer explained.

Captain Reassures Him.

"You're fixing it?" the captain inquired, a slight twinkle in his eyes reassuring the panting petty officer.

"Yes, sir."

"Very good."

Although the time seemed to halt, it was fortunately, only a matter of three or four minutes before the destroyer was again under way. A submarine attack did not develop.

It was during another of the dreary middle watches of another misty night that officers on the bridge thought their last day had come. Suddenly a strange ship's port bow lights flashed. All eyes swung in the direction of the lights. The appearance of something to break the monotony of the sea and the night sent a thrill through every man—and in the next instant they were all looking at the forward guns and superstructure of a big grey ship.

Into the minds of every man came the flashing thought: "German pocket battleship." There was that endless instant when all thought and action seems hung up, suspended.

Probably within 10 seconds after the first flash of lights there was another flash from the big ship. At the same time one of the officers realized these lights were a challenge from a Royal Navy cruiser. In another moment he had replied and the cruiser slid past, disappearing into the night.

One Per Day Is Plenty.

"Once a day is enough,"....one of the signalmen remarked.

"Enough of what?" a lookout asked.

"......to think you are looking down the front ends of enemy battleship guns."

Urge Food Check After Two Children Die

LINDSAY, Aug. 25—Deaths of two small children in the Ross Memorial Hospital here on Sunday evoked a warning against foods that might lead to auto-intestinal intoxication. Dr. Harold James Gleeson, Medical Officer of Health for Lindsay, said that a dangerous fermenting process might result from eating certain fresh foods, particularly at this time of the year.

The two children who died are Merle, 5, and Jean, 6, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Armstrong of Little Britain. They had been ill for two days.

"Great care should be taken over a child's diet," said Dr. Gleeson. "It is hard to say just which particular food item might be responsible; the danger seems to be associated with weather conditions. Unusual humidity and hot weather increase the danger. New, or green, fruit and unripe vegetables may be at the bottom of it."

Dr. Gleeson said that putrefaction as a result of food fermentations resulted in poisonings that caused intestinal intoxication, and that a child's digestive movements should be watched carefully. It is understood that an autopsy will be held on the Armstrong children.

Several other children are said to be ill in the district, but the outbreak has not yet assumed serious proportions. Dr. Gleeson added that the Lindsay cases should not be confused with the recent serious manifestations adult dysentry in Detroit.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

MAN REPORTED MISSING.

Mrs. Lyall Brooks, 12 Armour Road, has reported to the police that her husband has been missing since August 5. Inquiries are being made as to the whereabouts of Brooks who was supposed to have been seen here on August 10; since when there has been no news of him.

BETTER LOCK THEM UP

Car owners are being warned by the police that the safest place for their automobiles these nights is locked up in the family garage. A number of complaints have been received recently of gas being siphoned from cars left parked on the street overnight. In addition there is the danger that tires may be stolen.

STOKER HURT

Stoker Jim Brown of Toronto, brother-in-law of Clifford Smith, 468 Reid street, was injured recently aboard his ship and he was transferred from his own boat to a hospital ship which took him to Aberdeen, Scotland. It is not bebelieved that this man was at Dieppe.

FRACTURES HIS HAND

Myer Cherney went into a loop on Sunday afternoon while enjoying a game of softball at a picnic and came up with a broken hand. He was playing centre field and in an attempt to catch a fly, saw he would collide with another fielder. In trying to save himself, one of the metacarpal bones in the back of his hand, was fractured.

HIT-AND-RUN.

Hit-and-run drivers do not even spare garbage receptacles. This morning a Murray Street woman complained to the police that a motor car collided with her garbage can, knocked it for a loop and continued blithely on the way without stopping. The complainant, however, managed to secure the license number of the hit-and-run machine.

RATION BOOKS.

A few people in the city today received their new ration books. The books dated from September 1 on include coupons for tea, coffee and sugar, and there are three supplementary pages of coupons of different colors, which might possibly be used to purchase more of the three items mentioned when one set of coupons is used up, or it may mean that three other commodities are to be rationed as well.

SLEEPING IN DITCH.

With the thermometer dropping down close to the frost mark last night, an Otonabee ditch was not the sort of a place many folk would select as a bed. However Provincial Constable Price Morris arrested a man this morning who had done so. The officer answered a complaint from the Coldsprings section and found a man who had spent the night sleeping by the side of the road. He claimed that he had recently been discharged from the army. He is being held for investigation.

GRADUATES AS OBSERVER.

Dick Williams, former employee of the C.G.E. office staff was in the graduating class recently at Rivers, Manitoba, getting his wings as a sergeant-observer. Before enlisting he was a member of the 4th Field Battery, R.C.A. Reserve.

SUPREME COURT.

Mr. Justice Makins is scheduled to preside at the Fall Sessions of the Supreme Court of Ontario in Peterborough on September 14 at the County Court House. The last day for entering cases will be September 8, and it is expected there will be quite a heavy criminal list.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Two fifteen-year-old boys who appeared in juvenile court yesterday were allowed to go on suspended sentence after they had pleaded guilty to serious charges. One of them admitted attempted breaking and entering the wholesale tobacco store of J. W. Steinkrauss on Hunter street and also of breaking and entering and theft at the store of Vernon Fisk, Hunter street and the other pleaded guilty to the Steinkrauss job.

FIVE CENTS A BOTTLE.

Reports reaching the Examiner that some stores were selling chocolate milk in small bottles at seven cents instead of five cents, brought about a survey of the dairies. Chocolate milk is not a carbonated beverage therefore is not taxed, and the price in Peterborough at all stores and refreshment stands should be five cents, not seven. Should the bottle be taken away from the store, the storekeeper may charge for the bottle and refund the money when the bottle is returned.

Fifth Column Rumours Are Circulating

"A ridiculous rumor is being circulated here, apparently started in some of the factories that the Dominion Government is not going to redeem any Victory Bonds or War Saving certificates after September 1," declared a local bank manager to The Examiner yesterday. "There is not the slightest foundation for any such report and any person who circulates it is playing the part of a fifth columnist."

"The Dominion of Canada has never defaulted any of its obligations," he continued, "and has no intention of doing so. Surely Mr. Ilsley made that plain enough in his Sunday broadcast. Victory bonds and war saving certificates have the credit of the entire Dominion behind them and will be taken care of without question. The public should understand that and repudiate any suggestion to the contrary. Whether the rumor started with enemy sympathizers or just through lack of thought on the part of some Canadian citizen, it should be laughed out of court before it does harm to the country's financial program."

Shoe Strike Ends

MONTREAL, Aug. 25.—(CP)—Several thousand Montreal shoeworkers, who went on strike a week ago, went back to their jobs yesterday after an agreement had been reached with the factories involved. Details of the agreement were not announced.

The strike, which at one time threatened to become province-wide and involve 15,000 Quebec shoeworkers, was caused by what was termed as "misunderstanding." Employees complained that they had not been paid a cost-of-living bonus decreed by the regional labor council for shoe industry workers. Employers said that in some cases raises given to workers exceeded the bonus.

Juvenile Driver Cautioned By Magistrate

"I often wonder whether the Ontario Government might not be well advised to raise the age limit for drive's licenses to 20 years," commented Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court Monday afternoon in giving judgment in a case which 18-year-old Leaman Haddesley of Norwood was charged with reckless driving, following a recent accident on the boundary road near Norwood.

Haddlesley was acquitted after a hearing that took most of the day. He was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair while F. D. Kerr, K.C. prosecuted.

The case arose out of a collison between a car driven by Haddlesley and another automobile driven by Walter Gallagher, another young Norwood driver. The latter was backing his car out of a laneway when Haddesley's automobile came along and the two cars came into contact, with the result that Haddesley's machine turned over. Two persons were injured in the crash.

In giving judgment Magistrate Gee declared that there were two classes of drivers who caused the most trouble. "One consisted of thoughtless young drivers in their teens," said the Magistrate 'who forget their own safety and that of their passengers and of others along the highways and drive carelessly and recklessly. The other is composed of men who drink too much and then try to drive."

"It seems to me," he added, "that the Ontario government perhaps made a mistake in making the age limit so low. Some young people do make good drivers but many others are thoughtless and negligent."

Magistrate Gee said that he proposed to dismiss the case against Haddesley on the evidence but he warned the young driver to be careful at the wheel in the future.

Gallagher was fined $10 and $2.50 costs for driving without a license.

Peach Volume Nears Peak At Present Time

Householders are advised that the peach crop will reach its peak this week. George Clarke of National Grocers said today that the public has been co-operating generously with the provincial government and the growers in their purchases of peaches. The crop is heavy, the quality is outstanding and retail prices have been within reasonable brackets.

The people were urged by the Ontario Department of Agriculture to realize that their buying meant the saving of an extremely large crop in the peach district. That appeal has brought effective results up to the present, but there is this week's picking to be disposed of as the harvest passes its peak in volume.

44 Planes Make 9000-Mile Hop

NEW YORK, August 25 —(AP) — In the latest flyaway delivery yet made from the United States to South America, 44 new American-made aircraft have completed a 9,000-mile flight from Hagertown, Md., to Rio De Janeiro to replace obsolete German Focke-Wulfs for training and transport work as the United Nations' newest ally mobilizes for war.

The successful mass flight of 25 Pt-19 trainers and 19 F-24 four-place monoplanes went off "without incident or serious variation" from plan, Col. Armando Ararigbois, Brazilian air attache in Washington, disclosed here yesterday.

Fifty-eight Brazilian officers and men manned the planes on an overland route through Mexico, Central America and across the vast Amazon jungle.

But He Was There

NORWALK, Conn., Aug. 25 — (AP).—In 1917 Benjamin Keeler's chums planned a testimonial dinner when he was about to go into the army, but he got his marching orders two days before the party so it was postponed. The dinner was held last night and most of those who had held reserved seats for 25 years were present. It went off as scheduled except: Keeler, now a middle-aged shoe merchant, had laryngitis and could neither eat the dinner nor deliver the principal address.

Straighter Bread

NEW YORK, August 25—(AP).—A contract providing, among other things, that employees shall slice bread" straighter to conserve food and thus aid the war effort, was signed yesterday on behalf of 8,000 workers in New York cafeterias and self-service restaurants. The agreement, between the Cafeteria Workers' Union (A.F.L.) and the Affiliated Restaurateurs, Inc., provides a $3-a-week wage increase after September 28.

Battled Zero Fighters

Major James V. Edmundson, Santa Monica, Calif., FRONT, and Lieut. Jack Lee, Alamagodoro, N.M., in cockpit of Edmundson's big bomber which was in a dog fight with seven Jap Zero planes over the Solomon Islands. After the smoke of battle had cleared, Edmundson's crew had downed four of the Nip planes while the other three ran for home. The insignia on the side of the bomber denotes one sub sunk off Hawaii months ago.

Violent Storm Rips Lindsay Area

LINDSAY, August 25— (ENS).—Saturday's violent wind and rain storm, which struck this district about six o'clock in the evening, left destruction in its wake. A new barn on the farm of Henry Hartle near the village of Cambray, in Fenelon Township, was struck by lightning and was totally destroyed together with the season's crops. Immediately after the bolt had struck the barn was a blazing inferno, and it was impossible to save anything. The loss is a heavy one as only a small amount of insurance was carried.

The storm was most severe in the northern part of the county where cattle were killed, buildings damaged and trees uprooted. In the village of Fenelon Falls, the tin roof on a tea room was torn off and thrown into the street. Along the lake shore cottages were dislodged from their foundations, and one structure thrown into the lake. On one property near the village twenty-two trees were uprooted and blown down by the force of the storm, which was accompanied by a heavy downpour of hail.

Fractures Back.

At one o'clock on Sunday morning Miss Sylvia Melson of 69 Walmsley Road, Toronto, was brought to the Ross Memorial Hospital from Minden Township, suffering from a broken back. It appears that the young woman, who was holidaying near Gull Lake had fallen from an apple tree. Dr. Jamieson of Minden was summoned, and a call was sent into Lindsay for an ambulance. The driver was unable to reach the scene of the accident, so the injured girl had to be carried a distance of five miles and then down a steep embankment to the shore of Gull Lake, when she was taken by boat to Miner's Bay and then brought to Lindsay. Inquiries at the hospital last night elicited the information that her condition was favorable.

Rambling Reporter

A GOOD IDEA.

One family in town got rather a shock when they landed home from work on Monday. The parents are away holidaying and one of the younger girls is running the house. Through some mix-up about the money left the finances weren't as much as they should have been but this didn't daunt the young lady in charge. A large poster bore the information that it was to be a "This is Europe Week" with accompanying posters around the dining room advancing various ideas for cutting down on the food problem. This is rather a novel idea, and maybe not such a bad one at that.—J.S.

Total Moon Eclipse

Toronto, Aug. 25 (CP)

THE second total eclipse of the moon this year will take place tonight and will be visible in most of the Western Hempishere, observatory officials here said today.

The moon will go into the shadow at 10 p.m. EDT, and the total eclipse will start at 11:01. The moon will not leave the shadow completely until Wednesday at 1:35 a.m. EDT.

The first eclipse this year took place March 2 and was visible only in the northeastern area of Canada. Officials said tonight's eclipse would be exceptionally clear as it would take place near midnight when the light was bright.

Monster Bomber Flies Over To Demonstrate

MONTREAL, August 25—(CP).—First of Britain's mighty four-engined bombers to come to this continent, a giant Avro Lancaster, landed at Dorval Airport here yesterday after a transatlantic flight.

Fresh from the production lines of a British factory the Lancaster was flown from England for demonstration in Canada where the latest edition of this multi-motored bomber will soon be built in quantity for the Royal Air Force.

Captain of the aircraft was Clyde Pangborn, well-known American long-distance flier. He and his crew were welcomed by Marshal Sir Frederick Bowhill, officer commanding the Royal Air Force Ferry Command here.

The Lancaster delivered to Canada yesterday carried full armament—the most formidable yet fitted in any bomber and capable of dealing with at least two enemy fighters attacking simultaneously.

Canadian version of the Lancaster will embody improvements represented in the latest model.

Toronto Man Navigator.

Panghorn's crew included: Captain Newton Collins, Laurel Miss., co-pilot; Ian M. Smith, Toronto, navigator; G. F. Harvey Vancouver, radio officer; E. G. Longley, Winnipeg, flight engineer.

Passengers making the trans-ocean flight were Squadron Leader Russell Felgate R.A.F., representing the British Ministry of Aircraft Production and Flying Officer Ian L. Colquhoun, R.C.A.F., of Edmonton, Alta. who has flown Lancasters in Britain.

Captain Pangborn praised the Lancaster he piloted to Canada, saying: "It handles beautifully — like a much lighter aircraft. It is very manoeuvreable, and it takes off and lands very easily."

He said the Atlantic trip was uneventful.

The aircraft carrying special freight, left Britain with a maximum load of more than 60,000 lbs. and no attempt was made to achieve an unusually fast crossing.

According to recently published statements, the Lancaster carries a bomb load of 8 tons. The bomb compartment 33 feet long, can take the biggest bombs yet devised. It had a top speed of around 300 miles an hour, while its range is 3,000 miles.

The Lancaster is a mid-wing, all-metal monoplane powered by four Rolls-Royce Merlin engines, producing 1,250 horse-power at 12,250 feet with low-gear supercharger and 1,175 horse-power at 21,000 feet with a high-gear supercharger in operation. It has a wing span of 102 feet, is more than 60 feet long and 20 feet high.

Armament is formidable. It has ten machine guns in four turrets in the nose, mid-upper and mid-under and in the tail. The four tail guns are fed by long ammunition tracks extending along the side of the rear fuselage.

All vital parts of the plane are covered by half a ton of armor-plate either as integral parts of the structure or as additional protection.

He Died Trying

NEW YORK, August 25—(AP).—Ten-year-old Saul Cola didn't field a long hit in a sandlot ball game yesterday—but he died trying. Chasing the ball, the boy crashed through a wooden fence bordering a vacant lot and plunged 20 feet to the concrete base of an air shaft. He was dead when teammates reached him.

Big Dahlias Grown By Cobourg Chief Mere Dwarfs Alongside Local Blooms

Reports from Cobourg, that Chief Constable Bill Carey had succeeded in growing a dahlia measuring 8¼ inches in diameter, has brought comments from local citizens and a few policemen to the effect that Cobourg dahlias are merely over-sized morning glories.

Frank Biddle, well known local flower grower handed an Examiner reporter a lovely yellow dahlia this week that measured 9½ inches across the face of the flower, and down at the police station, the officers claim Constable Leo Murphy has a few blooms about that size, too. Provincial Constable Price Morris, an enthusiastic dahlia grower has two blooms in his flower garden at the present time both measuring over 8½ inches. Up on highway 28 at Lakefield, there is a flower garden at one of the homes, which features an unusual display of gorgeous dahlia blooms, all big ones.

Within a week more dahlias will be blooming in local gardens and it is hoped that one at least 11 inches across the face can be recorded. At any rate the members of the local police force are satisfied that Chief Carey, even with the advantage of the milder weather that prevails along the lakefront, must slide into a back seat when it comes to producing dahlias.

Corvettes Guide 200 Ships Across Safely

By FRANK LOWE

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 25—(CP).—Cocky bantamweights with a knockout jolt in either fist are the corvettes of the Royal Canadian Navy.

The corvettes had a chance to deal out a few lethal blows on two-way North Atlantic crossing I have just completed on board these pygmy sub-busters and similar ships of the royal navy. Whether their blows found the mark may never be known, but the crews do know this; they didn't lose a ship.

In the six week of the convoy trip over the sub-haunted Atlantic, the little scrappers helped shepherd nearly 200 merchant ships from port to port.

The first scent of imminent danger to their charges brought an instant rush to come to grips with the suspected enemy. Explosive "ash cans" battered at him from below; Above, guns were manned in the hope he should be hounded to the surface.

But action seemed far off as the voyage started in this harbor. Cloaked in shadows, the corvette looked more like an overgrown tug than a floating bit of sudden death. Her crew, deceptively unwarlike, lounged on deck and talked of everything but sea battles.

When morning came, they were fighting men again. Smartly the corvette swung into her place, last ship in the tight battle line that was setting out to deliver another consignment of the goods.

The navigator conned the ship through the harbor boom and into the Atlantic swells. Outside, everyone knew, submarines were lurking along the route. The signals officer had reports telling of suspected U-boats we would have to pass.

Quickly, he and a sub-lieutenant plotted possible positions of these on the chart and handed it to the skipper, a sun and wind-burned little sea dog from London, England.

His eyes flickered over the chart, and then his attention was caught by the odors drifting to the bridge from the galley. "There was danger ahead, but that could be dealt with as it came. More immediate problems worried the skipper.

Turning to his first officer, he said: Dammit, smells like corned beef and cabbage again today."

Police Shooting Case Hushed

TORONTO, August 25. —(CP) — Attorney-General Gordon Conant said that Inspector W. H. Lougheed of the Provincial Police Investigation into the Hespeler Police Department in response to the Hespeler Council's request to Mr. Conant for the investigation.

Sunday, Chief of Police Thomas Wilson of Hespeler was found dead in bed with a revolver bullet in his heart. Dr. W. G. Hutchison, Hespeler coroner, directed that no inquest would be held.)

Mr. Conant explained he now would discuss the question of the investigation with Provincial Police Commissioner W. H. Stringer and Inspector Lougheed, and will ask the Hespeler Council whether they still want Inspector Lougheed to investigate.

Mr. Conant declined to comment on Police Chief Wilson's death.

Sea Scouts' Boat To Be Christened

Boy Scouts and Sea Scouts from all troops in the city along with officials of the Scout Association in this district plan to attend the christening of a boat, for the 10th Peterborough Troop, Sea Scouts, St. James, next Monday night.

This craft, which is essential to proper training of the boys in Sea Scout work, is a remodelled lifeboat, rigged for sail like a cutter, and the christening will take place at the T-wharf on Crescent Street, the first ceremony to take place at this spot since the wharf was built a few years ago.

Stanley Leggitt, scoutmaster of this troop of Sea Scouts, stated today that the ceremony will start at 8 o'clock sharp on Monday, and besides the christening there will be presentation of 2nd class badges, and swimmers' badges, both of which must be held by the Scouts before they can undertake boat training.

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark., Aug. 25—(AP).—R. H. Barnett reasoned that burglars would not look in his kitchen stove so he hid the family's $102.66 savings there for the summer. Recently he fired up the stove and forgot to remove the money. He salvaged only the 66 cents in silver.

Business Man Fined For Insurance Slip

The head of the Peterborough Unemployment Insurance Office, Mr. Wm. Mellis, wishes to draw attention of employers here to a recent infringement of regulations of the Unemployment Insurance Act, so that such a thing may be avoided here.

E. B. Moyer, owner of a French Dry Cleaning business in Montreal was fined $50 on each of 23 charges of violating the act. This meant an outlay of $1,150.

The accused had failed to affix unemployment insurance stamps to his employees' insurance books within 72 hours after the completion of his payroll period in accordance with the act.

To date there has been the odd case come to court in different cities just where the employer has been a little negligent. It is hoped that this warning will serve as a reminder, Mr. Mellis said, to anyone who may have slipped a bit.

Old Original Of 2nd John Allen Dies

One of Peterborough's oldest soldiers, John Allen, who served in the army for 35 years in more wars than most people like to think of, and who was one of the originals of 2nd Battalion C.E.F. serving under the late Major George Bennett, passed away Monday in his 72nd year.

Q.M.S. Allen served 3½ years in the South African War and four years in the Great War. His soldiering took him to many parts of the globe and he did duty in Malta, India and England. For 31 years he was attached to the Imperial army and spent four years in the Canadian army, and was one of the few originals of the 2nd Battalion to survive. Mr. Allen was with General Baden-Powell in Africa when he first originated the Scouts and for a short time he was Scout Master of the Sacred Heart Cubs.

This man was the proud possessor of five medals which were: two South African medals with six bars; the Mons Star, Long Service and Great War medals. After the war, Mr. Allen returned to Peterborough where he worked for ten years on the Trent Canal. Since that time he has made his home with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Prindible, 554 Park street south.

He was a staunch adherent of the Sacred Heart Church and his death will be mourned by his many friends and associates. He was also a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Holy Name Society and the Altar Society.

Mr. Allen was born in Cardiff, Wales, and surviving him is one daughter, Mrs. William Prindible of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place Thursday at 8.45 from the Bert Duffus Funeral Home to the Church of the Sacred Heart for Requiem Mass at 9 a.m. Interment will be in St. Peter's Cemetery.

a partner that will toss the ball back to you.

Also, wives like to feel that their husbands share their thoughts with them and that they have a part in their plans and ambitions, and that their husbands consider them sufficiently intelligent to be consulted about their business problems. So it's a blow to a wife's vanity when a husband never talks anything over with her, and she knows no more of what he thinks and is doing than a stranger.

So it must be admitted that the great silent man, although a picturesque figure in novels and the movies, is considerable of a bore as a husband, for not many women can get a thrill from gazing across a dinner table, day after day, at a graven image that never opens its mouth except to put food in it, or spending their evenings with a husband who does not even toss them a kind word now and then, as you'd throw a bone to a hungry dog.

Want To Rest Vocal Chords.

The men's side of the question is that all day long they've had to argue and persuade, try to sell people things they didn't want, attempt to make themselves interesting and agreeable, and that they are fed up to their teeth on talk and want nothing so much as to give their vocal cords a rest. That is why, when they come home at night, they retire behind their newspapers, and their wives can't get a syllable out of them with a corkscrew.

Some men claim that the reason they do not talk at home is because they cannot say anything without starting something. Others insist they are silent because they've never had a chance to get a word in edgewise since their wedding day, while still others contend that the least said, the soonest mended, that wives never forget, and that if a husband is foolish enough to tell his wife of any mistake he has made he never hears the last of it.

Be these things as they may there is a dearth of gay and agreeable conversation in the home, and the only solution of the problem is for the man who doesn't like to talk to pick out a monologuist for a wife.

Budget Your Spending to End Money Worries

Find Out Where the Money Goes

Reading about the things you'd like to have, but never getting them! That may be true of you if you don't budget your money.

For, unless you plan your spending, so many upsets occur. You "forgot" the furnace might need repairs—and the bill swallows all the money you'd set aside for new sofa or new coat!

With your income divided to take care of such expenses, you aren't in perpetual hot water.

As you learn what percentage of your income you should give to each item you may find, too, you have more money than you thought.

How much should clothes cost for family of four with a weekly income of $45? Allot about $5 a week. Take periodic inventory, seeing what can be revived with new accessories, repairs, clever alterations.

The grocery bill stays down when you set aside a definite sum for each day's supplies, buy fruit and vegetables in season.

Months when expenses are smaller than usual, don't splurge with all that's left over. Save for months with heavy expenses.

Budget to get the most for your money! Our 32-page booklet explains in detail how to budget your income. Gives tips on shopping, how to save for big items. Has helpful ruled pages for a year's accounts.

For your copy of "How to Budget and Buy for Better Living" send 15 cents in coins or stamps to The Peterborough Examiner, Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

PREFER ONE CHANCE

IN PLANNING the play of a hand, you may see two alternative moves to gain tricks, each of which is an even money or 50-50 chance. But, if one of those chances, in case it succeeds, will produce only about one trick gain and the other can be worth several tricks, if it works, there is not much argument about which to choose. Furthermore, the situation may be such that, after trying one chance, you may still attempt the other, whereas trying them in reverse order may not be possible.

After North had cue-bid the clubs of the opponents, his Blackwood 4-No Trumps asked South how many aces he held in the other three suits. So North knew the 5-Diamonds response to show one ace indicated it was not in clubs and therefore had to be the spade top. As it was, however, North gave his partner a tough playing job to do, one which he could not accomplish.

South ruffed the opening club K in dummy and led to the spade A, so he could try the diamond finesse, which lost. The club return was ruffed in dummy, the diamond A and Q cashed for a heart discard, the heart A played and a heart ruffed, then a third club ruffed and a second heart. South scored two high trumps then, but had to give up the club Q at the end, being down one.

Safer play was available—a lead toward the heart Q after trumps were out. South, after ruffing the opening club K, could have taken the spade A and K, then led a small heart, hoping East had the K, an even chance, which would have worked. East would not have dared return a diamond, so would have chosen a club for another ruff in dummy. Then a heart to the Q, a diamond to the A, refusing the finesse, the heart A dropping the J, and additional hearts for discard of all losers in his own hand, would have made the contract. Even if the heart play had failed, the diamond finesse could still have been tried, whereas the contrary order could not have been essayed.

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts), Aug. 25 (AP)—DNB reported today that the German air force raided Derby, Ipswich and Great Yarmouth last night.

NEED MORE MONEY

CANBERRA, Australia, Aug. 25.—(CP).—Prime Minister John Curtin announced today that the Commonwealth Government had decided to float a £100,000,000 ($355,000,000) loan before the end of the year.

Got a Two-Bagger In His First Try

Lovingly fondling a clip of ammunition here is a Canadian sergeant (name unrevealed) who had the unusual experience of bagging two German JU-52's on his first operation flight in the North African desert. Activity in this area is now almost entirely confined to the air, with Allied planes continuing to harass Axis supply lines.

Ottawa Warning Rumor Mongers

OTTAWA, August 25 — (CP). — The Wartime Prices and Trade Board figuratively took off the kid gloves Monday and in a bluntly-worded statement warned that action will be taken against persons spreading false rumors of prospective rationing.

Asserting "we can give positive assurance that no critical shortage of any essential of life is in sight," Board Chairman Donald Gordon characterized the false reports as "defintely subversive, often causing runs on existing supplies and needlessly complicating the difficult task of equitable distribution."

"Such rumors," he said, "are often inspired by people who hope to obtain advantage out of them, and unthinking persons spread them without realizing the damage they are doing.

"Any one who rushes around trying to acquire a hoard of this or that may be rated, in my opinion, as a fifth-rate citizen. I am sure no right-thinking Canadian seriously means to let greed over-rule his decent instincts.

"It is the duty of all citizens in this period of emergency to act honorable and to refrain from trying to steal an advantage over others."

In future, the Board would decline comment on any rumors of rationing and would bend every effort to punish those responsible for spreading "these mischievous stories."

Mr. Gordon did not mention any specific commodities which had been falsely mentioned as likely to be rationed, but in the last few weeks it has been reported from various sources —and vigorously denied by the Board —that soap, butter and clothing would be placed on the ration list, along with sugar, tea and coffee.

Switch Is No Reflection On Auck.

PRETORIA, South Africa, August 26—(CP-Reuters) —Great offensives by the United Nations in 1943 were forecast in a speech yesterday by Prime Minister Gen. Jan Smuts who told of his recent meeting with Prime Minister Churchill in Egypt.

"We had the opportunity to go very thoroughly into the whole war position," Gen. Smuts said. "We've reached the state in the war when our whole position has to be most carefully reviewed and we want to see what can be done this year and what can be done for the great offensives next year."

Changes in the Egyptian command are no reflection on the men concerned, he added. "It's not a question of commanders or personalities —they may be the ablest men in the world—but we must plan for victory. Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck is one of the ablest commanders I ever met but that doesn't mean he is the best man to win the victory in North Africa."

Plane Riding Police

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25—(AP). —An international police force, armed with vast fleets of long-range planes, was foreseen Sunday by Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore bomber builder, as "the only method of keeping the world in order after the war." Production of fighting aircraft won't cease when the peace is signed, he said in an interview, "for we'll need the ever-present threat of sudden attack to keep would-be aggressors in line."

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 25 —(AP).—The "long-range view" of this global war already is focussed on the Thanksgiving turkey situation for United States troops in Australia. The turkey population of Australia has been found inadequate and arrangements have been made to have refrigerated cargo shipped here from the United States. Christmas turkeys will arrive on the same ship.

National Registration Of Women

A national registration of all women in Canada, to be carried out by age groups over the next few months, was announced Friday by Mrs. Rex Eaton, assistant director of National Selective Service. First of the registrations to cover the age group between 20 and 24 inclusive would be taken during the week starting September 14. Registrations of further groups would continue during the next few months, the announcement said.

Basic plan of the registration ould be that women would be registered in each group and then called up for interview as to their willingness to go into industry or commerce, to ascertain their abilities and qualifications and to suggest where they could best serve the war effort. Single women would be urged to seek war work before the interviewers endeavored to persuade married women to enter industry, Mrs. Eaton stressed.

"Correspondence has revealed that there are countless women in Canada who are eager to aid the war effort," said Mrs. Eaton, "but who today do not know just how they can get into industry, how they can be trained or what they are actually capable of doing. Although the registration will be compulsory, it will be only to ascertain where the women are, who they are and from that information give us an opportunity of suggesting to them where they can be of greatest assistance.

Although this registration would not cover employed women who complied with the compulsory registration in May, 1942, a later call-up for interview in localities where manpower shortages develop would be applicable to all women in the various age groupings, Mrs. Eaton explained. No person should apply for an interview until notified by the employment office.

The later interview would be of a persuasive nature, designed to draw able, unemployed women and women working in non-essential industries into war industries to meet the constantly increasing manpower shortage.

Mrs. Eaton made it clear that although the developments of war may yet make it necessary for the Federal Government to set aside the present voluntary basis of work for women, there is no intention of using compulsion for women except in cases of extreme malingering.

There can be no hedging the fact that shortages of manpower for essential Canadian war industries are becoming increasingly difficult to meet, and women must realize that they are now the vital element in turning out, maintaining and increasing production of the lethal weapons which must be supplied if the war is to be won by the Allies, declared the Director of Women.

"I am convinced," she said, "that women are ready to be told where they can best serve. As director of Canada's womanpower I urge every woman to register as quickly as possible when her classification comes, to give the government the essential inventory it needs of Canada's labor supply."

His Luck Ran Out

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 25—(CP Cable). The story of a Canadian army corporal who "gate-crashed" the Dieppe raid and returned uninjured, only to die as the result of a road accident the following day was told Monday at an inquest in a south coast town.

The soldier was Cpl. Victor Samuel Allen, 21, of Fairport, Ont., a former customs clerk. He joined the Dieppe raid by posing as a member of a field ambulance unit and took part in the heavy street fighting, escaping unscratched. Some time later he was a passenger in an army vehicle with other Canadians. The machine overturned and Allen received multiple injuries.

Seymour Women Planning Fall Activities

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25 (ENS). —A complete report on their annual lawn social was presented by the secretary to members of the Seymour West branch of the Women's Institute, when they met for their regular meeting at Mrs. Alex. Green's on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Fred McCulloch, who gave the statement of the social, revealed the branch would clear $171.50 on the affair, this being approximately $50 more than they realized from the 1941 social.

Campbellford's fall fair being little more than a month away the branch felt it was time to decide just what should be done in the way of special prizes in the women's section this year. Something that would tie in with the war effort appeared to be the obvious choice so they announced their intention of giving three prizes for baking without sugar—$2, $1.50 and $1. Each entry will include a pie, a cake and one kind of cookies with the recipe attached.

Girls' club work will command a greater amount of attention from the branch this fall. They named Mrs. Harry Hoard as honorary leader and Misses Constance McKelvie and Carolyn Archer as leaders. As a part of the Institute's war work this fall it was decided to include a quota of ditty bags for the Navy League.

Though it was Girls' Club Day at the Institute one of the interesting parts of the program was provided by a versatile entertainer, Mr. Kris Graeme of Toronto. The girls demonstrated one of their sewing projects which included house costs and pyjamas together with their work book, both of which proved interesting. Only other item on the program, which was in charge of Miss Carolyn Archer, was a contest.

Labor Is Prepared To Do Its Share

WINNIPEG, August 25 — (CP).— Labor must continue to make every effort to ensure victory and play its part in the establishment of a just and permanent peace, said the annual report of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress executive council, presented at the 58th annual convention here today.

Signed by Tom Moore of Ottawa, President, and other council officers, the report said that in order to speed victory "it has sometimes been necessary for those who toil to sacrifice many of their hard-won rights and privileges, and the executive has continued to fight against exploitation of the workers rights in the name of patriotism."

About 300 delegates from across Canada, representing 2,000 affiliated local unions, Trades and Labor Councils and Provincial Federations of Labor, attended the opening sessions. With 275 resolutions submitted by affiliates to be considered, the convention was expected to last throughout the week.

The executive said the Congress mad made clear it was ready to cooperate with the Federal Government in establishing better relations between employers and employees to ensure uninterrupted supplies "of the sinews of war and of home requirements."

Railway Cars Wrecked In Red Army Surprise Attack

Red army men left this railroad depot in a hurry because of the swift Nazi advance in that section and left behind them a huge supply train. The Russians, who are masters of the scorched earth technique, in a surprise counter-attack, carried out the complete destruction of the station and the rolling stock, leaving in the hands of the Nazis nothing but smouldering ruins. Germans are shown here re-entering the yards after the Russians had left the cars in ruins or afire.

Rome Jittery At Ship Massings

Say Transports Fill Gibraltar W. African Ports

BERNE, Aug. 26—(AP). — The Rome correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve said today that reports of Allied concentrations of transports and warships at Gibraltar and West African ports were current in Italy, where they were interpreted as possible preparations for opening a second front.

The correspondent said that "these considerable concentrations," according to views held in Rome, might be intended as reinforcements for Atlantic convoys, but it is also thought possible that they are destined for use in a surprise attack in the Mediterranean Basin similiar to that at Dieppe."

Tre correspondent said Italians are pointing to French Tunisia as "the most exposed point" in the Mediterranean and asserting that "Anglo-Saxon enterprises against French possessions have succeeded very well." (The reference presumably is to the occupation of Syria.)

The writer said an Allied attack on Tunisia would put Allied forces at the back of the Axis armies in Egypt.

Other Mediterranean areas, he continued, are considered well prepared against "all eventualities." He recalled a recent declaration by Premier Mussolini at Gorizia that the occupied Yugoslav coast was no longer a weak point where the enemy could attempt to open a second front.

EXTRA!

WASHINGTON—(AP)— Damaging of six more Japanese ships in the great sea and air battle for the Solomon islands was announced by the United States Navy in a communique which said that the results of the fight to date "are encouraging."

Italian Convoys Bolster Rommel

ROME (From Italian broadcasts), Aug. 26—(AP).—The Italian high command asserted today that German fighter planes beat off a British bombing attack on an Italian convoy in the Mediterranean but acknowledged that an Italian submarine had failed to return to its base.

(This was the second day the Italian communique told of British air attacks on Italian Mediterranean convoys, possibly indicating persistent Axis efforts to strengthen Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's North Africa forces despite steady British attack).

On the Egyptian desert front, more frequent artillery firing and an increase in air activity were reported by the Italian communique. Three British planes were claimed shot down over the desert and one in the convoy attack.

Flight-Lieut. Gerald Wooll Interned In Neutral Country Following Aerial Activity

Peterborough's top-ranking flier in the Royal Air Force, Flight-Lieut. Gerald A. Wooll, has been interned in a neutral country and is safe and well, following aerial activity.

FLIGHT-LIEUT. WOOLL

This heartening message was received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wooll, 517 Sherbrooke street late on Tuesday evening, from the officer commanding the unit in which Wooll was serving. First it was reported by cable that he was missing, but sharp on the heels of the first cable came the second message to relieve the fears and grief of his loved ones in this city.

"Gerry" Wooll, a graduate of the Collegiate is 28 years of age, and his career since joining the R.A.F. on July 13, 1939, six weeks before war broke out, has been heart-warming to his host of friends in this city. His first bid for fame came early in the war when he was credited with destroying an enemy U-boat while on coastal reconnaissance over the North Sea. In January of 1941 he was back in Canada, and soon after that his parents learned he had piloted a few four-motored bombers across the Atlantic. He left Canada in July 1941.

Served in Bomber Command

He has been shifted to various branches of the fighting units, serving for a time in the Bomber Command, and in April of this year he was promoted to the rank of Flight-Lieutenant. On July 16, he officiated at the presentation of the mobile kitchen provided by students of the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School, for the city of Peterborough in England.

Flight-Lt. Wooll made the official presentation acting for the secretary to the High Commissioner, the Hon. Vincent Massey. A clipping from the Peterborough, England newspaper describing the interesting ceremony was handed the Examiner a few days ago by Gordon Monkman, and it reads in part: "The actual handing over of the keys was done by Flight-Lieut. Wooll, a former pupil, who flew from his base to Peterborough for the occasion. It happened that just as Flight-Lieut. Wooll took his seat on the platform he recognized a Canadian Highlander, Sergt. A. Watson of the Glengarrians, who was recruited in Peterborough, Ontario, and who was at the Collegiate and Vocational School in his year. A word to the town clerk, and Sgt. Watson was soon conducted to a place of honor among his fellow past students.

"Flight-Lieut. Wooll before handing the Mayor the keys, said he hoped the gift would give pleasure to the City and bring comfort to those who might need it, as it had given pleasure to the pupils of his old school to provide it."

Received Letters

On Tuesday his parents received two letters from him, and in one of them he told of starting to organize an orchestra in Britain. Thus even in wartime, this man remembered his peacetime hobby, and hoped to get an orchestra together in his new surroundings. For years Gerry Wooll's orchestra played to city and district dance crowds, notably at Port Hope, Lakefield and Peterborough. He, while directing the musical unit played saxophone. After graduating from the P.C.V.S. he obtained employment in the C.G.E. working in the refrigerator unit.

His father, Charles Wooll, is employed as carpenter with the Peterborough Utilities, and this morning, with lines of worry creasing his brow for his only son, voiced his appreciation at the careful manner in which

Chinese Nearing Biggest Air Bases

CHUNGKING, Aug. 26—(AP).—The Japanese were reported today to be still drawing in their forces toward Nanchang, the big invasion base in Kiangsi Province, as the Chinese announced the recapture of Tungsiang, 50 miles to the southeast.

Tungsiang, which Chinese reports said was reoccupied Monday, became the 11th important point in East China regained by the Chinese in the one week since the invasion tide began receding in that area.

In Chekiang Province, the Chinese were said now to be close to Chuhsien and some quarters here confidently waited news that Chuhsien and Lishui, both potential "bomb Japan" bases, were back in Chinese hands.

Chuhsien is the site of the biggest air base in China. At one time 200,000 coolies labored to build the great field.

Fear of attacks on Japan from Chuhsien was presumed to have been the chief reason for the invaders' recent drives in the East.

Lishui, whose field is China's second largest, was reported by the Chinese last night already under siege.

Amphibian Tanks

LONDON, Aug. 26—(CP Cable).—British tanks landed last week in the Canadian-led assault on Dieppe were of an 'amphibian type,' the German radio said today according to Reuters News Agency.

One Nazi commander described them as "40-ton tanks of the most modern type." British authorities did not permit the disclosure of the type of tank used in stories dealing with the raid.

Secret Weapon Due To Prove Shock For Huns

LONDON, August 26 — (CP). — Brig.-Gen. G. M. Barnes head of the United States Army Ordnance mission, said to-day the British and Americans both are producing a secret weapon which will prove "a great surprise" to the Germans.

Speaking after a tour of British munitions factories, he declared that United States and British armament production is sufficient both in quality and quantity for "the support of a full-sized army in any enterprise."

Gen. Barnes said some of the new British weapons now in production are "real eye-openers."

The General, 56, is chief of the U.S. War Department Design Section and an expert on the design and manufacture of heavy ordnance particularly anti-aircraft guns. He arrived in London recently at the head of a technical mission to work with the British authorities in correlating Allied fighting material.

The type of the new secret weapon was not hinted.

"A three-week tour of British factories has convinced me that America has a lesson to learn in the employment of women in munitions making," the General said at a press conference.

"We employ women, but we are going to have to employ many more. The British are using women in tasks such as boring guns, which in the United States is done only by skilled mechanics."

Women Making 80 Per Cent.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Supply, under whose auspices the General came to Britain, interrupted to say that in production of certain parts of a new British anti-tank gun 80 per cent of the work was done by women.

The spokesman said the Ministry is considering sending a group of British munitions workers to the United States to instruct American women in certain types of work.

British and United States ordnance already is rapidly being coordinated so that it can be used in-

14 Of 15 Aboard Are Victims As Huge Flying Boat Piles Up Bound For Iceland

Duke In War Role On Inspection Staff Work
First Royal Family Air Victim
Craft Hits Peak—Rear Gunner Alone Lives

LONDON, Aug. 26—(CP).—All Britain, where the grievous message "killed on active service" has darkened countless households, offered understanding sympathy today to the Royal Family, bereaved by the death of the Duke of Kent, the King's youngest brother, on a wartime mission.

The Duke, fifth in succesion to the throne, died in the line of duty yesterday when the Sunderland flying boat which was taking him to Iceland for the Royal Air Force crashed in northern Scotland.

Circumstances surrounding the crash of the four-engined, 20-ton flying boat were held in strict secrecy but an authoritative source said it was in no way due to enemy action.

Fourteen of the 15 persons in the plane were killed and their bodies recovered. The only survivor was the rear gunner.

The plane was believed to have crashed against a mountain.

The Lord Chamberlain announced that by command of the King the court would remain in mourning four weeks.

Among those in the plane was Michael Strutt, the Duke's aide and son of Lord Belper. He is survived by his widow, the former Arielle Frazer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Washington Frazer of Detroit.

The last immediate member of the Royal Family killed on active service was Prince Maurice Victor Donald of Battenburg grandson of Queen Victoria, and a second cousin of the Duke of Kent, killed in Scotland yesterday.

Prince Maurice was killed October 27, 1914. He was a lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps.

At first it was believed a century had elapsed since a member of the Royal Family had been killed on active service, but the Buckingham Palace Press Office turned up the case of Prince Maurice after a check of the records.

An Air Ministry investigation has been launched into the crash, which occurred in desolate country about 60 miles from the takeoff. Press reports said it was in an area where other planes have been wrecked. Semi-official sources emphasized that the pilot was one of the most capable in the R.A.F.

The 39-year-old youngest son of Queen Mary and the late King George V. was the most air-minded of all the Royal Family.

Began as Naval Cadet

His career in Britain's service began as a naval cadet, at his father's choice, before he was 14. But his interest turned to aviation and he served devotedly with the R.A.F.

Small Ship Loss

LONDON, August 26—(CP Cable)—The Dieppe raid, in which the losses of ships from air attack were small, emphasized the importance of adequate naval and air cover, it was said authoritatively today.

Canadian With A Bren

London, Aug. 26 (CP Cable)

TWO Focke-Wulf 190's destroyed by ground defences during a raid on a south coast town today were reported shot down by a sergeant using a Bren gun, firing from the hip in Commando style. The raiders were flying so low that one of them rolled over on its back and crashed immediately after the sergeant opened fire. The identity of the marksmen was not disclosed. One report described the sergeant as a Canadian who was quoted as saying, "They were flying so low I couldn't miss them and when I opened fire one turned on its back and fell."

Demons Get Two In Night Swoop

By LOUIS HUNTER

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP Cable)—The Demon sqquadron of the R.C.A.F. bombed and damaged two enemy ships in a moonlight attack on a convoy off the Frisian islands last night.

All aircraft returned safely after a brush with Nazi fighters protecting the convoy.

Wing Cmdr. A. C. Brown of Winnipeg led the attack against the convoy, which consisted of four supply ships and five anti-aircraft vessels. The raid was executed in the face of intense flak from the escort ships and opposition of night fighters, R.C.A.F. headquarters announced.

As Brown swept down to bomb one of the ships, he saw a large column of smoke nearly 500 feet high pouring from a boat which had been attacked a few minutes earlier by PO. Gord Walsh of Victoria. After Brown's attack another column of smoke rose from the convoy.

Walsh's navigator, PO. K. S. Goodman of Edmonton, said one of that

Running Tank Battle On Before City

Nazi Van 25 Miles Off Claims City Afire; Siege About To Begin

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, Aug. 26 —(AP)—Two successive German thrusts through Russians lines between the Don and Volga placed Stalingrad today in immediate peril of siege.

As the German tanks and other armored machines lunged ahead, thousands of workers from Stalingrad factories took up arms on the highest west bank of the Volga to help the Red Army defend the great industrial city.

German vanguards had reached the flat, sandy plain extending to the Volga just northwest of Stalingrad and Russian tanks were fighting them in running battle, bringing them to at least a temporary halt.

A Vichy radio broadcast said today German forces had consolidated positions in the Don-Volga corridor area for a frontal attack on Stalingrad and the advance guard of a correlated drive from the southwest was within less than 25 miles of that city.

The German high command claimed today a great fire is raging in Stalingrad and the city has been pounded day and night by the German air force with high explosive and incendiary bombs.

The German war bulletin again reported that Nazi Alpinists had stormed passes high in the Caucasus mountains against fierce Russian opposition.

Defenders of Stalingrad killed 1,350 Germans and blasted 53 tanks out of action in three engagements yesterday, the Soviet information bureau said, and destroyed 92 planes of the bombers, fighters and aerial troop carriers which have swarmed against them in the last two days.

Still the Germans and their Axis allies—estimated at from 80 to 100 divisions—maintained the offensive in the attempt to seize industrial areas on the lower Volga, slash Caspian shipping routes and isolate the Caucasus.

Old Tea, Sugar Coupons Good

TORONTO, August 26 — (CP).— Although new ration books have been issued, coupons on temporary ration cards issued July 1 are still valid representatives of the ration section of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced here today.

Officials said many card holders had thought temporary card coupons expired on August 24.

The ABCDE coupons for tea and coffee were valid on and after August 3 and could be used any time. Sugar ration coupons were valid on successive dates, the last becoming valid on August 24, but could be used any time after that date, ration officers explained.

Officials said no provisions would be made for farmers obtaining extra tea and coffee to serve help engaged in threshing but that extra sugar would be provided.

Solomon Victory to Sway Pacific Tide

Tokyo Risking Fleet Hoping to be Clear for Knockout Blow With Hitler

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Today in the far southwestern Pacific among the Solomon Islands Allied and Japanese forces are locked in a great sea and air conflict.

A Japanese victory might take the Nipponese a long way towards achievement of their announced ambition of dictating peace in Washington. That would mean the transfer to this continent of the torture chamber, the wholesale murders and rapings and the insufferable militaristic repression which exceeds even Hitlerism in its brutal arrogance.

This is indeed a fateful moment for the Allies. Not only is the wheel of fortune whirring in the Orient, but over in the [illegible] Russian theatre Hitler is throwing into the decisive battle of the Caucasus every ounce of striking power he possesses in an effort to make a kill. The position of the Red armies is one of dire peril, though it isn't by any means hopeless.

In perhaps eight weeks or so that wheel of fortune will stop spinning and the little ball will drop to tell us what our luck may be. Our great concern, of course, is Hitler. He must be stopped before snow flies. If we can keep him away from fresh resources and preserve the Red fighting machine from destruction, then we shall have our grasp on sure victory, for we can handle the Japanese once we have stopped Hitler.

Still, the Japanese and the Germans can't be considered as separate units at this juncture. The battle of the Caucasus and the battle of the Solomons are interlocking in their effect.

We haven't enough facts about the engagement in the Pacific to say that it will have decisive effects. We don't know the size of the forces engaged and that is essential to our calculations.

However, from the meagre information at hand it would appear that the Nipponese are gambling with a large section of their grand fleet.

If the Japs are risking a great naval fleet, besides air power, then we have in the conflict all the elements for decision which may be a sure guide to the outcome of the war with Japan.

The United States appears to have the advantage of being able to meet the Japanese warships with land-based bombers, and that in itself might spell disaster for the Mikado's forces.

If America can inflict on the Japanese a further heavy naval loss without itself suffering severely, then she probably shall have settled the supremacy of the Pacific in the Allies' favor. That won't be one but

Convict 1,200 of War Crimes

U.S. Rounds Up 48 Spies, Interns 3,401 Aliens

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—As the United States approaches its ninth month of war nearly 1,200 persons have been convicted of various subversive and disloyal activities, an Associated Press roundup of wartime crimes against the nation showed.

In this period six Nazi saboteurs were electrocuted, one man was sentenced to hang, and scores more were imprisoned for terms running from life to a few years.

Of the total convictions thus far, 48 were for espionage, 10 for sabotage, and nine persons were found guilty as agents of hostile powers. During the past 30 days, 84 persons were either convicted or faced trial on charges of espionage, sedition or other offences.

Since the start of the war 10,211 enemy aliens have been apprehended, of whom 3,401 were ordered interned, 2,348 paroled and 872 released. Hundreds of cases are still pending. Denaturalization proceedings have been instituted against more than 100 persons.

Gangland Uses The Eclipse

Shoot Victim as Moon Darkens, City Tries Blackout

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP).—Gangland guns found two unwitting allies last night when under the double cover of a city-wide blackout and a lunar eclipse they spurted death from a speeding automobile that escaped in the confusion of darkness and wailing police sirens.

Four bullets fired from the car felled Salvatore Maggio, 36-year-old suit presser, as he stood near his parked automobile on a Brooklyn street at 9:23 p.m.—just two minutes before an army-ordered air raid alert set sirens awail.

Police cars were shrilling the warning for the surprise raid alert test when they received the alarm for the murder car, while at 9:01 p.m. the earth's shadow had begun blotting out the moon, almost as if in conspiracy with the slayers.

With pedestrians running for shelter, and both man-made and heavenly night blanking out rapidly, police missed the killers' sedan.

The 50-minute practice air alert was the longest the city has undergone.

JAPANESE RISKING LARGE PART OF FLEET IN SOLOMONS BATTLE

Commando Wears Souvenir

A British commando returns to England with a German helmet on his head as a memento of the greatest British commando raid to date. The raid on Dieppe was covered by British ships and planes. Canadians, British and a detachment of U.S. Rangers participated. Picture was taken as the returning commandos pulled up at a British quayside.

Capt. Whitaker Safe After Dieppe

Capt. Denis Whitaker, grandson of the late W. H. Moore, K.C., of Peterborough, who was prominent for a number of years on the Utilities Commission, went into battle at Dieppe with his regiment, the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, carrying the picture of his 19 months old baby daughte Gail, who was born after he left Canada. He was at the head of Canadian troops in a bayonet charge through the streets of Dieppe, and he returned safely to Britain.

"Best ishes on your first birthday, hope to be with you on your second—Daddy." That was the message he cabled his baby daughter, whom he has never seen, on her first birthday seven months ago. The Whitakers had but a few short months together before war came. Capt. Whitaker went overseas eight months after his marriage to Miss Juanita Bergey.

Hepburn Fears Russia Failing

FORT WILLIAM, Aug. 26 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario said in a speech here today that "I doubt if Russia can hold out much longer. The Germans are already into the second oil field."

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the Fort William Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hepburn said all that was necessary for Hitler to do now in Russia was 'hold tight."

"He's got them cut off from fuel, from steel and from food." Mr. Hepburn said the day might come when German troops would sweep through Iraq and Iran and pincer the United Nations troops in Egypt.

England's position would be "infinitely worse in a few months" when German planes were released from the eastern front to return to the bombing of England.

Turning to domestic politics, Mr. Hepburn said:

"I would like to ask Mr. King (Prime Minister Mackenzie King) the question: Are you doing your share? And if he gave me an honest answer, he would say, 'No.' No, because he's too influenced by the people who are not fighting this war."

Mr. Hepburn said he agreed "entirely" with Attorney General Gordon Conant in his announced declaration that no longer would Ontario co-operate with the department of justice in enforcement of sections of the Defence of Canada Regulations, dealing with subversive speeches.

"I would have gone much stronger than the attorney general," said Mr. Hepburn. "I would have named Quebec. I would have said there is one brand of justice for Ontario and one brand of justice for Quebec.

(Mr. Conant in his statement, said there was lack of uniformity among provinces in the administration of the regulations.)

Returning according to schedule, British commandos, faces still blackened, are pictured in this quayside shot as they returned from their historic raid on German-held Dieppe.

Second Battle Of Solomons Increases In Fury As Japs Rush More Ships

Tokyo Risking Big Portion Of Fleet Trying To Grab Back Stolen Bases, 2 Carriers, Many Warships Damaged

By JOHN W. WIGGINS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 (AP).—The battle of the Solomons apparently was raging with increased fury and in a widening area today as the Japanese rushed reinforcements for an armada seeking to recapture American-held shore bases.

Locked in sea and air engagements which may possibly determine naval supremacy of the Pacific, American forces inflicted severe damage on enemy warships and planes in the southeastern group of the Solomons while about 450 miles west Allied planes from Australia headquarters smashed at an eastbound Japanese convoy.

The entire picture of the spreading conflict was far from complete but scattered reports from the navy here and from Australian headquarters made it clear that Japan was risking a heavy portion of its fleet in a desperate effort to dislodged American marines from their hard-won positions in the Solomons.

The counter-attack, fully expected by the United States Navy, already has brought bombing or torpedoing of more than half a dozen Japanese ships in the Solomons plus the strafing of two transports and destruction of a gunboat off southeastern New Guinea.

2 Carriers Hit

The damaged vessels included one large and one small aircraft carrier. Only eight carriers were known to have been part of the enemy fleet before the war, although others may have been added secretly. Six Japanese carriers were sunk in previous actions, including four in the Midway battle, one probably destroyed, and three others damaged there and off the Aleutian islands.

Additional punishment in the Solomons battle was inflicted by Allied carrier-based planes on a Japanese battleship and several cruisers. Aircraft left another enemy cruiser and transport in flames.

Thus far there have been no reports on the extent of American losses beyond the minor damage suffered at the opening of the conflict on Aug. 23, when 21 Japanese planes were listed as destroyed in an attack on Guadalcanal island.

Horse Disease Blamed In Tots' Death

LINDSAY, Ont., August 26 —(CP). — Diagnosed at first as acute intestinal intoxication the disease which caused the deaths on Sunday of two small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Armstrong of Lindsay, has now been identified as encephalitis it was announced here on Tuesday following an autopsy.

Dr. George Hall, the family physician, said encephalitis, which affects the brain may be caused by an association with horses.

Monday night nine-year-old Ralph Armstrong, brother of the dead girls was taken to hospital in Toronto for observation and treatment when he showed unfavorable symptoms.

Physicians, as a precautionary measure, have fumigated the former farmhouse of the Armstrong's and their Lindsay home.

Dr. Bernard T. McGhie Deputy Minister of Health and Hospitals for Ontario, is reviewing reports of health inspectors who investigated. He said the disease does not appear related to the epidemic of encephalitis in Manitoba last year.

Expect Magazine Prices Up, Lid Off

OTTAWA August 26—(CP). — Wartime Prices and Trade Board officials said to-day that United States publications, in some cases available to Canadians at lower prices than in the country of publications, would be able to increase their Dominion rates under a board order issued to-day.

The order exempted Canadian and imported newspapers, magazines and periodical publications in general from the price ceiling.

Under the price ceiling effective December 1, the prices of periodicals were frozen at the rates charged in the basic period from September 15 to October 11 last.

Later the United States price of some periodicals such as the Saturday Evening Post was increased, but no rise in the Canadian price was permitted. The Post sold in the United States for 10 cents and in Canada for seven cents. Board officials said a few other publications were similarly affected.

It was understood that the Post agreed to continue its Canadian distribution at the seven cent rate, but made no drive for new subscribers. It had agreed to accept such loss as might develop from Canadian sales at the lower level.

Other publications had indicated that although the Canadian ceiling might represent some loss of revenue compared with the United States returns, they would continue their sales because of the circulation and advertising values.

Officials said they had no indication whether the lifting of the ceiling from publications will result in increases in imported publications prices, but that such increases now were permissible to bring them into line with United States charges.

Censorship Ruling Made On Missing Soldiers

Many Canadians who took part in the raid on Dieppe are thought to be still safe in France, probably in hiding, after having failed to get back to the boats for the return trip to Britain. There is hope that numbers of these will in time be able to escape and make their way back across the Channel.

This is the official explanation for a new ruling which has been made by the censorship authorities of all the United Nations, prohibiting publication of names of missing men, or of the number still not reported, until they have appeared in an official casualty list. Relatives will continue to be notified by official telegrams, as information is compiled, but issuance of lists for publication will be held up for a time, and newspapers are forbidden to make mention of private advices received by families of soldiers.

The German military authorities, it has been learned by the Allied intelligence staff, check all published lists against names of men who are held prisoner, or whose bodies have been found. The appearance on such lists of names of men they cannot account for reveals to them that these men are probably still in the area of the raid and are in hiding. This inspires an intensive search, which will almost inevitably result in the soldiers being found and imprisoned.

By withholding publication of the lists, the men are given the chance to remain out of the hands of the enemy and there are certain channels through which they have a good hope of getting back safely to Britain. The same thing is also true of airmen missing, for they also may have been forced down in France.

The Examiner would be glad to receive information on, and pictures of, missing soldiers as soon as relatives are notified. These will be published when the censors release the names.

A. M. Taylor of Vancouver was attacked by three night fighters which chased him 20 minutes before he was able to lose them.

Docks and shipping at La Pallice, a port on the Bay of Biscay, were also bombed.

One bomber failed to return from these operations.

German airmen caused some property damage and a number of casualties at a South coast town today in a raid that cost them two Focke-Wulf 190s.

British fighters also made another cross-Channel foray in daylight.

The Air Ministry News Service reported that a Hurricane bomber attacked seven German boats two miles off the French coast during the night, the pilot descending to mast-height and later seeing one boat afire.

In East Anglia 12 persons were killed when a German bomb struck a shelter. The dead included a woman and her eight children.

The German radio reported that Great Yarmouth and Ipswich, both in Southeast England, had been bombed last night.

a whole handful of nails in the Jap coffin.

Why should the Nipponese make such an attack?

In the first place the Japanese is a persistent devil and one of his characteristics is that he won't take a punch in the eye without returning to try to restore his standing in society. Beyond that, however, the islands which the Marines now hold by right of bloody combat represent a base from which the Allies can strike at the other Japanese conquests in that area and so threaten Indonesia. United States possession of these islands also deprives the Japanese of an invaluable base for operations against Australia and weakens the barrier they erected across American communications with Australia.

Then again, so long as the Allies hold the threat of these bases over the head of the enemy, he is handicapped in his operations against China, in any scheme for attacking Russian Siberia and in any attempt to invade India. Now is the crucial time when Hitler needs the support of his ally and the Japanese want to be free to act according to their light.

While it is not known in which country he is interned, nor will it be known until a letter reaches his parents, it is assumed locally that he was forced down in Ireland. This conclusion is based on a report that a German plane and a British plane were both forced down and their crews interned in Ireland over the week-end. If this is so, his parents can rest assured, the treatment he will receive will be the best.

The messages being sent to Canada are available for the use of members of the Canadian, British and Allied armed forces in the United Kingdom at a fee of threepence (approximately six cents) a message.

Many Industries To Be Curtailed

By ERIC SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WINNIPEG, August 26. —(CP) — Curtailment of many of the less essential industries and occupations in Canada must and will take place, said Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service in an address here.

Speaking to the 8th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada yesterday, Mr. Little said that within a few days the government will issue an order that an employer cannot discharge an employee and an employee may not quit his or her position without giving seven days notice.

An order also will be issued, he said, making it compulsory for an employable unemployed male person to accept work of high essentiality.

During a 40-minute question period following his half-hour address, Mr. Little said that when a man, through selective service, enters a union district that requires him to become a member within 30 days, he is subject to conditions as regard to the present employees.

Answering a question with regard to putting all men on full-time jobs, the Director of National Selective Service said.

"Our desire is to see that every man has full-time employment. Our objective is full-time employment for everyone."

J. W. Bruce of Toronto, general organizer for the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, charged that an order-in-council stablizing wages in shipyards and naval dockyards had raised wages on certain employees in shipyards and had reduced those paid in the naval dockyard.

He said Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Federal Minister of Labor, had favored unions affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organization as against those affiliated with the American Federaiton of Labor.

Duke Is Mourned By Thousands Across Canada

OTTAWA, Aug. 26—(CP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King's official tribute to the Duke of Kent will be echoed today by the thousands of Canadians whose offection for the King's youngest brother amounted almost to reverence.

The memory of the shy, handsome, air-minded Duke who drove his own automobile so fast his motorcycle escort couldn't keep up with him still is fresh in the minds of those who followed his spectacular tour of air training establishments in Canada last summer.

They remember how the 39-year-old Duke, forced to travel by train when his plane was forced down at Cap de la Madeleine, Que., by thick weather, sat with an aide in a coach, passengers crowding around him; how he left his Quebec City hotel to attend a movie, unrecognized.

The man whose marriage to Princess Marina of Greece was one of the biggest social events before the war was flown from Britain to Canada in a Liberator bomber, thus becoming the first member of the royal family to fly the Atlantic Ocean.

His visit to the Dominion took him from coast to coast, visiting training establishments and meeting men from many parts of the Commonwealth schooling for fighting in the skies. His popularity ounted with each succeeding stop.

He arrived in Ottawa on the start of his tour and stayed at Government House as the guest of the Governor-General, his uncle, and Princess Alice. The visit was without formality.

Message From Premier

News of the Duke's death in an airplane crash in Northern Scotland while proceeding to Iceland on active service with the Royal Air Force brought an informal expression of tribute last night from the Prime Minister, who met the Duke several times in Britain and on two of his visits to Canada.

"I greatly admired him for his public service and his attractive personality," aid Mr. King.

The Prime Minister sent cables to the King, the Duchess of Kent and Queen Mary expressing the sympathy on his own behalf and on behalf of the people of Canada. He also telegraphed Lord Athlone, who now is in Newfoundland.

The Duke's first visit to Canada in 1926 was an informal one. He arrived from the Far East at Victoria and crossed Canada to Saint John, N.B., after paying a visit en route to Lord Willingdon, then Governor-General, and Lady Willingdon. In 1927, he visited Canada in connection with the 60th anniversary of Confederation, along with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Mrs. Baldwin, and the Prince of Wales (now Duke of Windsor).

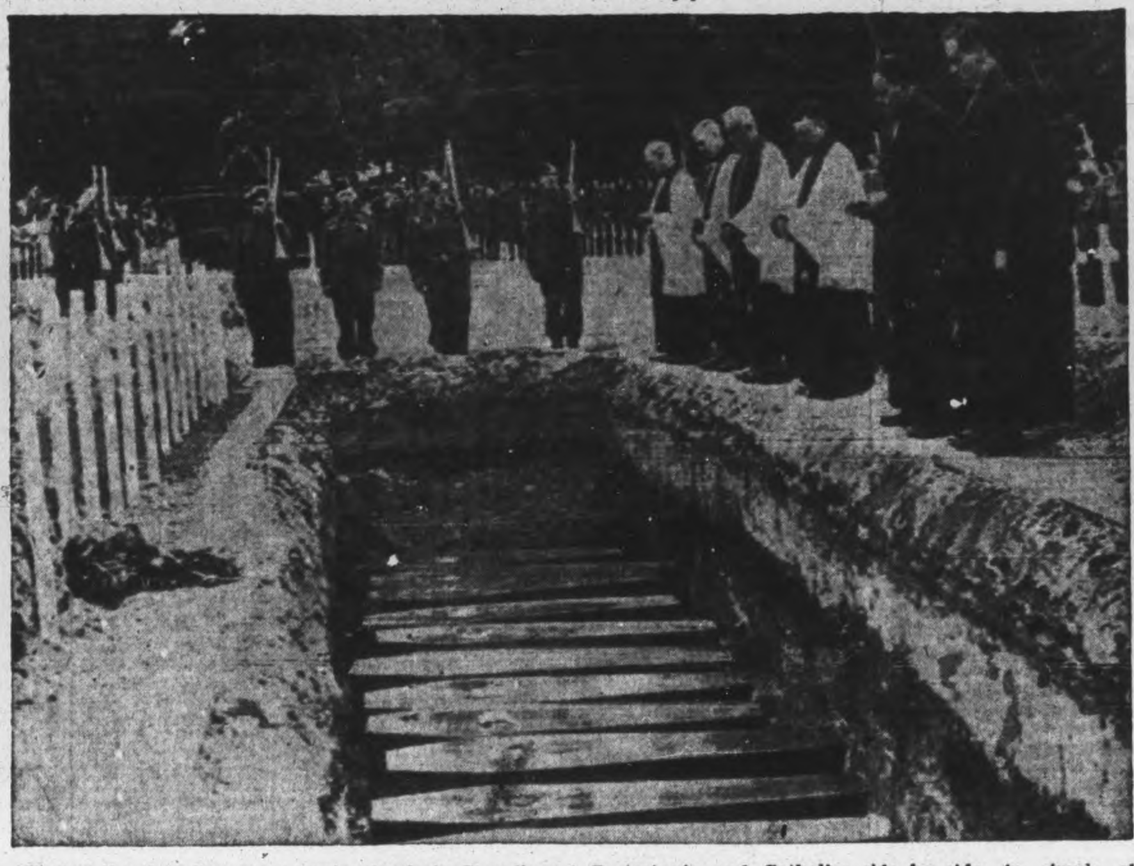
Canadian Heroes Who Gave Their Lives At Dieppe Buried In England



During the Canadian army service for forty Canadians who died in the battle of Dieppe, six padres stood at the graveside opposite white crosses in the Canadian cemetery at Brookwood, Surrey. Maple leaves flown from Canada were scattered over the graves where the men were buried, Protestants and Catholics side by side, in simple elm coffins. Major George Cote of Quebec City and Major N. Clarke Wallace of Toronto conducted the ceremony, assisted by Major J. D. Johnston of Brantford and three other clergymen.

US Price Control Planned For September

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 (CP)—A comprehensive price control system to arrest the rising cost of living in the United States will be drafted within a comparatively short time and put into force by Executive action, President Roosevelt announced yesterday.

He hinted it would include stabilization of wages and control of farm prices, but it has not yet progressed to any final form. The President said he expected to outline it to the people some time about Labor Day in a broadcast.

If the rising cost of living in the United States can be stopped, it will make a tremendous difference to Canada's price control system. Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, is expected here today to confer with Leon Henderson, and to give him a first-hand account of Canada's experiences in the field of price control.

For months two pressure groups have prevented a comprehensive control scheme, the farm bloc which desires higher agricultural prices, and organized labor which has warned repeatedly against any attempt to stabilize wages or put them under a ceiling.

From what he told his press conference today, it is apparent that President Roosevelt intends to disregard the pleas of both groups. It was axiomatic that both farm prices and wages must be stabilized if inflation is to be averted, he said.

The President's price control scheme probably will be introduced by Executive action. He said the time element was very important and the whole situation might get out of hand within thirty days.

You cannot stabilize wages without stabilizing farm prices, nor can you stabilize farm prices without stabilizing wages, the President said. He added that it would not be fair to impose certain restrictions on one group without imposing restrictions on the other. He said he thought from the point of view of national defense and the conduct of the war, we have got to do both one way or another.

The President, himself, appeared to invite the reference to the political potentialities of his move by remarking that actually the labor group and the agricultural group were not two groups within the country, because they were all Americans. But, he said, in the domestic processes they have been identified as two groups and they very often vote as though they were two groups.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to discuss any methods by which wage and farm price stabilization will be effected, declaring that he has not yet made up his mind.

Airwomen Group Forging Ahead

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP).—Members of the Royal Canadian Air Force Women's Division who arrived at an R.C.A.F. operational base somewhere in Newfoundland recently as the first of the women's force to go on overseas duty are "forging ahead steadily" in their work, Section Officer Frances Douglas said in an article released here today.

"Airwomen are manning typewriters that click out important messages," Section Officer Douglas wrote in the fifth of a series of articles made public by R.C.A.F. headquarters. "The voice at the telephone switchboard is a woman's now.

"Many of the cars that careen through rain-filled roads have Women's Division drivers, taking to new left-hand traffic regulations with calm efficiency.

Airwomen were working at a large and modern hospital built in memory of the late Sir Frederick Banting, who died in a plane crash not far from the base. The blue-smocked hospital assistants of the Women's Division had been welcomed at the hospital, but "welcomed with reservations."

"But the airwomen fitted in quickly and efficiently," wrote the section officer. "Watching them, the matron breathed a sigh of relief, allotted some of the arduous night shift almost immediately, and put others on the duty watch that takes over at noon."

Life at the hospital was not always pleasant, especially in the crash ward. But:

"Theirs are the minor details of an up-to-date, smooth-running hospital, carefully supervised, willingly carried out.

"And they love it."

Work Pepping Up

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 26 (ENS) —Three more of the quilts that will go into the pool of 25 required for the emergency quota to be set up in Campbellford were completed by members of the Campbellford and Seymour Branch of the Red Cross on Tuesday afternoon. It was reported that there are still sewing quotas to be filled as well as those for the hospital, navy, army and British Civilians. All of the tickets for the recent Red Cross drive were sold and a considerable amount of money was raised for the funds. Thanks was expressed to those who donated the prizes: Mr. Lorne Hay, a quilt; an afghan donated by girls of the local Bell Telephone office; a quilt by Miss Coveney, and a silver dish by Mrs. Marriat.

Cobourg Carriers To Discuss Rubber Salvage

COBOURG, Ont., August 26 —(ENS) — District rural mail carriers are holding a special meeting tonight at the Baltimore Hotel to discuss matters of current importance to the Mail Carriers Association Main items on the agenda is the rubber and salvage collection which the mail carriers will handle in the rural section.

Judge Archibald Cochrane, the County Judge of Peel County, was in Cobourg yesterday. Formerly Crown Attorney for Northumberland and Durham Counties, he was resident of Cobourg fr many years before going to Brampton to reside after his elevation to the bench.

Cobourg residents had an excellent opportunity to observe the eclipse of the moon last night due to the fact that it was a very clear night. There were no clouds to mar the view of the eclipse.

The district never knew how many people were growing oversize dahlias until a picture of an eight inch dahlia from Chief Bill Carey's garden in Cobourg was published. Now there are flower fanciers galore who claim to have equalled and excelled the Chief's dahlias. However it depends how they are being measured. The Chief's eight inch dahlia was measured just as it hung on the stem. If the bloom had been held in the hand, so that the petals would spread out, it would have been closer to 11 inches. Next spring the Chief is going to tackle dahlia growing in earnest and will take on all comers.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 26 (ENS) —Members of St. Mary's parish heard with regret the announcement made by Rev. J. V. McAuley on Sunday. McAuley has been in charge of St Mary's Parish here for the past seven years and he succeeded Rev. C. J. Phelan who died while in charge of this parish. Father McAuley's appointment to the Lindsay parish is regarded as a tribute to his marked ability since that church is the largest in the diocese. His generosity and friendly disposition endeared him not alone to members of his own congregation but to all who knew him.

Mr. Churchill Returns

Prime Minister Churchill has returned safely to London, after epic-making three weeks in which he flew 14,000 miles visiting Egypt, Moscow, Iran and Iraq. The crowning event of the trip was his conversations with Stalin in Moscow when a "second front" was discussed and an agreement reached satisfactory to Russia, Britain and the United States.

Churchill's return was at the moment of Russia's greatest peril and thus it can be taken that Allied action designed to relieve the Soviet is imminent. His journey really was a prelude to action. Where that action is to be will form the basis of plenty of "arm-chair talk and writing," but suffice it is that the three great nations have hit upon a plan that is satisfactory to all.

Press despatches have described Mr. Churchill as being troubled as he had never been before about the progress of the war—about Egypt, the Far East and above all else the Nazis' successes in Russia. It is not usual for Mr. Churchill to display his state of mind but it shows to us far away from the actual battle that the turning point in this war is far from being reached and still greater effort must be put forth by everyone if we are to be successful.

Cut Luxury Power Use

Recognition of the salient fact that Canada faces a power shortage and that Ontario and Quebec, the two great industrial provinces, are likely to be the most seriously affected should inspire all loyal Canadians to unite in their determination to make any sacrifice or temporary adjustment which will enable Canada to play her full part in bringing about the defeat of the Axis powers.

First steps in a program of equitable power distribution are now being worked out by the power controller and are expected to take the form of restrictions on "luxury power" but it has already been indicated that the regulations will prohibit the use of power for such purposes as interior or exterior sign lighting; outline and ornamental lighting; lighting for decorative or advertising purposes; outdoor and floodlighting, including field lighting for amusements or sports and white-way lighting above the minimum requirements for safety; the operation of any air heater or electric grate in store or office building.

These restrictions are not expected to extend any further than Ontario and Quebec where 80 per cent. of Canada's power resources are located and Southern Ontario will be first affected. The situation is not expected to become serious until October when the power requirement line commences its climb to the December "peak." These peak power requirements are then considerably higher than during the rest of the year and are induced by shorter days, which mean more lighting, colder weather, which means auxiliary electric heating and similar seasonal factors.

Suggestions have been made about plant transfers and representations made at Ottawa for the transfer of industry to other parts of the Dominion are gaining in weight. However, this has been ruled out for nowhere in Canada are there sufficient power reserves to warrant any large-scale transfer of industry.

Primary and secondary loads have increased 9.2 per cent. over a year ago on the various Ontario systems, while the Eastern Ontario system from which this district gets its power shows an increase of 11.3 per cent.

Domestic consumers of electricity are going to be told how they can individually do their part in assuring an adequate supply for essential war industries during the coming fall and winter when this province alone will face an estimated shortage of 250,000 horsepower. All users of electricity must not forget that in a time like this power conservation becomes just as much a weapon of war as planes, tanks, ships and guns. Handled effectively and conscientiously it can be a very potent weapon for it will assure an adequate supply of power for finishing the job to which we have set our hands and minds.

We Must Not Forget

Let me away from it, I am tired hearing about the war and I am going to quit listening to the radio and reading the newspapers is a comment heard often in the homes of this district. Some people want to forget about the war, in fact they really want to live their own selfish life and have nothing to do with it

Is this a wise attitude of mind? We do not think so. The United Nations are in such danger of losing the war that anything which does not affect it or contribute to us winning the war does not matter today. We are all in it—some more than others on account of our present happy geographical situation and we must all understand that the more we feel that we are in this war the more we will concern ourselves about it and the greater effort we will put forth to winning it.

How many have expressed themselves about the war as a tiresome nuisance. None of us like rations, all of us would like to buy many luxury goods. It is this attitude of mind today that causes some people to hold onto their money, leaving it to others to regularly buy all the war certificates they can and buy war loans when they come out. It is the attitude of mind of people who seek to hide unpleasant facts by ignoring them; who seek to forget a crime by hiding the body. It is the attitude of mind which seeks to slackness of war-effort; to complacency.

These people are the people who are selfish, self-centred and indulgent; who hate to be reminded of anything that stirs their peace of mind. This is not the mentality that will win the war. We can only win by measuring up to our responsibilities to the utmost of our capacity, in the interest of others as well as ourselves.

Food—Here And There

We do not need to be told that food is extremely scarce in Occupied Europe and that in some countries people are quite literally starving to death. The reports which reach us from Switzerland concerning Germany itself, however, contain information which is new; the Axis is facing another winter with sadly depleted stores of food.

Dr. Goebbels' propaganda ministry pooh-poohs the idea that Germans will be worse off this winter than they were last year; he declares that the food situation is satisfactory and rations have been secured for next year. Indeed, he insists upon this point to a degree which is suspicious. It may be that he is counting upon a complete Russian collapse before winter to produce the necessary supplies. These reassuring broadcasts are vague in their promises, however, and there has been no mention of any specific article save potatoes; a ration increase of 13 per cent. has been promised. This is less impressive when it is remembered that in many parts of Germany the present ration is only three pounds of potatoes for each person a week. Only ten ounces of meat a week is available for ordinary workers, and heavy workers get twenty-seven ounces. All rations of fats have been reduced. According to Swiss reports, German grain stores are very low, and nothing may be expected from her Ukrainian conquests until the autumn of 1943. The food problem in Germany, with her great army and her three million imported workers and her two million war prisoners, is a serious one, though not so grave as it was at this period during the last war.

Let us put aside any foolish hope of starving Germany into submission. We may be confident, however, that short rations will have its effect on the home front.

In comparison, our own food situation is excellent. Britain has had another first-rate agricultural year and her crops have been preserved in spite of enemy attempts to destroy them with fire-bombs. Lord Woolton has announced some reductions in rations to take effect soon, but he has also explained that this is because ships will shortly be needed for military purposes. The nourishment in the rations will be kept at its present level, however, as some basic articles such as butter and cheese are to be distributed in greater quantities.

In Canada crop reports promise a good, though not a bumper, harvest. Wheat and other cereals will be produced in their usual quantities and the hay and feed will be abundant. Considering the shortage of farm workers this is a first-rate piece of work on the part of Canada's farmers.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Always remember: A fool and his military information are soon parted.

Once they dumped tea into the ocean at Boston and now this commodity is being rationed.

Word Picture Of McNaughton

By L. W. BROCKINGTON

HOW do you do? May I present to you a friend of mine who stands behind me in the shadow of your doorway? If you can't see him, and as he wouldn't talk about himself even if you begged him to do so, perhaps you will allow me to tell you who he is and what he looks like. His name is Andrew George Latta McNaughton, and that ought to make all Jock Tamson's bairns in North Britain sound their pibrochs and fill their fifes. He was born 55 years ago in the little town of Moosomin in Saskatchewan.

Moosomin is a Cree Indian word meaning, I believe, "Sweetwater." The town lies about 5,000 miles from London, about 2,200 miles from the Atlantic, and about 1,250 from the Pacific. In fact it nestles nicely in the centre of the world. It never had more than 1,700 inhabitants, even in the boom days. Like most of the folk in the far West they are the best of good neighbors. Out there they don't care who you are. They only care what you are. And if you are not all you should be, there are plenty of friendly hands and strong arms to help you up and on. The land is a sunburnt land in the summer and a white land in the winter. Temperatures can be very high and very low. The people knew how to ride horses and know how to fix machinery. Their speech is direct and smacks of the soil. Their eyes are used to sunshine and deep darkness and great distances. Their hands are used to proud toil. Although they are far away from other lands they have always been mindful of our common humanity. Human brotherhood is something very real to them.

"From little towns in a far land we came
To save our honor and a world in flame."

That refers to them and their manly kind.

In that little town of Moosomin, Andy McNaughton learned to love horses, to shoot and to fish, to fix gadgets and to think and fend for himself. Both his parents were of Scottish descent, McNaughtons from around Oban and Armours from Scotland at large—but both sides of his family have been Canadians for well over a hundred years.

And that's why nothing that I could say would please him more than if I call him just a Canadian doing his best to make the whole world a kindlier place, like the corner of the New World where he once played in the sun and the snow. His mother's people were farmers in Ontario; his father's built tall ships in New Brunswick. His great-grandfather McNaughton was a friend of James Watt, the inventor of the steam-engine. It was he who ran the engine of the Comet on its journey down the Clyde and became the world's first marine engineer. I'll bet the old man is proud of his great-grandson. I know the great-grandson is proud of the old man.

General McNaughton's father went West in the early 70's. He founded a company that traded in furs and supplies from South of the American border up to the Arctic Circle. Well taught, much travelled, public spirited, he knew men and affairs.

There until he went away to the great school in the East lived Andrew McNaughton.

Let's have a look at him tonight. He's about five foot ten tall, and weighs about 11 stone—a constant weight with him. He has black hair, beginning to turn grey, and a black moustache. Although his hair is close-cropped, he manages to keep it untidy. That's quite a trick. He is lithe and taut. His eyebrows are bushy. You can see him thinking. He frowns to do it and does quite a lot of it. His forehead is unusually high. His face is one of those attractive faces that are both boyish and clever. His deep-set eyes glow. They look at you, into you, through you and beyond you. They are the eyes of foresight and far-sight. His speech is short and direct. He wears a brass hat but never a high hat. It is often tilted at the back of his head. One of my newspaper friend in Canada once said that here is a man who forgot about himself so long ago that he probably doesn't even see himself in his mirror when he is shaving.

He has been called to assist in the planning and directing of nearly every big job that Canada needed done. No one saw more clearly than he the coming of this conflict. No one knew more clearly what was necessary to win it. With the thoroughness, the freshness of mind, the careful and persistent search for truth, the sense of stark reality which characterize the true scientist, he schooled himself for his duty. Seeking conclusions and not jumping at them he was prophetic and prepared. He is the scientist at war in a scientific war, the engineer who knows the engines of attack and the engines of defense.

The soldiers must be well-educated, he said not long ago, adaptable, machine-minded and dexterous. He must be strong and purposeful. His only worth is battle-worthiness. The use of brains wins more wars than the shedding of blood. The weapons of war were meant to save the man who knew how to make them, to use them and, not least, to maintain them. Risks should be calculated and then taken with resolution. For war is no glamorous, gay and glorious adventure. It's a grim, grisly business to be ended.

Let us fight to win it in our own time on the ground of our own choosing. Those are some of the things he said quietly. He was really picturing the Canadian army as he spoke then.

He does not deal in starveling words however. He deals in scientific thoughts and the robust deeds that follow from them.

Just listen to him, too, talk of his soldiers, English speaking and French speaking, and of the free land which gave them birth.

Then you'll hear the ancestral voices from Oban and Moosomin. Perhaps, too, if you know him well enough he will speak of his children. When they were small he liked nothing better than to take them fishing and to teach them to run their toy electric trains.

He has five children, two daughters (one still at school) and three sons. His elder daughter is married to a squadron-leader in the Canadian Air Force. His first son is a flight-lieutenant in the same force. His second son is a major at 23 and gunnery instructor to the Canadian artillery. His third son, a pilot officer in the Royal Air Force has been missing since June 22. He has two grandsons.

A certain minister, while preaching, said that every blade of grass was a sermon. The next day he was amusing himself by mowing his lawn, when a country yokel passing shouted, "That's right, vicar, cut your sermons short."

"OH WHAT A TANGLED WEB WE WEAVE—"

Japs Risk Anything for Face

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

THE first impression from the United States Navy's announcement of the new air and sea battle in the Solomons is that the Japanese may have blundered by taking risks outweighing possible gains.

Against an expedition of marines which has had time to dig in, put one or more air fields into operation and is supported by substantial navy and army sea and air forces, the Japanese sent a vulnerable armada which counter-attacked without benefit of surprise.

First reports tell of the bombing of two enemy carriers and a battleship, along with a number of other warships and accompanying vessels, and the downing of 21 enemy planes in a single engagement. The hopeful suspicion is encouraged thereby that the Japanese were so intent on revenge and gaining "face" that they disregarded the Battle of Midway's lesson of the perils of a sea attack on an objective defended by land-based aircraft.

The whole fight for the Solomons is still so enshrouded in secrecy, however, that ordinary caution advises that judgment be suspended until more returns come in. The onslaught obviously was made with terrific force. Information is lacking on our own strength. Official warnings were given at the outset to expect heavy losses.

The Japanese would not have attacked unless they believed they had a promising chance to accomplish at least one of three things—to retake the Eastern Solomons, inflict a crippling defeat, or divert American naval strength to this relatively remote area while attacking again toward Pearl Harbor, the North Pacific or elsewhere.

In at least one particular the Japanese possess an advantage which naval men deem important. Their fleet is operating several hundred miles nearer a major base than Vice-Admiral Robert L. Ghormley's.

This attack, like the frustrated Coral Sea advance, seems to have stemmed from the Island of Truk in the Caroline group less than 1,000 miles to the north, where the Japanese can obtain fuel, ammunition and reinforcements and make repairs.

Pearl Harbor, American headquarters for the Pacific naval war, is more than 2,500 miles away. The lesser bases of Pago Pago, Samoa, Sydney and Auckland are all further from the scene than Truk.

This naval advantage is offset, perhaps decisively, by the foothold the marines have won in three of the Solomon Islands since the first surprise attack of Aug. 8-9.

The navy's communique implies strongly that the defenders of the Tulagi Harbor area and near-by Guadalcanal Island were aided by land-based fighters, these being credited with Sunday's score of twenty-one planes. Other American aircraft were identified as carrier-based, or as army bombers. The Japanese are known to have had one or more airfields on Guadalcanal which the marines seized.

Odds seem to be that the hard-hitting army heavy bombers came from New Guinea, New Caledonia or the Fijis, all of which are within but near the limit of their range.

If it turns out the Japanese miscalculated, it was their second blunder in quick succession. Underestimating the marines soon after the start of the invasion, they lost an entire 700-man force despatched from the Northern Solomons in fast motor craft.

In that attack the Japanese violated one of their military principles. Admiral Ernest J. King, American Commander-in-Chief, had said that "they never send a boy to do a man's work."

Why We Still Have Tires

(FROM OTTAWA JOURNAL)

MANY Canadians must have been asking themselves why the Government does not requisition passenger automobiles, or at least the tires beyond five for each car which were registered some weeks ago. Here, they say, is a great reserve of rubber, and if the shortage is as serious as the authorities say why should car-owners be permitted to keep their tires for driving which contributes nothing directly to the war effort.

The explanation was given Mr. Alan H. Williamson, controller of supplies, in an address in Montreal.

There are, said Mr. Williamson, 825,000 "less essential cars" in this country, with some 4,000,000 tires, and the government had thought of seizing them, but finally dismissed the idea as "wholly impracticable." The reason is that "our limited reclaim plants" are running at full capacity with scrap rubber, still have stocks of scrap for some time to come, and if the tires were confiscated they would suffer heavy deterioration before transformation into war materials. It is true that rubber is lost to a tire in active service on a car but Mr. Williamson quotes experts as telling him that when a tire finally is discarded as worn out it still contains for reclaim purposes, 80 per cent of its original rubber.

Broadly speaking the loss of rubber on the roads roughly balances the deterioration if the tires were taken off the cars and stored for future re-processing. On balance therefore, the national interest is best served by permitting these 825,000 "non-essential" cars to operate, because if suddenly they were taken off the roads "chaos," says Mr. Williamson "would result," in public transportation, and the war effort would suffer. And finally, if the government seized these 4,000,000 tires and paid $5 each for them that $20,000,000 would be "an enormous price to pay for 40,000 tons of scrap which would be piled up in warehouses and not used for many, many months—scrap which would later be bought for about $520,000 instead of $20,000,000.

Mr. Williamson painted a sombre picture of the rubber situation and appealed to the police chiefs to act as "watchdogs" in helping to conserve rubber. Just what they are to "watch" he doesn't seem to have said, which leaves us puzzled.—Ottawa Journal.

The Public Fails to Sympathize

(MONTREAL GAZETTE)

H. F. WINKLER, Liberal member for Lisgar, Man., has circulated a letter among the people's elected representatives at Ottawa lamenting the position in which Parliamentarians find themselves because of the exactions of Hon. Mr. Ilsley's budget. The member for Lisgar writes good-naturedly and jocularly, nevertheless the complaint is there, and it is serious. The $4,000 sessional remuneration is termed an indemnity; yet it is classed in income tax regulations as salary, expenses incurred not being deductible. And the M.P.'s cannot qualify for cost of living bonus. It is terrible.

How can the common taxpayer feel special sorrow for his representative at the Capital? The great majority of Canadians gainfully employed earn far less for a whole year's work than the M.P. does for a single session. To them a member of parliament is well-off in his indemnity alone. He has his private earnings and he travels free on the railway. The ordinary taxpayer has no such privilege, nor should he have. But in his acceptance of the unprecedented income taxes he is desirous that the legislators who establish these same taxes shall share in the sacrifices they impose. Were they to make themselves immune from the common burden necessitated by war there would be a wave of indignation throughout the land. There can be no doubt of that, for the people are in no mood to tolerate special privileges for anyone. It is the war.

In one way the letter of Mr. Winkler, M.P. for Lisgar, Man., is a healthy sign in that it shows the men who voted the huge sums required for the prosecution of the war now realize what they mean to the public at large.

A Bible Message For Today

And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; the Holy One of God. And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not. And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about. And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her. And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her: and immediately she arose and ministered unto them.

Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.—Luke iv, 33-40.

Unconsidered Trifles

Private Smith was in trouble again.

"What's the charge this time?" asked the commanding officer.

"Insubordination, sir," said the sergeant-major. "On parade this morning Private Smith shouted to his platoon sergeant, "Kiss me, sergeant!"

The officer turned to the culprit.

"And what have you to say?"

"I reckon I was justified, sir," Smith answered. "We privates think we've got a right to smell our rum ration."

A well-known bishop was just home in England after a long stay at one of our distant colonies. Broad of mind as well as physique, he was strolling round the crowded London streets. Suddenly out of the sea of faces he recognized a friend of many years past. He stopped in front of him and put out his hand. The friend looked puzzled and said:

"Where in hell have I met you before—"

The bishop, equal to the occasion, and in no wise disconcerted by this tactless remark, asked good-naturedly:

"Let me see—er—what part of hell do you come from?"

A touring company was playing in a Lancashire town. The play was based on the life of Napoleon. On the Saturday evening both Napoleon and his aide-de-camp had been sampling the local brew, and the aide, at a tense moment of the play, became a little mixed in his topography.

"Sire, sire," he said, "it has been deshided to banish you to St. Helens."

Napoleon sadly digested this fact, and then observed, resignedly: "Ah, well, it might have been Wigan."

A very mean man went into a glassware shop in search of a present for a friend. After spending some time looking at different articles and finding them all too expensive, he at last saw a vase which was broken in several pieces. He enquired the price, and finding it was practically nothing decided to have it sent to his friend, hoping that he would think it had been broken in transit.

Accordingly, he asked the assistant to pack it and despatch it. A few days later he received the following reply from his friend:

"Thanks for the vase. So thoughtful of you to wrap up each piece separately."

Montreal Booms After 3 Years Of War Pressure

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

MONTREAL, August 26—(CP).—A constant drone of warplanes above ....mobs of slackclad girls moving to war factories....railway and bus terminals bustling with servicemen ....the waterfront buzzing with rattling gear and convoy gossip. This is Canada's biggest city after three years at war.

Half a dozen warplane factories testing their products in long screaming power dives right over your garden and a big four-motor bomber zooming off to the wars from the nearby ferry command terminal, daily din war into the ears of Montrealers.

The turbaned battalions of girls with slacks and lunchcans and their male co-workers who cut down your breathing space in trams in three big eight-hour production shifts tell you the assembly lines are humming. With a pass from Ottawa and under the close scrutiny of security police you can see corvettes, cargo ships, bombers, fighters, tanks, guns, shells and other war material in production within the city.

Mass good-byes in the stations give you a gauge of the steady stream of sailors, soldiers and airmen on their way to action stations. And along the streets march clear-eyed seamen bearing the unostentatious "MN" on their coats to tell you the convoys are coming and going.

Haven of Diplomats.

Nowhere in the city is the war mirrored more sharply than at the chief Consulates of a dozen countries now occupied by the enemy. Besides sheltering these foreign representatives, the metropolis affords wartime haven for the Royal Government of Luxembourg. Not far down the St. Lawrence and near Quebec is the transplanted Royal House of Hapsburg where lives, for part of the year, the Archduke Otto, claimant to the old throne of Austria.

Montreal, whose civic motto is "Concordia salus" (salvation through unity) is a focal point of post-war planning. It harbors the great International Labor Office, transferred here form Geneva after the outbreak of war. Over its desks pour comprehensive surveys of social progress on which in some measure, may possibly be based the future social structure of the world.

Montreal has been crammed with tourists this summer and Montrealers have watched them visit the bulging and ever-increasing number of cabarets. A vaudeville theatre, closed since the depression, has reopened and is playing to capacity houses. Trams are crowded to the theatre belt but so are taxis and it is not unusual to be asked to double up, a proposition which helps give the driver a prosperity he hasn't known since St. James Street rocketed in the 1929 boom that preceded the crash.

The city and its adjoining boroughs, housing more than a million on the big St. Lawrence island, makes its sacrifices too. It has sent many sons away to fight; put many million dollars into taxes and war bonds. Cosmopolitan, bilingual Montreal is taking the war seriously right from its suave Mayor Adehmar Reynault down.

"C'est la guerre," shrugs Pierre when he finds the wife has given his old fishing rod to salvage while he was at drill.

"Such is war," echoes Art when he gets back from the blood donor clinic to find his reserve army puttees are being used in a first aid splint demonstration in his parlor.

Montreal is certainly at war.

Mess Room Chatter From Britain

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND August 26—(CP). — Led by Wing Cmdr. A. C. Brown of Winnipeg, the Demon Squadron of the R.C.A.F. made a night attack on a convoy of a dozen German vessels in the North Sea and left at least one in a "smoking" condition.

The wing commander himself claimed a hit. His crew, Flt. Lt. E. C. Kendall, Toronto, PO's W. McLeod, Barrie, Ont., and R. Worthington, Toronto, found the flak heavy. "They really poured the stuff at us" one of them said. "But after our first attack we returned to drop flares and found one ship smoking."

PO. D. J. Urquhart, Sydney, N. S., whose crew includes PO.'s J. Thain, of Sarnia, Ont., and S. F. Guthrie, Outremont, Que. and Sgt. W. C. Gauthier Toronto, were caught by a German searchlight, and "it really shook us."

Others in the attack were PO.'s Cam Taylor, Vancouver, Lloyd Ellam Montreal, C. W. Woodward, A. S. Flemington and C. H. McCarthy Toronto, G. Low, Norway House, Man., Flt. Sgts. J. L. Gaucher, Coderre, Sask., and J. D. Ferguson, Halifax, Sgts. J. D. Banting, Ricnlea, Sask., and J. O. Wheeler, Toronto.

PO. Dave Williams of Vancouver reversed the usual procedure and gave the Nazis a taste of flak during a raid on Hamburg.

Williams, member of a Canadian Hampden squadron, commanded by Wing Cmdr. J. D. Twigg of Ottawa tossed a chunk of shrapnel at the German guns which planted it in his aircraft on a previous trip to Hamburg.

The Germans replied with a burst of anti-aircraft fire that put two holes in Williams' aircraft but the damage wasn't serious.

One of the R.A.F.'s oldest partnerships has been dissolved. After nine months' friendly but intense rivalry in the air, Sqdn. Ldr. J. A. F. MacLachlen, D.S.O., D.F.C. and Bar, and Flt. Lt. Charles Kuttelwascher, D.F.C., the night fighter intruder aces who between them have destroyed 22 aircraft over enemy bases, have been separated. The one-armed Briton and the 26-year-old Czech pilot who has served in three air forces, will continue their intruder tactics.

Pilots from the Fighter Command top scoring station are shooting the Germans out of the sky on a diet that costs them only a dime a day.

Officers at the station voluntarily decided to live on the normal daily rations issued to the lowest AC2. They've been doing it for more than two months and their bag of Jerries keeps going up.

Normally extra food is bought by the officers' mess and the cost shared The charge may run as high as 75 cents to $1.00 a day. The ordinary rations are issued free and the dime a day covers the cost of fish, only addition to the menu that the fighters buy.

Whatever ration-economy meals go into the men's dining halls are shared in the officers' mess, whether rissoles, stews, minced meat or curries. Bacon and eggs for breakfast comes only once a week. Bacon, porridge, toast and marmalade alternate on other days.

One hot dish, such as stew, dessert, cheese and coffee is the luncheon menu. There is a roast joint only once a week for dinner, and on other nights soup, fish or meat, dessert and sometimes cheese is the bill of fare.

Germns in Bremen must have wondered during a recent British attack if Britain had developed a new secret weapon.

Silhouetted against the sky, a large, round, yellow object floated downwards. It was the rubber dinghy of a Halifax bomber and had been ripped out of its stowage in the port wing by shells from an enemy fighter. A shell hit the immersion switch and the dinghy automatically inflated itself and burst out of the fabric covering in the wing.

Planned Pacific Raid

(25) THE UNIVERSAL CARRIER

To the average civilian bystander in Canada's far-flung soldiering centres, the Universal Carrier epitomizes the dash and romance that typifies the Canucks in khaki.

The uninitiated refer to it as a "Bren Gun Carrier", but officially it is called the "Universal Carrier." This is a type of vehicle that the Dominion has manufactured and shipped overseas in large numbers.

It is a full-tracked armoured vehicle with no overhead covering, and its chief role is to provide transportation over difficult terrain with limited protection to a light-machine gun crew. An automatic gun of the Bren type can be operated from the vehicle as well as being readily dismountable for use on the ground.

The vehicle is fast, manoeuverable and noisy, and the lads that drive and ride them have a lot of strenuous fun.

Grill Team Wins Championship For Second Time

PORT HOPE, Aug. 26—(ENS). — Before the largest crowd of the season, the Grill on Tuesday night defeated the Beavers 6-2 in the final game of the 1942 Town League baseball season.

The Grills are now 1942 champions of the league for the second successive year.

W. Foote in the box for the Grill pitched a strong game, allowing only three hits, one each in the 4th, 5th and 6th innings. Edwardson started on the mound for the Queens, but after allowing three runs in the 2nd inning was replaced in the 3rd by Wods.

Woods was touched for seven hits and three runs in the four innings he pitched.

The Beavers did not get a man on in the first inning but in the Grill's half, Jim Phillips flied to Rowden, Foote walked, S. Wakely walked filling the bases. Edwardson tightened and struck out Hagerman and forced Rafter to fly to Hewson, leaving the 3 runners stranded.

In the second inning, Mann reached third after Foote hit high but failed to score. MacLeod opened the second inning by flying out to Rowden, Cancilla singled through short, Friar walked, Phillips singled past Williams, filling the bases. Williams picked up Foote's grounder but threw high to Mann, Cancilla scoring. Sid Wakely, jr., then singled through second, scoring Friar and Phillips for the second and third runs of the inning. The Grill added another in the third when Rafter scored on hits by the Grill third baseman, Macleod and Friar.

The Beavers scored for the first time in the fifth when Williams walked, Bill Douglas singled and in trying to catch Williams off third Friar threw three badly and the run scored. The second and last run of the Queens-Beavers came in the sixth when Edwardson walked, stole second; Woods singled and Edwardson scored on Rafter's bad throw to first.

The Grill made sure of the conflict by scoring two in the sixth when S. Wakely singled his third hit, cousin Len Wakely then tripled to score Sid Wakely, Hagerman singled scoring Len Wakely.

The Beavers were easy outs in their half of the seventh inning and the game was over.

The stars of this game were Bill Foote for his masterful pitching and Sid Wakely for his power at the plate having three out of four, driving in two runs. As has been the case in the last three games, the Queens infield has been weak and this can partly contribute to their downfall.

An all star game is being arranged for Friday night with teams picked from the Grill and Beavers. At this game the presentation of two cups and a shield will take place.

RELIEVE SUFFERING QUICKLY WITH KELLOGG'S ASTHMA RELIEF

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Plazas are City League champions. The hockey squad breezed through the fourth game of the final series at Riverside Park last night to take the title in four straight triumphs, winning 20 to 5. Royals after making the first three games as close as a bridegroom's shave blew up completely last night and were never in the hunt. The general verdict will be that Plazas are worthy title-holders. Last night's victory was their sixth straight play-off win and their 15th in 18 starts this season. They finished up the regular schedule two games in front of Royals, and then went on to take the Soldiers in the semi-final round in two straight games and make a clean sweep of the four-game final round with Royals. The latter made a valiant fight in the first three final tilts, losing two of them by the narrow margin of one run but they came apart at the seams in the final test and Plazas, their bats swinging lustily, won in easy style to take the league championship and quality for the O.A.S.A. playdowns which calls for them to meet the Oshawa winners.

* * * * * *

Plazas have played peppery ball all season. They have carried into the ball field the same team spirit and harmony that was such a big factor in their hockey success and as a result they have been a fighting squad, never beaten until the last man was out and showing a consistent tendency to come through with a winning rally in the ninth. They have had effective pitching from Tom Parsons and Dave Wilson and the pitching department has been backed up by fast fielding, making the club strong defensively while on the attack they have demonstrated plenty of power. As Pat Calladine remarked before last night's game: "There's no use passing one of those birds when the next man up is liable to come through with a safe blow." Now they go on into the Ontario playdowns where the opposition will be plenty tough but where the Plazas can be counted on to battle every foot of the way.

* * * * * *

Oshawa Colts look like the club the Plazas will have to meet in the Ontario intermediate A playdowns, commencing with a game Saturday The Colts, according to Scribe George Campbell, are going great guns, showing plenty of power on the attack, great fielding and getting fine pitching from Dean McLaughlin and Whitely, heavers not unknown in local sport circles. Red Jubenville of baseball fame is one of the infield stars of the Oshawa gang, playing second base in the big ball game as he used to when he was with Oshawa GM men in the Central Ontario League. Other well known performers in the Oshawa infield are Dalton at shortstop and Hall at third base while Bidgood, a hard-hitting first-sacker completes the inner guard. In one of the recent playoffs this infield rattled off three fast double-plays, Hall, Dalton and Jubenville each starting one, while Verne McLaughlin and Bill Trewin pulled off sensational catches in the outfield.

He Will Be Missed

Don Crowe, undoubtedly the best all-round athlete of modern times so far as the local sport scene is concerned has played his last game for some time in a Peterborough uniform. He leaves tomorrow to report to the R.C.A.F. to begin training as a pilot and may not be available for any further softball battles with Plazas. Since coming here seven years ago Crowe has been a tower of strength to local teams in hockey, football, lacrosse and softball. Combining a fighting spirit and a will-to-win with marked ability in every game he has tackled Don has played with a drive and determination that have made him a constant standout. Whether bowling over attacking forwards or barging down the ice for needed goals in hockey, or booming 60-yard punts on the run or tearing through broken fields for big gains in football, or dashing through a defence like a whirling dervish to slip the ball past a bewildered goalie in lacrosse, or making sensational plays in the field and long hits when most needed in softball, he has been a colorful figure in sport circles here and he will be badly missed. Crowe has never failed to give all he had no matter how tough the going and Peterborough sportdom owes him a lot for the thrills he has provided and the triumphs he has helped to bring this way. The R.C.A.F. has got a real guy in this battling, never-beaten athlete.

The Brintons and Electrics who failed to get a decision in the opening game of their Girls' League playoff series for the Knox Cup and the intermediate championship will try it again Thursday at the Ashburnham Bowl and should provide a lively tussle. Brintons apparently had the first game well tucked away but the Electrics kept battling, wiped out a six run deficit in the last three innings and the teams wound up all square with eight runs each. In view of the see-saw nature of that opening battle fans are expecting a similar session as the two rivals battle to get the jump on each other in the playoff series. The two "iron men" pitchers who have been carrying the burden all season, Leila Hughes, the Brintons' right-handed hurler and Mary Larmer, the left-handed tosser for the Electrics will be pitted against each other once again and should stage a merry duel before a winner is decided. The battle will get under way at 6.30 o'clock sharp.

Westclox On Road

Westclox girls, champions of the local Women's Softball Loop are off to the provincial wars today. They meet York Ladies, Toronto intermediate winners in a game at Earlscourt Park, Toronto at 6.30 o'clock this evening in a best two-of-three series, the second game to be played here Saturday, probably at 3 o'clock, although the exact arrangements have not yet been completed. In the event of the teams splitting even in the first two games it is likely that the deadlock will be broken here Saturday with a third game, following the completion of the second tilt. The Westclox girls are in good shape and confident of putting up a hard battle to take the round from the Toronto representatives. It is probable that Marg Watson will draw the pitching assignment tonight.

Both second-place clubs in the big leagues gained ground on the leaders yesterday. The battling St. Louis Cards picked up a full game at the expense of the Brooklyn Dodgers and the fast-coming Boston Red Sox who have won fourteen out of their last fifteen games nipped half a game off the margin of the Yanks. St. Louis had a real battle to gain the decision over the Bums and they finally turned the trick in the fourteenth inning. The clubs played scoreless ball for twelve frames. Then Brooklyn pushed over a run in the top of the 13th, only to have the Cards come back with a counter in their half and then squeeze in the winning marker in the next frame. The win reduced Brooklyn's lead to 5½ games. Mort Cooper went the distance for St. Louis while Wyatt, French and Webber worked for Brooklyn.

* * * * * *

In the American League Boston who are playing their best ball of the year right now garnered both ends of a double-header from the Cleveland Indians and gained half a game over the Yanks who won a single game from Chicago. Boston came home in front in the first game by scoring two runs in the last of the eleventh after Cleveland had counted one in the top half to take the lead. The final count was 4 to 3 with Lefty Ken Chase holding the Indians to four hits. Then Lefty Judd, Ingersoll product, came back with a seven-hitter in the second game and Boston won easily 8 to 1. Strangely enough Ted Williams, leading batter of the majors went hitless in both games, although he did manage to drive in one run and score another to add to his margin in those two departments. Yanks are still 8½ games in front of the Red Sox but the latter have knocked five games off the lead by their drive in the last couple of weeks.

Final Game Is Turned Into 20-5 Rout

Plazas turned the fourth game of the City League playoff series into a rout last night by pounding three Royals pitchers for 19 hits and cleaning up the final round in four straight triumphs, winning in hollow fashion 20 runs to 5, to take the Taylor Cup.

The hockey squad were in front from the first innings when they scored three unearned runs after having had two runners cut off from the plate and from then on it was only a question of how big the final score would be.

Manager Parnell selected Bob Crowe to do the gunning for Royals but the youngster was wild and was not helped any by three costly errors. Plazas had scored six runs when he was relieved by Ron Akers with one out in the fourth. The relief expedition ran into heavy weather, walking the first batter to face him and then being slammed for four straight hits and he was yanked without getting a man out, Bob Parnell finishing the inning and the game. He too was hit hard yielding twelve hits in the 6 2-3 frames he toiled on the hilltop. Plaza batters had a field day with Art Heal leading the parade with four hits in six times up. Joe Blewett drove in five runs, two of them on a long homer to deep right and Eddie Starr and Curley Scriver came through with three hits each. Oddly enough the only Plaza batter to go hitless was the batting hero of the third game, Don Crowe, but he was walked five times and scored five runs.

Dave Wilson went the route on firing line for the Plazas and had an easy job. He held the Royals to six scattered hits until the eighth when with the hockey squad in front 20 to 1, the losers managed to bunch four hits with a walk to score a quartette of runs. Phil Pryde gave him the most trouble, the Royals centre fielder coming through with three doubles and a walk in four times up.

Bob Crowe walked the first three batters to face him in the first innings but Heal was nipped at the plate in an attempted double steal and Kingdon was cut off when he tried to score on Blewett's roller to second. Two errors in succession by Giardino on taps by Ellis and W. Starr sent Crowe and Blewett in and Eddie Starr singled to right, scoring Ellis. Hawks tossed out Scriver to retire the side.

In the third Crowe and Blewett walked to start the frame. A long fly to left by Ellis scored Crowe and Blewett registered on an error.

The Plazas broke up the ball game in the fourth. With one away Heal doubled past third, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on another one, the fourth ball to Kingdon. Crowe was taken out at this stage and went to second base, Akers going to the mound. He walked Crowe. Blewett singled to left to score Kingdon. Then Ellis, W. Starr and Eddie Starr whistled singles through the infield and Akers was yanked in favor of Bob Parnell who yielded hits to Curley Scriver, Wilson and Heal before the side was finally retired after eight runs had crossed the plate.

Royals finally broke into the score column in their half when Pryde doubled through short with two out and scored on Akers' double to centre.

Plazas retaliated with three in the first of the fifth. Don Crowe walked for the fourth time and scampered home in front of Joe Blewett when the latter crashed a long homer far over Scriver's head in right field. Ellis and W. Starr flied out but Eddie Starr dropped a triple down the left field foul line when Pryde muffed Scriver's fly to centre.

Passes to Kingdon and Don Crowe in the sixth were converted into runs on Blewett's single to right and Blewett scored shortly afterward on a bunt by Ellis when Calladine dropped the throw to the plate. Scriver's triple with one out, followed by Wilson's single to left scored the 20th and last Plaza run in the seventh.

Royals staged a belated rally in the eighth. Smith started with a single through short and Calladine walked. Hawks' single to right scored Smith. Pryde doubled to left to send Calladine and Hawks in and after Akers had rolled out Parnell singled to right to score Pryde. R. Scriver struck out and McNabb flied to W. Scriver.

By HERB MARTIN

We slipped over to Pt. Perry last evening to witness the final games of singles, doubles and rinks of District No. 14 of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association. Our club was represented in two events, doubles and rinks.

We doubt if it has ever been our privilege to witness a better played game of singles than was put on by Mr. Sam Jeffrey of Pt. Perry and W. Ferguson of Lindsay. They played twenty-eight ends and at the end that grand old man of bowling, Mr. Jeffrey, finished one up. The game itself was a dandy. Tied several times, and just to sweeten things they were tied coming home. What better game could any one wish for?

In the doubles our local boys, Coleman and Jeffries, took what looked like a comfortable lead, and seemed to be sailing home with a full breeze behind them, but this Oshawa pair had other ideas. About half-way through they came through with a 2, a 4 and another 4 and that changed the situation entirely. Oshawa was now up 3 and bowling beautifully. However it was the local boys turn to step on the gas and by some smart playing Jeffries ran the jack back to pick up a nice big 3 and the game is all square. From there on it was a see-saw affair and it also was a tie coming home, 18-18. On the last end there were four bowls, two Oshawa and two Peterborough, that looked to be about the same distance from the kitty. Who was short? Who knows? Each side claiming that their bowl had it. It was close, it was real close. However when the end was over the shots were measure and the local pair got the nod by the thickness of a piece of paper. Is that close enough?

In the rink games, as in the doubles, our local boys took a commanding lead, but they could not hold it. Charlie Bell's rookies came down the stretch hellahooping and were one up coming home. On the 21st end Elson, playing vice for Bell killed the end and Lindsay got out of a tough spot. On the last end Gimblett's boys were lying two, enough to win, until Charlie Bell picked out the second shot, and the ball game is all tied up, forcing an extra end.

This end was probably the poorest of the whole game. The shot bowl was no nearer than two feet in the kitty. Third shot well over three feet from it and the rest scattered all over the green. George elected to run the kitty back, hoping for a break, but it was not to be.

At the conclusion of the games Chairman Ed. Goodman, Oshawa, presented each winner with a provincial shield.

The winners in all three events will now go to Hamilton on Labor Day to compete with the winners of other districts for the Ontario championship.

Rowe Beaten 4-0; Leafs Pound Red Wings 8-1

By the Associated Press.

Two years ago Rookie Floyd Giebell and Schoolboy Rowe were the toasts of Detroit, Giebell for besting Cleveland's Bob Feller in the game that gave the Tigers the American League pennant and Rowe for his 16 mound victories.

Giebell and Rowe met again last night, this time as International League rivals with Giebell, now with Buffalo Bisons spoiling the league debut of Rowe at Montreal, 4-0.

A three-hitter was unreeled by Giebell as his mates bunched three of the five hits allowed by Rowe along with two walks and an error in the second inning for all their runs.

The meal ticket of the Syracuse mound staff, Charles (Red) Barrett, hurled his 19th victory as the Chiefs defeated Newark Bears, 5-4, in ten innings.

Syracuse was trailing 4-2 going into the ninth when hammering Hank Sauer blasted a two-run homer off Emerson Steve Roser to tie up the game. The Chiefs won out in the 10th on a walk, two sacrifices and an error. Al Gerheauser, who relieved Roser, was charged with the losses.

Nick Strincevich tossed a five-hit 8-1 victory over Rochester Red Wings as Toronto Maple Leafs pounded Ira Hutchinson for 15 hits. Burgess Whitehead Al Rubeling and Jim Ripple led the attack with three hits each. Chuck Aleno of the Wings had four hits in four trips to the plate.

The Jersey City Giants won their second straight from the Baltimore Orioles as they defeated the Birds 6-3 behind the six-hit pitching of Hugh East.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG

TORONTO, Aug. 26—(CP).—The Montreal report on moonlight golf played there has raised a mighty unrest among the hard-working men and women in this world who devote Sunday after Sunday to summer-fallowing hundreds of golf courses, and hardly ever hit a ball.

Moonlight golf is a foul blow at public morale. It is a sneer at the hopes and dreams of we members of this soul brotherhood of golfers who get more distance out of divots than golf balls, who list a slice along with death and taxes in the old maxim.

We resent this travesty on the game; caddies with flashlights, yet My regular caddy wears a crash-helmet, but flashlights, no.

How do those Montreal professionals think we feel, losing an average of one ball every three holes, year in, year out, and in daylight, when we read about them playing well in the dark? How do they think we feel shooting 120 day after day, week after week, with a par once a decade, a birdie once a lifetime? We feel awful.

The thought of moonlight golf is undermining my spirit. It almost makes me regret the day I bought a golf bag, three good balls, a driver, a spoon, a jigger, a five-iron and a putter for four dollars and took up the game.

Incidentally:

If Toronto Maple Leafs hadn't started to win this week, Burleigh Grimes would have been ready to try moonlight baseball to snap them out of it...Herb (Winnipeg Tribune) Manning reports that Blue Bombers' veterans disapprove the T-formation tried out in workouts by Coach Reg. Threlfall...Toronto Balmy Beach has had some success with the T-formation but it requires ultra-expert ballhandling...Perhaps this year, with many players inexperienced, it would be better to stick to more orthodox methods...Vancouver race regulars shed copious tears for Tat Larson, who missed cashing two $222 double tickets because he played the Good Samaritan ..It appears he was approaching a wicket to exchange two first-half double tickets when a pal asked him if he had a drink for someone who had just fainted...Larson hadn't, but rushed around so long finding one that he was late reaching the wicket and was left standing there with one hand gripping a drink and the other holding two tickets which would have been placed on the race's ultimate winner... Well, it's a good thing he had the drink, with that horror to contemplate.

Indians Rejoice At $100 Fine To Be Returned

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—There are some smiles in the camp of the Etobicoke Indians today.

The fine of a $100 bond they were recently assessed was rescined by the Ontario Lacrosse Association at an executive meeting last night. But the Indians don't get their hands on the welcome wampum until the end of the season and only if they conform to all association regulations.

Happy about the decision to give the money back is John Elford. Just before the decision was reached he stated that he was particularly anxious that the fine be revoked as the money had come not from the Etobicoke Lacrosse Club but from the players themselves.

The Gord Gair case was not re-opened.

Hamilton's protest on the use by St. Catharines of two goalkeepers in a game of several weeks ago was thrown out on a technicality.

Winners of the O.A.L.A. senior series will be allowed to select any three players from within their group for participation in the Mann Cup finals, Secretary Gene Dopp also announced. He said that the West was applying to the Dominion Lacrosse Association for this privilege and that it would be granted to both West and East winners.

Mr. Dopp also said that Hamilton and Owen Sound have been ordered to play two games previously agreed upon Sept. 2 and 4. Hamilton has the choice of the first home game. Etobicoke will play in Hamilton Aug. 31. These games will delay ending of the regular schedule a week. Playoffs will start Sept. 7 with the first and third clubs meeting and the second and fourth clubs clashing in two semi-final series.

NEW YORK, August 26—(AP).—The war almost wrecked the United States national tennis championships, by taking what the pros left — Don McNeill Bitsy Grant, Jack Kramer, Joe Hunt, Frank Guernsey and several others — but the Army and Navy are making a pretty good contribution to the entry list.. ..The soldiers are Lieuts. Russell Bobbitt and C. Alphonso Smith, Sgt. Ralph Adair, Cpls. J. Gilbert Hunt, and Gilbert A. Hunt, and Pte. Marvin P. Anthony....Navy men are Ensigns Ronald Edwards and Robert Kerdasha and Lieut. Gardnar Mulloy.

Tough training: Two of the sailors who helped middleweight Fred Apostoli train to whip Saverio Turiello at Norfolk the other night were Joe Maniaci, former Chicago Bears' halfback and Chet Gladchuk, ex-Boston College centre......If Red Cochrane can get leave from the San Diego naval base to fight on the USO card at the Garden on September 10, Fritzie Zivic may finally get that return fight he's been itching for ever since Cochrane took the welter title away from him.

Dot's all, brothers.

Jimmy Hines, who supervised that "remote control" golf tourney for a big insurance company, analyzed the cards of 11,039 golfers who played on courses over 5,800 yards.... He came up with the news that the hardest hole to score on was the first, which required an average of 5.5 strokes and that they needed 5.3 strokes on the 18th....Maybe they were just trying to make both ends meet.

Homers By R[illegible]

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 — (AP).—Babe Ruth sending a baseball in a tremendous arc into the blur of faces in right field....Bill Tilden enlivening the centre court at Wimbledon with petty, ill-tempered histrionics....Jack Dempsey attacking with snarling, tigerish ferocity. Helen Wills blandly sweeping to net victory after net victory....The Four Horsemen....Bobby Jones.

All were a part of that era of wonderful nonsense; the fabulous '20s with their golden showers for the professional athlete, their three-sheet publicity for the amateurs, their flagpole sitters and Bunion Derbys.

They Were Good

Memories of those gaudy, carefree days crowded out the present in the minds of the more than 69,000 fans who watched Babe Ruth and Walter Johnson at the Yankee Stadium last Sunday.

And the Babe did more than revive memories with prodigious clouts.

In a way he was proving that the memory had not played tricks; that the heroes of that era were not just heroes because of the money they received, or the publicity.

They were heroes because they were good.

If they didn't have the records to back them up, you would know they must have been good. The Bambino showed you that.

When a fat, untrained 47-year-old can shake off the rust of inactivity overnight and come out to knock a baseball further than nine-tenths of the young, active players today, you get an idea of what the Babe was like in his hey-day.

And the Babe, in showing that there is only one Babe, by proxy was showing that there is only one Jones, and Tilden, and Wills, and Dempsey.

Other Examples

Over-paid and over-publicized they were, but the fact remains they dominated their fields because they were good, and if the performance of a Babe Ruth coming out of the cobwebs isn't proof enough, you might look at Tilden, who even today can out-point probably all but possibly one or two tennis players for one set; or Jones, a Sunday golfer for a dozen years now, but who has demonstrated that with anything approaching serious practice he would be a factor in any tournament.

In some fields other stars have come along to dominate as did the heroes of the '20's. Ellsworth Vines and, later Don Budge, were kings of all they surveyed in tennis. Alice Marble took over the queenly robe of Helen Wills, and was invincible. Joe Louis rules the fighting heavyweights even more convincingly than Dempsey.

But for some reason or other the earlier heroes overshadow them. There is an intangible something about that era that glamorizes the names of the figures connected with it.

Louis might be better than Dempsey, Byron Nelson or Ben Hogan might be superior to Jones, Miss Marble might be a greater tennis player than Miss Wills, the Minnesota football teams might spot the Four Horsemen twenty points and whip them.

But you can't prove it, and, whether superior or inferior, the names that screamed from the headlines during the tumultuous '20's will remain in the mind as those of super-stars long after those of more recent figures have left a blank space in the memory.

But they were good, make no mistake about that. The Babe showed last Sunday just how good they must have been, although it's true the '20's coudn't have picked a better representative for a show-down.

For, when all is said and done, there is just one of those fabulous figures whose place, it is unanimously agreed, never has been threatened.

His name is Ruth.

Swedes Accept Bid To States

NEW YORK, August 26—AP). — Gunder Haegg and Arne Andersson, the galloping Swedes, have accepted the invitation of the National Amateur Athletic Union to compete in the United States this winter—if a way can be found to bring them here.

Haegg and Andersson both of whom ran a mile in the world record time of 4:06.2 in the past two months, cabled their acceptance to Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A.A.U.

The Swedish athletic governing body, Svenska Idrottsforbundet requested that Erik Lidman, fourth in the 1936 Olympic high hurdles, be permitted to accompany the athletes as manager.

Ferris said he had no idea how the athletes could be brought to the United States from Nazi-surrounded Sweden unless they were flown over the Atlantic.

Wyatt, Cooper Battle 12 Innings; Browns Sneak Up To 3rd Rung To Stir Interest In Final Splurge

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The cup of cheer for St. Louis baseball fans is brimming over today with the Cardinals chopping away viciously at the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Browns installed in third place in the American League.

In the past the people of the metropolis on the Mississippi have shown they could take their baseball or leave it alone. But evidence of the spirit among them now is the combined turnout of 58,848 for two successive night games with the Dodgers this week.

They set a record for a night game in St. Louis Monday night with 25,588 and last night 33,260 jammed into Sportsman's Park to set a new mark—and to see one of the most breath-taking baseball battles of this or any other season.

For 12 innings the struggle was a scoreless standoff between those master hurlers, Whit Wyatt of the Dodgers and Mort Cooper of the Cards. Then things started happening fast. Manager Leo Durocher and Coach Chuck Dressen of the National League champions were banished from the field during an argument with the umpires. In the 13th Brooklyn broke the spell with a run off Cooper and the Red Birds [illegible]d by tying the score against Wyatt.

Larry French, the veteran southpaw who hasn't been beaten by any club except St. Louis, smothered the rally, but in the 14th he and Rookie Les Webber were victimized for the deciding run with the Cards getting a 2-1 triumph on a close play at home plate.

It was the second straight success for the Cardinals in their flourishing bid to overhaul Brooklyn and reduced the margin between the clubs to 5½ games, but it was rivalled by the big stride of the St. Louis Browns far away in Washington, where they captured a twilight-night doubleheader to move into third place in the American League.

Senators Drop Two

Al Hollingsworth and Dennis Galehouse combined in a seven-hit hurling job to stop the Senators 8-1 in the first game and George McQuinn set of a rally in the 11th inning with a single to win the nightcap 3-2.

The St. Louis spurt was helped by the Boston Red Sox, who clamped down twice on the Cleveland Indians 4-3 and 5-1 during a turbulent doubleheader in which the first game went 11 innings, Manager Lou Boureau and two Cleveland players were expelled between games for arguing with umpires, and Ted Williams was booed for going hitless in both contests. This also cost him the league batting leadership. The Indians dropped to fourth place, 1½ games behind the Browns.

The New York Yankees were held to seven hits by Johnny Humphries and scoreless for six innings, but the defence of the Chicago White Sox collapsed to give the world champion three runs in the seventh and Joe Gordon homered with one aboard in the eighth for a 5-3 verdict. Gordon made three hits altogether and passed Williams in the batting race.

At Cincinnati, the eight-game winning streak of Carl Hubbell was broken as Johnny Vander Meer pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-1 victory over the New York Giants, scattering eight hits and fanning 11.

Truett (Rip) Sewell held the Boston Braves to three hits, all of them by Tommy Holmes, and scored his fifth shutout of the season for the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0. The Philadelphia Phils outhit the Chicago Cubs 15-12 and won 6-4 on the strength of a five-run second inning blast against Bill Lee.

Marine Raiders Hit Japs Hard

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Heavily-armed and highly-trained United States Marines, organized into raider battalions, are battling the Japanese in the Solom islands and carried out the Aug. 17 attack on Japanese-held Making island in the Gilbert group of the Pacific.

This announcement today by the Marine Corps was the first official disclosure of the existence of the Marine raiders whose equipment and training methods have been closely-guarded secrets against the time they would go into action.

Their first known attack of these specially-trained devil-dogs was in the Solomons offensive beginning Aug. 7. Their second was in their own show at Makin, the Gilbert island group. Maj. James Roosevelt, son of the President, was second-in-command in the Makin attack, which damaged installations and killed Japanese defenders.

Hand-picked volunteers, the raiders are among the world's toughest fighting men. They're taught to shoot from the hip with whatever gun or pistol is at hand, to fight with knives, to throw daggers accurately, to strangle, gouge, or otherwise put an enemy out of action and they are also developed into capable swimmers and hikers who are expected to reach a maximum speed of seven miles an hour while carrying full packs.

They have been trained particularly in night attacks and have been taught to depend upon such elementary guides as the stars for aid in getting out. They have to know woodlore and how to live out-of-doors for long periods.

Dieppe Worth Things Learned

LONDON, August 26—(CP Cable)—The success of the Dieppe raid must be assessed by the value of the information obtained and not by the material damage inflicted on the enemy, Lt.-Gen. Sir Douglas Bronrigg, military critic for the London Evening News and former Military Secretary for the War Office, wrote in an analysis of the results of the expedition.

"Military history teems with such adventures (as Dieppe)," he wrote. "They often have been necessary but always have been expensive. They are expensive because they are launched with the main object of fighting for information which cannot be obtained any other way."

He said the raid achieved its purpose of forcing the Germans to disclose their plans for defence against invasion and, in particular, showing what air forces they could muster for such a defence.

1941 he made an extended tour by air of the ever-growing Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada.

He bore the air title of air commodore and was attached to the staff of the inspector-general of the R.A.F. The names of his companions on the fatal flight were not announced immediately.

His death was announced in a brief communique just before midnight. It said:

"The Air Ministry deeply regrets to announce that Air Commodore His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent was killed on active service this afternoon when a Sunderland flying boat crashed in North Scotland. His Royal Highness, who was attached to the staff of the inspector-General of the Royal Air Force, was proceeding to Iceland on duty. All the crew of the flying boat also lost their lives."

Married Greek Princess

The marriage of the Duke of Kent to beautiful Princess Marina of Greece in 1934 was one of the most resplendent Royal occasions of the century. They had three children, Prince Edward, 6; Princess Alexandra, 5; and Prince George, who was born last July 4 and bears also the name of Franklin for President Roosevelt, one of his godfathers.

As soon as news of Kent's death was telephoned to King George and Queen Elizabeth at one of their summer residences, the King sent a special messenger to break it to the Duchess at her simple Buckinghamshire house, The Coppins, and arranged for other members of the Royal Family to go there to comfort her.

The news reached the Queen Mother somewhere in the west of England and the Duke's oldest brother, the Duke of Windsor, in the Bahamas.

Messages from all corners of the world flowed into London. Editorials stressed the death as proof that Britain, from her highest family to her most humble, was in the war to the finish.

"He would not have wished for a better epitaph than that so concisely written for him in the Air Ministry communique, 'Killed on active service,'" said the Daily Sketch.

"This war has left no family unscathed," said the Daily Express. "The homes of the poor have been bombed. Buckingham Palace, too. The mothers and wives who have already lost their menfolk on active service will personally share the grief of the Royal Family."

Because of the wartime necessity for secrecy concerning the movements of the Royal Family, the funeral is expected to be private.

Wounded, Battered Raiders Return From Dieppe

other winter, the relatively moderate temperature range of the Soviet deep south indicated the weather there would prove no significant defensive factor.

Freezes start in the Upper Caucasus about December 1, a month later than in the Leningrad region, and minimum temperatures run about 15 degrees fahrenheit, in contrast to the bitter below-zero could such as Hitler's forces encountered to the north last winter. The mean January temperature of Tiflis is 32 degrees, Baku 30 and Batum 43.

Marching from the Main Bend.

The midnight communique abandoned references to fighting "southest of Kletskaya," the sector in which masses of German tanks, artillery and infantry swarmed to hard-won bridgeheads across the Don bend 40 miles from Stalingrad, and it was evident that a major battle was developing on the flat lands between the Don and the Volga above Stalingrad.

But the communique said Soviet troops were repulsing assaults by this upper arm of a Nazi pincer and inflicting huge losses.

"One of our units destroyed 17 tanks and killed 450 Germans during the day," it was announced. "Another unit launched seven counter attacks against numerically superior enemy forces and destroyed 22 German tanks, nine anti-tank guns and 34 trucks and killed approximately 600 German officers and men."

Russian anti-tank guns, grenades and incendiary bottles were used to repulse a number of assaults by the lower arm of the pincer moving up from Kotelnikovski, 95 miles southwest of Stalingrad.

"Fourteen German tanks were disabled and damaged and about 300 Germans were killed," the communique announced.

Long-distance warfare and hand-to-hand fighting were mingled south of Krasnodar, where the invaders apparently seek a pathway to the Caucasian Black Sea coast and Novorossisk, a provisional Russian naval base.

"In fighting near a railway station the Germans lost eight tanks and about 900 officers and men," it was announced.

Russian warships were said to have sunk a 5,000-ton Axis transport in the Black Sea.

Messroom Chatter From Britain

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, August 26—(CP).—Bob Scott is one ground crew man who knows what the boys mean when they talk of a "shaky do." He was on one.

Bob is a flying officer with Canada's famed "Moose" Squadron. His job is squadron engineer. In other words he's top man of the ground crews charged with seeing all planes are in proper shape. But he earned his wings back home and decided to see for himself what it's all about so he went off with the bomber men to Hamburg one night.

"That was a shaky do, all right," said Bob, a former engineer in Ottawa, Toronto, and Kapuskasing, Ont. "The moon was at the full, and after getting there we came home on one engine. I thought we'd spend the night in the drink, but we got back O.K."

Scott is a graduate of the University of Saskatchewan and did a trick with the R.C.A.F. before the war. Then he went to Kapuskasing and used to fly some on Saturday afternoons with the forestry patrol.

When Warrant Officer Norman Wallace Peat of Woodstock, Ont., flying an outmoded Lysander, beat off two German fighters it took only four or five minutes, but he lived a lifetime in the interval......There were only four bullet holes in his plane when he got back....But the chances are he knocked one German down and damaged the other...And when he got home he said: "Oh, boy I'm sure going to enjoy my breakfast to-day."

School Clothes Streamlined

OTTAWA, Aug. 26 (CP)—The Canadian school child will tramp back to the little red schoolhouse next month as a walking advertisement for the streamlined clothing regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Board officials said today that clothing regulations designed to conserve materials now were generally effective and would be applicable to garments for boys and girls returning to school in September with new outfits.

The lad between twelve and sixteen will find his new breeches are bereft of zippers, pleats, cloth belts and half belts where elastic backs are used, tunnel loops and double crotch patches. He can't have a vest even if he wants one. He may only have two side pockets and one back pocket, and the width of his long trousers shall not exceed seventeen inches for size twenty-eight inches waist.

On his longs he will have the advantage over his father who now sports a cuffless suit. The young Canadian — a growing lad — may have cuffs on his trousers but the maximum turn-up must not exceed 1½ inches.

Suits for lads between twelve and sixteen years may be made only in sizes thirty to thirty-four, and must consist of a sack coat and a maximum of two trousers which may be made up either in one or two of the following: long, breech and short.

Boys 'shorts may have a maximum turn-up of 1¼ inches and the inseam must not exceed seven inches for size twenty-eight inches waist. They will be without pleats, slash pockets and cloth belts and half belts where elastic backs are used.

If an overcoat is needed, it will have to be bought without an all-round belt, throat or collar tabs, spare buttons, ticket pocket on the facing, button or buttonhole on the vent, double stitched edges, inverted pleat or fancy back, cuffs or tabs on the sleeves or bellows pocket and facing.

With Interest

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 26—(CP).—On manoeuvres, all troops, including the Canadians, are inclined to do some 'scounging' and one night recently some Canucks made off with half-a-dozen hens. It turned out they had cleaned out a henhouse belonging to a poor, elderly woman. They didn't know this at the time.

The Colonel heard about it and told his men the woman couldn't afford to lose the hens. He deplored the whole escapade. Next morning the old lady found her henhouse filled with hens—20 of them that she had never seen before.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., August 26—(CP)—Three boys who escaped from a London detention home early yesterday were glad when police found them. Two of the boys had just saved an eight-year-old companion from drowning in Pinafore Park and when they returned to their clothing they found someone had stolen everything but their pants.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY

A plea of not guilty was entered in police court this morning by a young man who was charged with having liquor in a place other than a residence. The Crown was not ready to go on with the case and it was adojourned to give the police a chance to get their witnesses.

DISCIPLINE MONTH

An idea seems to be growing among habitues of the coffee shop that September should be a month of self discipline. This means that those undertaking the plan would not smoke, drink beer or whiskey, eat between meals or stay up after 11 o'clock. The idea apparently started with one man who has a cold every winter, and he claims if he disciplines himself during September, taking a tonic at the same time, he will build his resistance up, and improve his general health to the point where he will probably go through the winter without a cold.

SIXTY AT CLINIC

Almost 60 donors passed through the Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic Wednesday morning, setting a new high, over the previous record of 50 in a morning. Thirty-four men had given transfusions before 10:30. The factories are still sending a number of men each day, along with the Training Centre and Lindsay. Women of the Immaculate Conception Church and the Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E., were on hand to prepare breakfast and pass it around to the donors. The doctors acting at the Clinic were: Dr. C. M. Scott, Dr. G. R. Scott, Dr. Prust, Dr. J. M. McCulloch and Dr. D. W. Clark.

WATCHING ECLIPSE

Armour Hill was a favorite spot on Tuesday evening for Peterborough motorists who wanted to watch the total eclipse of the moon. The big plateau at the top of the hill was ringed with cars, and the people had a front row seat for the sight. A few small clouds interfered with the eclipse at times but generally it could be seen perfectly. The eclipse started about ten o'clock and became total a few minutes after 11.

OPEN LINDSAY "EX"

Hon. M. F. Hepburn will officially open the Lindsay Exhibition. Its four days are September 16 to the 19. Conklin's Midway and the Royal Canadian Air Force Band of Manning Pool, Toronto, and the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps Band of Kingston are several of many features.

SERVED AT DIEPPE.

At least one Peterborough member of the 3rd Field Park Canadian Engineers, participated in the attack on Dieppe last Wednesday. Mrs. John Dunford, 599 Patterson Street, states that in newspaper pictures of Canadians returning from the raid she was able to identify her husband, Sapper John Dunford who enlisted with the Engineers here two years ago. Sapper Dunford's home was formerly in Mount Julian.

BEAUTIFUL DAHLIAS.

Although G. W. Downer, 125 Morrow Street, has been growing prize-winning dahlias for years, he has never had better luck with them than he's had this year. Two beautiful blooms that he brought into the Examiner on Wednesday were 12 inches and 11¾ inches in diameter. For a number of years Mr. Downer won first prize in the Peterborough and Lindsay Exhibitions and in the Peterborough Horticultural Show. He is planning to send some of his flowers to the Lindsay Exhibition again this year.

FOUR DRUNK CHARGES

There were four charges of drunkenness before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning. A transient who claimed that he had never been in court before but admitted that he had been charged with that offence elsewhere pleaded for leniency but was fined $10 and costs and the same fate greeted a local man who also pleaded guilty to a similar charge. Another man succeeded in getting an adjournment and in the fourth case Inspector Reid said that it was a border-line case and the police would offer no evidence, which meant of course, that the accused was home free.

Served As Priest 51 Years Hundreds Mourn Beloved Prelate

The third grave to be opened within the last six months in the community area for departed priests in St. Peter's Cemetery, received this morning the remains of the late Monsignor William J. McColl, beside the ground only recently broken by the deaths of Rev. Paul Costello and Rev. P. J. Galvin.

His funeral from St. Peter's Cathedral was largely attended by former parishioners and friends from this city, Ennismore and Lindsay, and clergy of the Diocese of Peterborough and several other sections of the province. The funeral mass at the Cathedral was sung by Rev. V. J. McAuley of Campbellford, who has just been appointed successor to the late Monsignor McColl as parish priest at Lindsay. He was assisted by Rev. P. P. Butler of Kinmount as deacon, and Rev. E. T. Grant of Lindsay as subdeacon.

Rev. Gregory Wolff of the Cathedral staff was master of ceremonies, and Rev. Leo Rishea of Wooler was thurifer.

The pall-bearers were Rev. J. J. O'Brien of this city; Rev. J. J. McCarthy of Douro; Rev. Dr. P. J. Kelly, Cobourg; Rev. V. J. McFadden, Downeyville; Rev. V. J. Gillogly, Ennismore, and Rev. S. J. Coffeyy, Bowmanville.

Diocesan clergy were numerously represented with His Excellency Bishop O'Connor, who was assisted by Rev. J. T. Finn and Rev. V. J. Corkery.

His Excellency Archbishop M. J. O'Brien of Kingston, former Bishop of Peterborough, was attended by Very Reverend M. J. O'Leary, V.F., Bracebridge, and Rev. J. J. Guiry of Port Hope. Mourning dignatories of the church from outside the diocese were Rev. James Fuller, C. SS. R. Provincial General of the English Province of the Redemptorist Order of Canada; Right Reverend F. J. O'Sullivan of Peterborough; Right Reverend Leo J. Byrne, Kingston; Right Reverend E. M. Brennan, V.G., president of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto; Rev. T. McLoughlin, president of St. Michael's College, Toronto; and Rev. D. Forestell, also of St. Michaels.

The late Monsignor McColl had been parish priest at Lindsay for the last 14 years until his resignation last Easter caused by declining health.

Tribute to the memory and long service of 51 years in the priesthood was expressed in a eulogy and sermon by Rev. Dean J. B. Ferguson of Warkworth.

"This is the third occasion within the last eight months on which we have been called together to assist at the funeral mass for one of our beloved priests," Dean Ferguson said.

"While I am not anxious to speak at funerals, I am glad of the opportunity to say a grateful word in behalf of him who has passed on. It is only a few months since the body of the beloved and kindly Father Costello was here in our midst; and then the body of the saintly and scholarly Father Galvin. Now, only a month later, we are here again in the presence of that grand old warrior of the Cross, Monsignor McColl.

Fifty-one years in the priesthood is a long time, and few attain that period of service.

I have known Monsignor McColl for thirty years, because it was on May 24, thirty years ago, that I knocked at the door of his rectory and received from him a welcome that stilled the heart of a worried man. From that day I had always found him to be a glorious warrior in the things of God. Many of you have reason to bless God in having at one time Monsignor McCall as you pastor. His 51 years were spent in four parishes: Ennismore, Lindsay, St. Peter's Cathedral, and the Immaculate Conception. He was a man of sound judgment and good counsel, a man of serious mind and kindly, generous heart. He had that quality of heart that could take you aside and give you the strongest and sweetest advice that would take you safely through. We, his brother priests, feel that we are the poorer for his passing."

Dean Ferguson spoke of the late Monsignor as a manly man and manly priest, "and as such we honor his memory and his work. Looking back into the past, I recall Monsignor McColl and Archbishop O'Brien when they were priests together in Peterborough, and their earnest discussions for the upbuilding of this diocese. They were close friends, and I know the Archbishop put great trust in the judgment and advice of Monsignor McColl, who had a loving place in his heart for his superior. I am glad to see Archbishop O'Brien here today, evidence that he never forgets a friend, and tribute to a faithful and worthy priest."

In closing, Dean Ferguson spoke of the honors Monsignor McColl had received from the Holy See and also from his bishop; extended sympathy to the bereaved relatives, and asked the people to remember the departed priest in their prayers. It might be that his life and service here had prepared for him a direct admission into the presence of God, that he had earned a glorious welcome to the feet of the Saviour. If, however, there remained for him the purification of purgatory, his friends of this life could assist him to his final reward by their prayers.

Woollens Beaten By Watercrafts

The Peterborough Canoe Watercraft garnered their third straight win last night in an Industrial League fixture at the Woollens Field when they defeated the Dominion Woollens squad 11 to 5.

The Watercrafts were never in danger, playing bang-up ball and getting good support from all departments.

Killingbeck, on the slab for the Boatmakers, pitched 5-hit ball, while Hillier on the mound for the Woollens allowed 13 bingles. Errors were costly for the Woolmakers and the Sail Boys took advantage of these breaks. The garden men of both squads really did stellar work spearing some fast drives. Loucks, playing the initial sack for the Woollens handled the job like a veteran. Teams:

Woollens: Davies, Cavanaugh, McCarrol, Hillier, D. Hillier, Cacavella, Lester, Cavanaugh, Loucks.

Drowning Japan

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. August 26—(AP).— When the Tennessee Valley authority completes its giant Fontana Dam in 1944, there won't be any Japan—that is, Japan, N.C. The unincorporated mountain town will be 50 feet beneath the water of Fontana Reservoir.

Threshing Is Held Up In Many Areas

The common note running through the county reports to the Ontario Department of Agriculture for the week ending Monday is the diapason of the harvest. "Full swing," "threshing outfits and combines have been working to full capacity"—these are typical expressions which the [illegible] representatives throughout the province have used this week in reflecting the changing rural scene.

Peterborough says most of the grain is cut, but there is some delay in getting the threshing done on account of the shortage of manpower. Rain is required now to get the plowing done. There is very little alsike seed.

Fifty per cent. of the Hastings crop is either threshed, stacked or in the barn. Flow of milk is holding up well.

Grain yields have been very satisfactory in Prince Edward County. Most of the spring sown grain in Victoria is cut, and the second cut of alfalfa and red clover looks promising for seed on some farms.

The period of apprehension is past. Weather can do no harm now to the season's grain, but it can help to wind up the year by ample moisture for the corn and root crops and the big plowing job that is now being contemplated.

Cornborer damage is more serious than usual in Frontenac. Threshing is about half completed in Dundas and Stormont. Buckwheat crop has improved and the corn crop is very promising. Indications point to a bumper apple crop in the St. Lawrence valley.

Lennox-Addington says less than the usual amount of after harvest plowing has been done owing to the lack of help. Renfrew finds a big demand for young sows for fall breeding. "There is almost a record production of feed grain and there will likely be a heavy increase in hog production."

Halton reports that another ten days of favorable weather should complete the harvest job. In Lambton the spring seeding of clover fields is showing a splendid catch.

Several little blue notes are heard in the northern area. Weather is still bad, Kenora says, but pastures are exceedingly good. "Quite a few sheep have been killed by bears around Cochrane, where binders have been running from daylight to dark.

Huron farmers are increasing the sheep population 19.5 per cent. by enlarging their flocks. Turnips, soy beans, white beans, sugar beets, field corn and canning corn all promise splendid yields.

Lanark farmers are increasing their flocks by 20 per cent. "Every available threshing mill is in action and help is scarce. Most threshing outfits are not running to capacity due to shortage of labor. Every available retired farmer and town resident is helping."

Lincoln says in part: "Employees at McKinnon Industries will in many cases help pick peaches for four days, August 26-29, while stock-taking is being done at the plant. Canning factories are also taking large numbers of women who are being appealed to through the press, radio and from the pulpit."

NAZI SPIES IN SWEDEN

Three Nazi spies, charged with transmitting information about Sweden to Germany, were sentenced to prison terms by the Gothemburg court.

Pastoral Changes Are Announced

Three pastoral changes in the diocese of Peterborough were announced by Bishop O'Connor on Sunday. Rev. V. J. McAuley of Campbellford is to succeed the late Monsignor McColl of Lindsay. Rev J. P. Collins is transferred from Trout Creek to Campbellford and Rev. James Greenan, assistant priest at St. Peter's Cathedral, will be assistant at Trout Creek.

The announcements were made on Sunday morning, and did not in any way anticipate the death later that day of Monsignor McColl, former pastor at Lindsay, who resigned his parish six months ago.

Rev. Father McCauley was born in the Wooller parish, the same section from which Monsignor McColl came. He was for years assistant priest at the Church of the Sacred Heart and parish priest at Ennismore.

New Ration Book Has Five Spare Coupons

The new ration books are arriving in the mail to-day and many people are asking just what effect this is going to have on the coupons still left from the temporary cards. Bill Foley, of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said this morning that the coupons on the temporary ration card issued on July 1 are still valid. Some people have been under the impression that the temporary card coupons expired on August 24.

The ABCDE coupons for tea or coffee, valid on and after August 3, can be used any time. As for sugar ration coupons which were valid on successive dates the last becoming valid August 24, they can be used any time after that date.

Farmers who were planning on getting extra tea and coffee for the threshers are just out of luck, as there will be no extra allowance made. The only way they can have it is if each man brings along his own. In the case of sugar, a special extra amount can be secured on a purchase voucher, but absolutely no tea or coffee.

In the new books that have been issued there are five different sets of colored coupons, red, green blue, brown and black. The red is marked for sugar and the rest are listed as spares. This recalls to mind the statement made by several Government sources recently that there would be no extra rationing for at least another three months. The red, green and blue coupons are for a two weeks' supply each, and the brown and black coupons are each good for one week's supply.

A Nice Muskie

DRESDAN, Ont., August 26—(CP)—Dresden's newest "muskie champion" is diminutive Mrs. Clarence Marsh, who, unassisted, landed the largest muskie ever taken from the Sydenham River. The fish was 48½ inches long, only 11 inches shorter than Mrs. Marsh.

New Crossing Guard

NASHUA, N. H., August 26 —(AP)—The Boston and Maine Railroad is going to assign a woman—for the first time—to tend a grade crossing. He is Mrs. Andrea L. Hogan mother of three children and hitherto employed in the B. and M. accounting office.

Filling Out Income Tax Forms Proves Great Worry To Women

There are stories by the hundreds about the special qualities women need in business offices, as wives and mothers, and career girls, but nothing is ever said about that certain thing they must have when dealing with that bug-a-boo the income tax.

A woman may be the shining executive head in some business office, but just as soon as she is confronted with an income tax form, she is relegated to the ranks of her sister workers who find themselves sailing on an uncharted sea.

At first glance the form doesn't appear to be too complicated. Right off the bat there are the usual name and address questions. "Hmm," she says, "not bad so far." Then she scans the next row of questions concerning married men. Nothing there. Married women? Still O.K. Why there's nothing to it. She covers children and dependents with the same speed and ease, almost convinced that there is nothing for her.

Then suddenly the wizard of the typewriter or the switchboard hits the jackpot under the heading of savings. This is something like it. Then as her eyes travel down the printed page she sees questions as to the number of pay periods in the year and additional questions that may require a little figuring and she begins to waver.

Casually turning the sheet over, she is confronted with a list of printed matter that her conscience drives her to peruse. This is a woman's undoing. By the time she has read four or five parts under section 2 or 3 her mental calculator is doing the dipsy doodle.

With the dawn of each new day she sits down to the job with ever lessening enthusiasm and it is a safe bet that it ends up with father, the boy friend or the accountant getting the job. Then her worries are over till the next time. How about it, girls?

Motor Car Gets Ducking In Trent Canal Driver Has No License, Pays $10 Fine

Gerard J. Bullied, owner of the automobile which plunged into the Trent Canal below the Liftlock last week was fined $10 and $2.50 costs in police court this morning when a written plea of guilty was entered in his behalf to charge of driving an automobile without having a chauffeur's license or driver's permit.

It was explained that Bullied had a 60-day beginner's permit but that there was no licensed driver in the car with him, as the traffic regulations require.

John Billows admitted travelling faster than 40 miles an hour on Highway 7, thus running foul of the wartime speed regulations and on a written plea of guilty he was fined $15 and $2.50 costs.

Failure to give another car its proper share of the road cost Harry Falls $5 and $2.50 costs. He too pleaded guilty by proxy.

Alton Johnston was nicked $1 and $2 costs for failing to stop before entering a through street.

Soldiers Display Musical Talents On Program At Training Centre

The local concert association can stop worrying about getting artists for next year's season, for the boys at the local Training Centre have enough and to spare of some of the finest talent this side of New York of almost every variety. With no fuss and formality the lads down there give out with the best they have (which is plenty good) just for the sheer joy of having a good time with the gang. And don't think their audience doesn't lap it up. At closing time they have to be almost driven away from the piano.

At what was badly misnamed an "amateur show," Tuesday evening, the program ranged from the hottest swing to the finest in classical works and there was just as much enthusiasm for the last as the first. Talent of every type was utilized and their audience maintained an even interest in all of them. A couple of the boys who were called on impromptu, for fear they'd duck out, and who had something new to deliver, had the heart-warming knowledge that their buddies stood behind them all of the way. It was a question of just who was proudest, the performer at a job well done, or his friends. There's real co-operation there.

Under the capable direction of Adjutant Buckley, of the Salvation Army, the musical program was carried through from start to finish with no slow-ups, before an audience of close to 500 jammed in the Sally Ann Hut. Even some of the officers were slipping into the back seats unnoticed.

Brilliant Impressions

It would be difficult to pick out the best from amongst a galaxy of musical stars, each of whom was tops in his own particular line. Pte. Arthur Evans gave a brilliant performance of impressions of "Learn How To Play In Ten Easy Lessons," along with a running commentary. His theme throughout was "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," and what the artist did with that piece before it was finished was amazing. By the simple method of changing time and tonal expression, he produced almost unrecognizable versions of the original in march time, hymn form, swing, funeral march, "swing at the Peterborough Camp after ten easy lessons" and a music box arrangement that was really grand.

Pte. Norman Thomas, who has plenty of that thing called personality, took the spotlight for a time with his guitar and songs. With a chap as well known as this one seemed to be, only an intrepid man would come to the platform. The razzing they take from their pals, but for them that is half the fun. Pte. Thomas not only had his hecklers in the audience but some of his pal (?) on the platform doing a take-off to the words of his songs that kept the audience in kinks. This soldier likes to do songs that give him a chance for expression and an Irish comedy number, "Pat Malone," left nothing to be desired.

Nothing To It

Pte. Sid Levey, who according to his friends has never been seen with a note of music, was another performer, although such a description would amuse him a good deal. He was equally at home with Chopin's "Nocturne" and "The Jumping Jive." His favorite pose is to lean back in his chair with a cigarette hanging out of the corner of his mouth, and hands rippling over the keys as he nonchalantly produced some of the most beautiful music of the evening.

Pte. Paul Rosa, a great favorite with the boys, is a master hand at the accordion and he, too, has great versatility. He started off with his number and soon he was joined by Pte. Levey, who although busy talking to two or three people, still had time to keep an eye on the lad in the front of the stage and play too. In his second number, which was a Tango, two of his pals joined in with a guitar and the sounds effects of the clicking castanets. The chap with the latter proudly announced before the show began, that while he might be no musician, he was sure going to be the champion noise maker of the evening. Maybe he was at that.

Ptes. Arthur Evans and Bert Crockett made the keyboard dance with their sparkling rendition of "Somebody Stole My Gal," and after some persuasion froh the platform "Bert" returned to solo in a couple of speed numbers that left his audience dizzy, even as they marvelled at his performance.

They Made Him Do It

One of the best stunts of the evening was given by Pte. Bud Lemar with his guitar and hillbilly songs. It seems that Bud's talent was not known very much to anyone but the gang he bunks with, and they decided it was high time the rest of the boys got in on it. But it took forcable persuasion and threats of "extra P.T. tomorrow" to get him up on the platform for his first public performance. While he protested his lack of ability, willing hands grasped him and carried him up to the platform, where he almost passed out with nervousness in his first number, but he did a swell job, and the boys went crazy over it and its a cinch that he'll soon be incorporated into the musical gang. All the time he was playing the faces of the boys behind him showed very plainly that they were mentally placing him in some of the arrangements to be done in the future.

The C.W.A.C. girls were not left out in the cold either. Pte. Beatrice Curtis, petite red-haired soldier lassie, charmed them all with her songs, "We'll Meet Again" and "Johnny Doughboy." After she had sung both songs, the audience joined in with all they had—and that was plenty.

The only outside talent present was Mrs. Millard and her daughter, Miss Jean Millard, who gave some fine examples of folk and toe dancing.

Diplomacy Needed

Adjutant Buckley confided that in the matter of getting performers it was necessary to use a little finesse. When walking around the camp you hear a lot of talent that is kept out of the public eye, and if someone just walked in and asked them to perform they'd meet with a flat refusal. But after they get used to seeing those in charge hanging around, they sort of accept the idea. Anyway, that is his theory.

Informality was the keynote of the whole evening, and everyone there enjoyed himself to the utmost and they left wanted more. Sgt. Arthur Hudson was an able assistant for Adjt. Buckley and kept everyone in kinks with his amusing antics. The boys of the camp chorus should come in for their share of the laurels, too, for they did a splendid job.

Any of the boys who find themselves named as privates when they should be something else, needn't come gunning for The Examiner, but start on the Master of Ceremonies, who quite forgot to signify in his introductions as to anyone's rank. Who want first shot?

Break Price Ceiling Stiff Fines Follow

The total fines across Canada last week for twenty-four violations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in price ceiling rentals, retail deliver and sugar rationing amounted to $597.50.

Three wholesale butchers who exceeded the maximum price of beef were fined $50 and $100 plus costs for their infringement. There were three dealers found disobeying the sugar rationing rules, 11 in connection with rentals, and a Quebec firm was fined $10 for raising the price of bicycle tires.

Railway Worker Goes On Wild Ride

A fine of $20 and $1.75 costs was imposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning upon Alferd Derrett after the elderly Havelock railway worker pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving.

Derrett was arrested Tuesday night by Provincial Constable Archie Grayling of Havelock and Chief W. Parcels of Norwood after an accident on Highway 45.

Giving evidence this morning after Derrett had entered a plea of guilty, Officer Grayling said that Derrett's car had travelled for 121 feet in lose gravel on the shoulder of the road before going into a four-foot ditch, then 81 feet along the ditch to break off a 20-foot cedar tree and run 21 feet further before turning over. Beyond a shaking up neither Derrett nor another man in the car with him at the time was hurt, the officer stated. It was the first time Derrett had been in trouble.

In imposing the fine which carried with it an alternate of fifteen days in jail, Magistrate Langley announced that he would not make any order suspending the accused's driving license.

Bahr's Counsel Wife To Fight Sentence As Spy

NEWARK, N.J. August 26 —(AP). — Herbert K. F. Bahr, who chose to cast his lot with Nazi Germany as an espionage agent in the United States, his adopted country, awaited to-day a Federal Court sentence which may forfeit his life.

Bahr, whose stoical attitude during six days of trial on a charge of conspiracy to commit espionage was broken only when a jury of six women and six men returned its verdict last night, will be sentenced on September 2. He is liable to a maximum penalty of death or a prison term of up to 30 years.

The former Buffalo athlete's lips quivered and he dropped his head when his conviction was announced. His wife, whom he left behind when he went to Germany more than three years ago as an exchange student collapsed a short time later, then said she had abandoned her plans to divorce him and would fight to win his freedom.

Bahr's court-assigned counsel, Frederic M. P. Pearse, announced he would appeal the verdict.

Wallace Point Regatta Helps War Fund

In this district, which abounds with all the natural facilities for water sports and the holding of regattas, these events were of frequent occurrence during the summer holiday months. With the necessity for rationing of gasoline, this year they have been few and far between, for promoters of such events must have one eye at least on the financial return in order to make ends meet.

The Wallace Point Canoe Club have for the past twelve years held a regatta at Wallace Point, and for the last five years a real swimming contest has become part of the show, with two major trophies, one donated by Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., for the mile swim for men, and the other by Senator J. J. Duffus for the half-mile swim for women being presented for competition.

In common with all other sports organizations, this club has suffered in the loss of personnel through war service, besides a great deal of its interested patronage, and last year, they were barely able to break even, so it stands out a great deal to their credit, that this season when conditions which enter into the successful holding of such an event have if anything become harder, that they should be able to net a little over $21, which from their small club funds they have made up to $25 and given it to help the victims of air raids over Britain through the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund.

Assisting them in this cause were the Peterborough Canoe Co., Captain H. Cardwell, Bill Taylor, Western Clock Co., McLeod's Drug Store, Mendel Braund, Grant and Loucks, Johnston's Radio, Walkwel Shoe Store, Miss Jane Horsfield, Ben Swartz, Isador Black's Men's Wear, Centre Theatre, George Robertson, Regent Theatre, Capitol Theatre, Deyell's Book Store, Dick Raine, G. C. Daly, Cowan's Arcade, Howard's Men's Wear, Louis Tobacco Store, Paris Cafe, Dinty's Inn, Coleman Bros., H. S. Routley, Uptown Silk Shop, Mrs. Eason, Outram and Co., C. Lacheur, N. Elliott, Dr. H. M. Yelland, Ideal Dairy, Corner's Garage, Forbes and Sayers and Odette Bros. Boathouse, who gave donations to help out the prize list.

The committee responsible for the successful holding of the regatta was composed of W. Hogan, president; D. Wilson, vice-president; Mrs. A. Cardwell, secretary-treasurer; Gordon Minty, swim instructor; Don and Jim Forbes, Noel and Craig Eason, Bob Lynch, Jim Harris, Doug Mortimer and Lloyd Byam, among whom, outstanding work was contributed by Gordon Minty, both in the matter of organizing detail and the successful running of the various events for which there was a full entry list.

For the 5th time in a short period, J. F. Pilley of 39 Ware Street has sent in his personal donation of $5, which demonstrates a keen personal regard that those who have suffered through air raids over Britain should have help in their time of need, an act which might well serve as an inspiration for many others to follow suit.

The highest amount ever received from a penny box collection came in, when the box at the Empress Hotel, in which the proprietor, Chris Graham, takes a keen interest, was collected by the secretary of the fund to yield an amount of $14.50.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, August 27

Continued dangers and difficulties are noted among the astral forces, together with open as well as subtle shrewd and treacherous situations that may call for most discreet, calm, well organized and concentrated behavior if grave consequences are to be sidestepped or judiciously vanquished. Any impetuous, rash, violent, precipitate or irregular action would but enhance the danger whereas circumspect, regular and orthodox tactics may attract the assistance and friendly cooperation of those in high places.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate some important developments in their affairs which may turn the tide from grave dangers, difficulties, disturbances, loss and misunderstandings, by their own discreet, restrained, regular and collected conduct rather than erratic, impetuous and violent acts or indulgences. A safe and sane course may attract the interest and friendship of powerful friends and collaborators.

A child born on this day should have a very ardent, passionate and excitable nature, but will be generous, friendly and worthily ambitious and constructive.

In these war times, when so many of the boys who are going to the front are asking girls to wait for them, the question of the long engagement becomes paramount to both men and women. Much, of course, is to be said on both sides of the subject.

There is the sentimental sides that makes a girl feel she will be bound closer to the boy and more sure of him if she is fettered to him by an engagement ring; even if the engagement never ends in marriage she will have had her little bit of romance to remember as long as she lives. And for the boy it answers the eternal masculine demand for some woman who belongs to him, who will be watching and waiting and praying for his return, and who will make all the hardships and dangers he has to undergo worthwhile because he will feel that he is fighting for HER.

And there is the realistic angle that makes them both know that at their time of life they are in a state of flux, when their emotions and their tastes are unstable, and that they are making vows they may not be able to keep. They know that the war will change them both and that when they meet again they may not even want each other. So the more prudent of them wonder just how wise it is to gamble on a future that is so uncertain.

Now, being a sentimentalist myself I hate to disturb love's young dreams by warning the youths and maidens who are thinking of entering into a long engagement that it is one of the most dangerous and generally disastrous experiences which a human being can undertake. It calls for a patience a perseverance, a lack of imagination, a staidness and a general adhesiveness that few of us possess. Love loses its freshness if kept too long waiting. The wedding food should be eaten while it is still hot. Otherwise it is as flat and tasteless as any other meal that has been too long cooking.

A long engagement is a hazardous venture, whether a couple are separated or whether they live on the same street. If they are parted, it is almost inevitable that they should grow away from each other and lose interest in each other, and that when they come together again they are disappointed and disillusioned. They have had different experiences, been in a different environment, known different people and they meet as strangers who have nothing to say to each other and who bore each other because they no longer have anything in common. They are not even fair in their judgment of each other because each has built up, in separation, an ideal Prince Charming or Glamour Girl who really never existed.

On the other hand, if the engaged couple see each other continually, week after week and year after year, they wear off the bloom of romance because romance is an airy-fairy thing made of dreams that will not endure being hacked about.

Also an engaged couple stand to each other in an anomalous position that gets on the nerves of both. They are neither bond nor free They cannot even define to themselves what are their duties and obligations to each other and so they face a condition that is peculiarly full of jealousies and misunderstanding and bickerings.

Furthermore, we naturally get tired of waiting for a thing too long, no matter how much we want it at first; so love and romance peter out. And when the long-engaged couple finally do get married, it is only too often just because they have become a habit to each other and because everybody expected it of them, rather than because they desire it themselves.

Many a man stumbles to the altar on cold feet because when he left home to seek his fortune he asked some girl to wait for him and after, as the phrase goes, she had given him the best years of her life" keeping her promise to him, he felt in honor bound to marry her, and knew that all their friends and acquaintances would consider him a heel if he didn't. And many a woman marries a man just because he is her only salvation from being an old maid, and the things in her hope chest are getting yellow with age. But there is no happiness in such marriages.

So I would say to all youngsters who are debating the long engagement problem: Don't. Wait until you are ready to marry. Then choose your mate.

Better Be Cautious.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm a young man in my twenties. My parents are leaders in their community in church and professional circles. My sisters and brothers married well. I was graduated from Dartmouth cum laude, and form Harvard medical school; finished four years as a resident in surgery; at present am beginning my work in the office of a well-known surgeon. Am well off financially.

In the hospital I met a nurse and fell in love with her. She is not pretty, but is a good mixer and good company. When she was 6 years of age her parents were divorced, the mother being of such a character the courts woud not let her have the children. Her mother afterward remarried, but never did anything for her children, who were raised by their grandmother. The father degenerated into a drunken tramp. My parents say that with such a family background this girl is not the type befitted to my life or to make a happy marriage, but I tell them I am not marrying the family. Do you think it a risk for me to marry a girl out of my social class and with such a background.

ADAM.

Answer: It is foolish for a man to say that when he marries a girl he doesn't marry her family. To begin with, we are all creatures of our heredity and environment, and in addition to that there is no way by which we can separate our lives from the parents and the brothers and sisters of our husbands and wives and the claims they make upon us.

The shadow of this girl's mother will always fall across your life if you marry her. As long as he lives you'll be fishing her drunken father out of the gutter. And you will always be looking for taints in your own children's characters that they may have inherited from her side of the house, just as you will be proud to recognize the fine qualities that your youngsters have enherited from your forbears.

It always adds another risk to the many dangers of marriage to marry outside of your own class, but some-

Depth Charges Toss Patrol Boats Like Corks

By FRANK LOWE

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Aug. 26—(CP).—The "contact" flag fluttered at the masthead of the Canadian corvette. It meant battle, for danger threatened the convoy.

It meant the long ears of the "Asdic" had reached out under the gray Atlantic waters like a doctor's stethoscope, picked up the faint sound of a submarine, and was guiding the eager corvette to it as unerringly as though it were following a blazed trail.

Soon the depth charges would be rumbling. A group of hungry sailors and one reporter, about to start on a stack of pancakes, ran for action stations. The alarm bells clanged.

We were east-bound, with a convoy of merchant ships under the protecting wing of Canadian corvettes and destroyers. I was on the first leg of a two-way crossing of the Atlantic aboard convoy-escorting corvettes, and this was the first time the corvette was really showing its teeth.

Our vessel hurtled at top speed for a few minutes and then the skipper gave an order that sent five plump depth charges over the stern. Seconds later, the corvette jumped like a scared rabbit. The water astern quivered like jelly, and five jets spouted from the sea.

Singing At His Post.

Back on her tracks the corvette plunged, shipping tons of water as she quartered the sea like a hound on the scent. A Calgary seaman stood at his post by the depth charge rack, soaked to the skin, and sang, "Why don't we do this more often."

He got the right answer. This time 10 cans of the deadly TNT were loosed, six over the stern and four catapulted over the sides to splash in the ocean about 40 feet off the ship. The sturdy hunter jumped as though kicked by a giant and reeled drunkenly. Down in the "glory hole" the stokers must have thought we hit a mid-Atlantic reef.

Dirt and dust rained down from the boilers; lumps of asbestos flaked and fell from the pipes, and glass gauges splintered with the shock.

But the last 10 charges apparently did the job. The asic, that mystifying device that probes out the hidden submarine, could hear nothing. But whether or not a sub actually was smashed may never be known.

Over on the other side of the convoy, other ships were mixing it up. All evening our ship trembled at intervals as one or another of the corvettes or destroyers let loose a load of underwater death.

The screen of darting warcraft and their thunderous depth charges kept the enemy at his distance. Not a ship was touched.

However, the pancakes didn't fare so well. Someone took advantage of the cannonading to slip into the galley and make off with the entire batch.

There's Realism In Offensive Drill Of U.S. Men Overseas

News, Magazine Ceiling Lifted

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP).—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced today removal of the over-all price ceiling from Canadian and imported newspapers, magazines and periodical publications in general, leaving the press "free to adjust rates and safeguard its revenues."

The exemption applies to newsstand and street sale prices and to subscription rates. Advertising rates already are exempt.

In announcing its decision, the board said a careful survey by the administrator of publishing, printing and allied industries showed that while larger revenues had offset higher operating costs in 1940 and 1941, revenues recently had suffered a "serious decline."

"There are too many variations of circumstances to deal with each case individually so as to maintain a control of price," the board said. "Accordingly, it has been decided to remove the over-all price ceiling and leave the press free to adjust rates and safeguard its revenues so that the freedom and independence of the press may be preserved.

"This decision brings the Canadian regulations into conformity with those of the United States, where newspapers, magazines and periodicals were from the outset exempted from the price ceiling."

Urge All Possible Savings

Certain economies were believed possible in the publishing field and all publishers were being urged, "individually and collectively," to keep prices down and conserve materials and labor as far as possible. Publishers were expected to try to maintain service at existing prices where possible, although it was recognized that economies were not always possible or did not afford any great saving, particularly in the case of rural newspapers and weeklies.

But competitive conditions within the industry, the announcement said, "make it highly unlikely that price adjustments can be made in any unreasonable manner."

In outlining its reasons for removing the price ceiling, the board said it was impossible to establish a common measurement of value for all publications or any general principle governing price increases. It was also impractical to provide a direct Government subsidy for sections of the press unable to operate under a direct price ceiling, "since a subsidy of this kind would not be compatible with the democratic principle of a free press."

Second Solomon Scrap Is 4th U.S. Tangle With Japs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(AP).—The current battle for the Solomon Islands is the fourth in which United States and Japanese naval forces have tangled in full-scale actions.

The Japanese first felt the might of the navy March 10 when carrier-based aircraft raided their Australian invasion bases at Lae and Salamaua, New Guinea. That was the start of the campaign which flared two months later into the battle of the Coral Sea. The New Guinea action, however, was in itself a raid and not a battle.

The first real engagement between the two Pacific naval powers was fought May 4 to 8, beginning when American aircraft attacked a concentration of Japanese ships in the harbor of Tulagi, Solomon Islands, and wiped it out. This was followed shortly afterward by a duel between aircraft carriers, including the American aircraft carrier Lexington.

The result of the Coral Sea battle, including also the score of the Lae and Salamua raid which preceded the Coral Sea campaign, was for the Japanese 15 ships sunk, two probably sunk and 20 damaged. They lost their big new aircraft carrier Ryukaku and their carrier Shokaku was burning violently when American observers last sighted it.

The United States had no losses as a result of the New Guinea raid and the battle of the Coral Sea cost the aircraft carrier Lexington, the destroyer Simms and the tanker Neosho.

The 2nd Main Scrap

The second big battle for mastery of a sector of the Pacific developed June 3 when the Japanese attacked Midway Island. It was broken off by June 6 when United States airmen reported they could no longer find any trace of the fleeing enemy. At Midway the Japs lost more than 20 warships sunk or damaged, including four aircraft carriers—Kaga, Akagi, Soryu and Hiryu.

American forces had the aircraft carrier Yorkton put out of action and the destroyer Hammann sunk and at that cost they had secured, at least for a time, the safety of the all-important operations centre at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The third naval battle was the first fought in the Solomon Islands. It developed and ended the night of Aug. 8 and 9 and was the first regular engagement of the war in which United States and Japanese warships slugged it out at close range with regular naval guns. Both Midway and Coral Sea had been carrier actions.

The results of the first battle of the Solomons have not been reported fully. By or about that time however, the United States invasion forces had lost at least one cruiser sunk and two cruisers, two destroyers and one transport damaged. These losses apparently were suffered chiefly in the battle, but Japanese losses could not be determined in the darkness.

Prior to March 10 American units, chiefly submarines and destroyers with a few cruisers and a squadron of seaplane patrol bombers, had at various times met the enemy in the campaign of the China Sea, but the actions were either small, isolated and in the nature of raids or else, as in the case of the battle of Java Sea, the American units were a part of some general Allied force.

Winter Will Be No Aid To Russia In The Caucasus

By EDDY GILMOUR

MOSCOW, Aug. 26—(AP). — A sharp wind whistled down the streets last night and a shuddering chambermaid slammed shut the windows, muttering:

"Osien ve vozdukhe."

That mouthful means: "Autumn is in the way.

The long Russian winter is on its way.

In lots of places, winter is just winter, but in Russia—as in no other place on earth—it is something that you conquer, or it conquers you. Hitler found out a lot about it last year; Napoleon learned it painfully more than a century before.

This year Hitler launched his offensive in South Russia for two reason: He wanted oil and he wanted to escape the Russian winter.

Unfortunately, winter should not be a great ally of the Red army in the south as it was before Moscow. The weather there except in the heights is not severe.

No Bottomless Mud.

In Tiflis, beyond the 18,000-foot ranges, the mean temperature in January is 32 degrees Fahrenheit. At Baku it is 38 and at Batum, 43. Nor can rain and the bottomless mud that first stopped Hitler's army last fall be looked upon to help stop German tanks in the Caucasus.

For the most part, the rainy season in the Caucasus comes in early summer. Except in the Black Sea ports, autumn is pretty dry. At Prokhladnenski and similar places in the northern slopes of the Caucasus where fighting now is in progress rainfall is more abundant in summer but autumn is unusually dry.

The North Caucasus weather generally is similar to that of the Astrakhan region but the winters here can be severe with the mercury tumbling to fifteen degrees Fahrenheit. Freezing starts in the North and Central Caucasus about December 1 and continues for three months. On the Black Sea and Caspian, winter does not arrive until January 1.

The coldest Russian climate is in the northeast—said to be the coldest spot in the world. Places like Leningrad start freezing up about November 1 and the mercury keeps receding for 140 days and the snow piles 17 to 23 inches high, keeping all but ski troops immobilized. The Gulf of Finland freezes over, paralyzing shipping.

Around Moscow, winter's first blows are felt at about November 1 and fur hats appear. From Moscow to Leningrad the weather is far below freezing for 130 days with an average snow piled 20 inches high. From Moscow to Stalingrad, freezing starts from the middle of November to late that month and the snow is only about half as heavy. The first snows between Moscow and Astrakhan at the mouth of the Volga, fall toward the end of October.

The first real snowstorm in Moscow last year started on November 7 and the ground was covered until late spring.

Murmansk, the ice-free port through which the bulk of Allied supplies is funnelled, is warmer than the Finnish front, because of the Gulf Stream, but freezes start there late in October and the snow piles to 24 inches.

The other major Allied supply port of Archangel on an estuary of the Dvina River starts getting ice around October 11 and can be kept open by ice-breakers until mid-January. Then it is frozen solid with three feet of ice until the late May thaw.

Little Tax Boost Under New Plan

WINDSOR, Ont., August 26 — (CP) — Under the "pay as you go" taxation system, Canada's newest budget has allowed for a change in the system of taxation without any increase in taxation, Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, told a gathering of 400 workers in the Harry E. Guppy school.

The minister told the meeting that the people who were "scared to death" when they first heard that Canada would require $3,900,000,000 to carry out its financial burden for the year found when the payroll deduction figures were released about a year ago that the taxation was not as bad as they had anticipated.

Attending the meeting were workers from the Chrysler and adjoining plants, insurance men, bankers, men from St. Luke's barracks pay corps and representatives of smaller plants and firms.

Mr. Ilsley emphasized that all rumors regarding the government's intention to not redeem bonds and certificates and to seize bank deposits were "entirely false."

Explaining the problems, methods and objectives of the National Finance program for the coming year, the minister stated that the government had found taxation preferable to "borrowing or printing." He outlined the system of the payroll deduction plan and the compulsory saving program.

Talk of Agitation.

"There are some agitators in this country," he said, "who say that it is the big shots in the high income crowd who are running the country and that the government has been easy on them and hard on the little fellow.

"Actually, he said the men in the highest income brackets have to pay 98 per cent of their income in taxes and 100 per cent on excess profits. Don't let anyone say to you and don't say to yourself that the government is trying to make the worker pay for the war."

"The war," he said, "is at a very critical stage. We have not had very many successes in the last three years. We have had a lot of defeats and reverses. With Stalingrad, the Pittsburgh of Russia, and the Caucasus with 90 per cent of the Russian oil supply under assault, we are in danger of Russia being partially incapacitated from carrying on the war.

"In the British Empire and in the United States it will take all of our discipline, nerve and courage to carry through. I am not telling you this to alarm you, but you must not lose sights of the facts.

Claim Livestock Price Ceiling Means Rationing

WASHINGTON, August 26—(AP) —A group of Western and Middle-Western live stock dealers told Agricultural Secretary Claude Wickard yesterday that a price ceiling on live animals would eventually mean a rationing of meat to consumers due to a resultant reduced supply.

The delegation of 19 cattlemen, hog raisers and sheep growers protested the proposed ceilings at a two-hour conference with Wickard. Spokesman said later he "made no commitments" and that they intended to talk to officials of the Office of Price Administration and War Production Board beore seeing Wickard again.

An Agriculture Department official told reporters Wickard advised the delegation that he stood by his statement of last week that he would support a "workable plan" for a ceiling on live animals and that he expected Price Administrator Leon Henderson to submit a tentative plan soon.

"He told them," an official continued, "that they should concern themselves not with whether we're going to have a live stock ceiling, but with what kind of a program we are going to have."

CRUDE VOCABULARY NO SPECIAL ASSET

Old Acquaintances Are Snobs?

Frozen by a couple who were once his friends, she'll weep on her pillow tonight—"Snobs!".

She'll never realize it was her vocabulary that repelled them, for she imagines that her "Where are you RESIDING?" and "I always RETIRE early" are ultra-refined.

But discriminating people don't use such pretentious words. They say, simply, "GO TO BED" and "LIVING." To them an affected speaker appears ill-poised, of poor background.

The oddest part of it is, people who "converse" rather than "talk" are the very ones who make crude errors like "borrowed off" for "borrowed from" and "leave go" for "let go."

While avoiding such obvious slang as "guy," they still give themselves away with "soup-and-fish" for "formal dress," and "gadget" for—almost everything.

Cultivated people are specific in their speech. The "gadget" is given its right name—and other adjectives are used besides "nice" and "awful"!

Yet anyone can learn to speak in a cultivated manner. Our 32-page booklet helps you enrich your vocabulary, lists frequent mistakes in English and pronunciation, with correct forms. Explains words often mis-used.

For your copy of "How to Improve Your Vocabulary" send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner, Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE LAP OF THE GODS

HOW SOME of your contracts make out is a proposition completely beyond your control. It is in the lap of the gods. That is, it depends entirely on what your opponents do. If the defenders adopt one line of attack upon you, they can beat your contract. If they try another, you make it, with perhaps an extra trick. If they choose still a third method, they give you a number of extra tricks. In brief, your fate may be decided by luck. Skill counts in the long run, but there are plenty of occasions on which it is of no value to you. Don't let that make you berate your luck, however, as it is part of the game, and usually evens up eventually.

By slightly varying methods, four tables in a duplicate game produced that same contract of 4-Spades by West, some doubled and some not. The outcome ranged from two extra tricks to down one, all dependent on the defense.

At one table, the heart K was the opening, knocking out the A. The trumps were drawn, aided by a finesse of the J, and then the clubs led. As soon as North took his A, he led to the diamond A, and South fired back a heart for two tricks in that suit, beating the contract.

One North decided to open the K of his partner's diamonds. When it won, he decided that diamond singleton in dummy threatened possible ruffs, so switched to his spade 8. This declarer then got the trumps out and led a club, giving the defenders their last trick there. Clubs furnished plenty of heart discards, also a diamond, so that an extra trick was scored.

The same number of tricks came from the opening lead of a spade—a very bad lead, as only a club and a diamond got lost.

Maximum score for the declarer came where North made another very unsound lead, his club A, hoping to give his partner a second round ruff. After South played the 4, West false-carded with the 10, making North think South might have had a singleton if West strained so hard. He therefore led a second club. West had only to draw trumps and run clubs to take all the rest of the tricks.

The most important factor, to get maximum results for the defense, was the taking out of the heart A before clubs got led by either side.

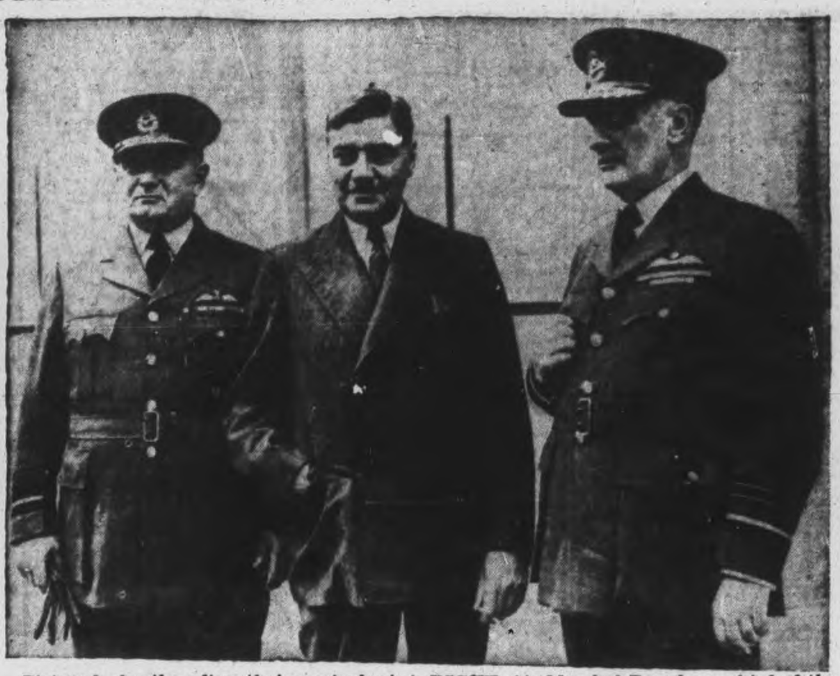
Canadian Air Chiefs In Britain



Pictured shortly after their arrival at Canadian headquarters in London are three Canadian air chiefs who flew from Canada in a bombing plane. Plan To Transfer Surplus Labor In Pulp Industry

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—(CP).—The committee advisory to the director of National Selective Service on manpower problems in the pulp and paper industry has been asked to determine how many men can be transferred from that industry without dislocation, Elliott M. Little, National Selective Service director, announced here today.

Addressing the annual national convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, Mr. Little said there is a waste of manpower in the pulp and paper industries, with many of the employees working only part time.

The committee has been asked to determine how many men working full-time are required to produce the pulp and paper necessary to meet the demand and how many men can be released for essential war work, and to recommend the principle and conditions of transfer.

The committee is composed of five members of management and five members representing employees. Mr. Little said it is the first of a series of committees which will be set up to advise the director on manpower problems in those industries.

He said the newsprint paper industry is working on an average at about 60 per cent. of capacity.

New Income Tax Not So Heavy Ilsley Explains

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Canada's Finance Minister, Hon. J. L. Ilsley, yesterday urged 5,000 representatives of industrial and commercial workers in the Toronto district to use their influence to assist in raising the money needed to successfully prosecute the war.

Also, at the meetings and at a press conference later, he explained certain features of the new income tax provisions, stating that if people took the time to figure the new tax out they would find it not as heavy as they first thought. There were ameliorating features, including the offsets allowed in connection with the compulsory savings plan.

The Government, he said at the press interview, would be lucky to get $100,000,000 from the compulsory savings plan whereas if there were no offsets, such as allowances for life insurance premiums and mortgage payments, it was estimated the plan would produce $250,000,000. However, he said, it was not democratically feasible to finance the war by compulsory savings alone.

"There were some people who were shirking their duty in the matter of savings in wartime, so we had to provide for compulsory savings," Mr. Ilsley said. "But they won't amount to very much, comparatively, not more than 10 per cent. of what should be saved.

"I can't imagine a country like Canada with its type of population and the richness and variety of its resources being unable to meet the interest and payments of principal when they come due. Not even if we were spending three times as much as now."

Answering a question at the meeting he said compulsory savings were instituted "because we thought it necessary to set a minimum for people to save in wartime."

Price Ceiling Fight.

He told one of his meetings that "it is a fight every day" to preserve the price ceiling against "certain antagonistic parties," but it was introduced for the protection of the citizens of Canada. Then at the press conference he admitted that the situation being brought about whereby under selective service more people were earning wages while at the same time the policy of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is to curtail non-essential industry is a theoretical threat at the price ceiling.

More money was available for use in bidding for fewer goods. Mr. Ilsley said he also thought too much money would tempt people to attempt to break the ceilings. Also, if the Government borrowed too heavily from the banks, the Bank of Canada in particular, the release of such large amounts of money possibly would blow through the ceiling.

In connection with tax and compulsory savings sources, Mr. Ilsley said it was estimated the national income at present was at the rate of $7,000,000,000 a year as against about $4,500,000,000 in 1939 and only $3,000,000,000 during the depth of the depression. However, it also was estimated that between 80 and 90 per cent. of the salary and wage earners were in the lower brackets, earning under $2,500 a year.

London Uneasy As Winter Nears

By ALAN RANDAL

LONDON, August 26—(CP).—The approach of winter's long-nights period together with lessons of the R.A.F.'s new bombing technique as they are learned by Germany heighten Londoners' belief that London, long virtually raid-free, must feel the heavy weight of Nazi bombs again.

It is only to be expected that German tacticians will eventually put into practice what they learn in the explosion and fire of the R.A.F.'s inexorable hammering at Nazi target towns.

Whether, when the Germans turn their concentrated attention to Britain again, they will be able to put 1,000 planes over a target as the R.A.F. does over Germany, remains to be seen.

Here it is suggested that when winter sets in on the Russian front the Germans can do either of two things. They might concentrate on putting their battle-worn air facilities back into top form for an even greater effort against Russia in the spring or divert a considerable number of planes to the west, to Britain.

The latter appears most probable if for no other reason than to satisfy the German people with lusty blows at the home of the R.A.F., which has subjected Germany to the greatest air attacks the world has known.

Battery, 200 Hun Free French Bag As Commandos Tell Of Dieppe

By WILLIAM STEWART

LONDON, Aug. 26—(CP Cable).—The forgotten men of the Dieppe expedition—the hand-picked body of fighting French commandos whose job it was to help open the way into the town for the main Canadian raiding force—told their story yesterday.

Until fighting French headquarters issued a statement quoting the commander and other members of the French contingent on their part in the raid, there had been only official references to the participation of the battle-dressed Frenchmen. It was the first time they had been able to come to grips with the Nazis on the soil of their motherland since the fall of France.

The Frenchmen, who wore naval caps with their khaki because many of them were drawn from the Marines, were not open to newspaper interviews since they observe the pledge of silence which applies to all commandos.

The statement revealing that they had been permitted to tell their story to fighting French press officers said they had received congratulations from British officers for their role in fighting everywhere along the beach above which Dieppe rises.

4,000 Nazis Slain

It was the commander of the raiding Frenchmen who was quoted as saying his men were everywhere, although their number was comparatively small. The commander was identified only as a big Alsatian who worked in a New York bank before the war. He said he believed the Germans lost 4,000 men, including air force personnel, during the operation.

"We had groups at Varengeville, Dieppe and Berneval," said the commander. "On the beach in front of Dieppe where the tanks landed the going was pretty tough. I think our men enjoyed themselvs best at Varengeville where a German battery was silnced and an entire German garrison of 200 men was killed or taken prisoner.

"My adjutant can tell you more about Berneval because he was there."

The adjutant, a 27-year-old Breton lieutenant who joined the French navy as a cabin boy when 12, said he had been so busy fighting he had little time to observe what went on about him.

"I remember before landing we were told to put on steel helmets, but my men asked to be exempt from the order and be allowed to wear their sailor caps so that the Boche could recognize the red French pom-poms.

"The men also were asked before setting out whether they wished to remove the 'France' flashes from their shoulders. It was explained that the Germans might shoot them on sight instead of giving them normal treatment accorded to prisoners of war if they were captured. They refused.

Their Biggest Thrill

"When we stepped on French soil it was a thrilling moment for everyone—but something special for us. Silly things flashed through our heads as we waited to jump from the boats. One of my men told me he was hoping to see a billboard advertising something in French.

"When a seagull screamed over my head I remember saying to myself, 'That's a French seagull,' and I almost cried. But once we set foot on the beach we had no time to indulge in such sentimentalities.

"Very fierce fighting developed on the sand. Three times we were repulsed and three times we reformed to attack. Of the actual fighting I can remember little. We faced a curtain of lead. I do remember that at the end when we were re-embarking I was waiting for one of my men, a tall, fair boy from Normandy who was staggering down the beach with a wounded British soldier over his shoulder.

"Machine-gun bullets were kicking up a minor sandstorm all around him. The soldier reached the boat all right, but the Tommy was dead. We had to leave him behind."

Others among the Frenchmen who returned from their first strange visit home since they joined Gen. Charles De Gaulle's forces told stories such as the one described by the commander.

"Pte. Robert Z." set out for Dieppe with a 10-franc piece he brought back from Dunkirk.

No Time for Spending

"I fully intended spending it at Dieppe, but somehow I never got the time," the private said, sorrowfully.

"The Germans fight hard, but they're inclined to surrender quickly once they're cornered," he added.

Another Frenchman described the camaraderie between the British and French Commandos as "perfect." He said the Frenchmen and the Canadians "got along very well—many Canadians spoke French far more fluently than English."

The sight of ships flying the Lorraine Cross and the Tricolor as they lay off shore and poured their fire into the Nazi defences thrilled all the French Commandos. One of them said that when a French submarine chaser shot down a Nazi bomber there was a cheer "Vive les Free French" from the British troops.

The Fighting French newspaper "La Marseillaise," telling of the return of the Frenchmen, said their faces were "battlestained and their battledress in disorder. Everything indicated a hot fight, but the men were calm though exhausted and in their eyes burned joy beyond expression."

Millbrook Women's Institute Enjoys Fine Picnic

MILLBROOK, August 26.—(ENS)—The nicely-shaded lawns, gay with flower beds in full midsummer bloom at the home of Mrs. J. L. Byam, Bank street, were the scene of the annual picnic of the Women's Institute, on Thursday at 3 p.m., when approximately thirty members and guests were welcomed by the hostess for the enjoyable gathering.

Previous to the sports' program, the regular business session was held with the president, Mrs. E. C. Richards in the chair. The correspondence, read by secretary, Mrs. G. O. Fallis, included a letter urging participation in the fall membership drive to enlist all the girls of the neighborhood, from 12 to 26, in the project to be taken up for the ensuing year, this study for Durham being "The Supper Club." Provincial week will be September 7-12, and the program will include items in the press, and broadcasts over the radio. The leadership training classes will be at Millbrook for East Durham, and at Bowmanville for West Durham, dates to be announced. "Calling all Rural Girls" is the theme for the membership drive.

The Government's appeal that all Institutes take up the sales of War Saving stamps and certificates, was read.

Mrs. B. L. Richards opened the social part of the program with "Treasure Trail," the 'pot of silver' being a bright aluminum dish containing jelly beans; this was won by Mrs. J. D. Armstrong. Miss M. Finnimore won the next contest involving eating a soda biscuit and whistling, the races following. For the picnic supper, all were seated on the front lawn, Mrs. G. O. Fallis, Mrs. H. A. Earle, and the hostess attending to the service of the guests.

A number of former members of the W. I. who have not been in active touch with the society in recent years, were by special invitation included in the guests for the picnic, Mrs. Harry Earle moving the vote of thanks to Mrs. Byam for her hospitality, and all joining in singing: "For she's a jolly good fellow." In her reply, Mrs. Byam invited the branch to hold its regular meeting, the second Saturday in September, at her home.

MONTREAL, August 26.—(CP).—About 2,000 steel workers today are taking a "strike vote" at the Canadian Vickers Company shipyards here, after the National War Labor Board rejected their demands for salaries increases.

It simply empowers our national director, C. H. Millard to take whatever steps will be deemed necessary."

GROZNY, the North Caucasus oil centre toward which the Germans are driving, produces about 10 per cent of Russia's 216,000,000-barrel annual oil output.

The field has been listed for several years however, as past its peak. It first was worked for naphtha in 1893 and under the Soviet Union was considerably expanded, with the most modern methods used for extraction of available oil.

Grozny oil is higher in paraffin content and lower in kerosene than the Baku oil which accounts for about 73 per cent of Russian production.

Moscow Says Dieppe Has Nazis Scared, Coast Air Rule Gone

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts), Aug. 27 (AP)—One of several Soviet planes raiding Germany last night succeeded in reaching the outskirts of Berlin, the German radio said today.

(A Stockholm report broadcast by the BBC said five Russian bombers reached Berlin.)

The German high command's communique said Soviet bombers "carried out flights of no military importance over eastern Germany."

(A Reuters report from Stockholm said the Berlin suburbs of Zehlendorf and Dahlem were bombed.)

Berlin said high explosives and incendiaries were dropped at random, but it was asserted that no noteworthy damage was caused.

Germans Scared.

OTTAWA, August 27 — (CP). — The CBC shortwave listening post here to-day reported the Moscow radio has called again for the opening of a second front.

The Germans, the broadcast said to-day, are frightened. British aircraft had given the Nazis a terrible scare.

"They have lost air superiority over the Channel and they keep talking about Dieppe calling it a thwarted invasion," the broadcast said. "They are acting like terrified hens about Dieppe."

The Germans were staking all on a gambler's throw in Russia.

Stating there were 1,000,000 men around Stalingrad and only 90,000 with Rommel in the Midle East, the broadcast urged that the Germans be given "a licking in the present and keep them out of the future for once and for all.'"

Long Red Front Mainly Alfame

West and Northwest of Moscow: Troops of Gen. Gregory Zhukov and Col.-Gen. Ivan Konev sought three immediate objectives, Rzevh, 130 miles northwest of Moscow; Gzhatsk 95 miles west of the capital, and Vyazma, 140 miles southwest.

Rzhev: The Russians edged forward into the northern district of the city, meeting stubborn Nazi resistance in street fighting.

Sychevka, 20 miles south of Rzhev: Red Army units which drove through Zubstov reached the rail line connecting Rzhev and Vyazma and are hammering at the city's gates.

Gzhatsk: The Russians crossed the Gzhatsk River and drove into freshly reinforced Germans. Latest dispatches from this general area

Bombs Boom Bonds

LONDON, Aug. 27 (CP).—R.A.F. bombs on German cities mean a bom on Amsterdam stock exchange — and the Germans don't like it.

The German newspaper Essener National Zeitung, organ of Marshal Goering, was quoted in dispatches to Stockholm yesterday as complaining bitterly that securities in the German-occupied Netherlands rose every time there was a British air raid on Germany. The paper also expressed resentment because investors in the Netherlands continued to trade heavily in Netherlands East Indies securities, despite the fact the Indies now are occupied by Germany's Axis partner, Japan.

Essex Scottish Make Heroes Of Their Leaders

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, Aug. 27—(CP Cable) — Essex Scottish who came back from Dieppe pay highest tribute ot their gallant young officers, who led them through fierce fighting on the main beach and part of the way into the town.

In the confused and incomplete stories the men brought back, there is continual mention of officers' heroism and their fight to the bitter end.

Several soldiers particularly mentioned Lieut. Jack Prince, son of the honorary colonel of the Essex. Prince landed in the dawn attack in front of Dieppe and took cover with his men behind the 10-foot seawall. They exchanged heavy fire with the Germans across the esplanade and suffered heavy casualties from German machine-guns, mortars and artillery that smashed down on the beach.

Maj. John Willis commanded the company in which Prince was an officer. Maj. Willis was wounded three times within three hours, twice in the arm and once in the head. He

Fleeing Japs Firing China Cities

Destroying Everything In 200-Mile Strip; Chuhsien Totters

CHUNGKING, August 27 — (AP)—Japanese forces in Chuhsien, site of the biggest airfield in China, have begun a general retreat eastward under attack of Chinese forces the Chinese Central News Agency reported to-night.

Driving hard for the Chekjang Province city from which Japan itself could be bombed, the Chinese advancing from the west and southwest have formed a juncture at its outskirts and now are vigorously assaulting the city itself, the agency said.

Fires which started inside the city preparation for a Japanese withdrawal, still are burning it was reported.

The Chinese counter-offensive also has forced further Japanese withdrawals in adjoining Kiangsi Province, the Chinese said.

The Japanese were said to be setting fire to all towns and villages in a 200-mile-wide belt as they retreated northward from the 450 mile mile Chekiang-Kiangsi railway, which for a brief time they held in its entirety.

"The once-populous towns of Shangjao, Kwangfeng and Kiangshan are now masses of ruins," said the Central News. "Wilful destruction and incendiarism is being ruthlessly carried out everywhere."

The same source reported the invaders also were destroying all food supplies and equipment which they were unable to take with them as they fell back.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 27 (CP)—Viscount Bennett, former Prime Minister of Canada, arrived here today from New York and continued on to Moncton, N.B.

At Sackville, N.B., his brother, Capt. Ronald V. Bennett, said he planned to meet Viscount Bennett at Moncton. He did not know definitely whether his brother would go from Moncton but thought it likely the former prime minister would visit his home town of Hopewell Cape, N.B.

After settling in England, the former prime minister returned to Hopewell Cape once but this is his first visit to Canada since he was raised to the peerage.

Canucks Pot Hun From Shades Of Dieppe Porch

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, August 27. —(CP Cable) —New stories of the heroic part French-Canadians took in the Dieppe Raid were told today by members of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal who now are safely back at their camps.

Pte. Leo Bellaire of Nominingue, Que., recounted how he worked his way right into the French town, hid beneath a verandah and took pot shots at Germans as they ran by.

"When we landed I jumped to the beach into heavy German fire," he said. One of our tanks was moving up, so I followed behind it and reached the town. I slipped down a street, then ducked under a verandah, where I found myself in the company of two others. They gave me a great welcome.

"They told me they had been firing at the Germans from this hiding place. One of them showed me he was wounded. Just then a bunch of Germans ran past the house. The three of us fired at them. Some fell, but the others didn't even stop to look."

"There were civilians among them," declared Bellaire.

One of the men with me shouted, 'they're Germans too, don't miss them,' and he let go another burst with his Tommy-gun.

When I returned to the beach my steel helmet was ripped open by a shell fragment but fortunately I wasn't hurt."

Nazis Just Schoolboys.

Bellaire, who brother, Pte. Raymond Bellaire, also went through Dieppe and survived, described the Nazi soldiers as "mere schoolboys."

"They were all young and pale," he said. "It made your heart sink to shoot at them. But if you didn't, they shot you."

Cpl. Jean-Paul Lefabvre, who told how a number of French-Canadians stuck up posters on Dieppe walls asking the population to remain neutral, displayed a tiny luck charm which he carried with him during the raid.

He said it was a tiny model dag,

Ground Battle Rages Around Harbor; American Fleet Pounds Away At Tokyo Armada Coveting Solomons

By JOHN H. WIGGINS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—(AP).—The furiously-spreading battle of the southwest Pacific rolled closer to the Australian mainland today as Japanese invaders paid heavily with ships, troops and planes for a savagely-contested landing on the southeastern tip of New Guinea.

While American air power put one enemy invasion fleet to flight off Guadalcanal and inflicted mounting naval losses on another in the strategic Solomons, Allied ground troops and planes 600 miles to the west joined battle with a force of Japanese marines that landed from a small convoy at Milne Bay.

Heavy Allied air action, Allied headquarters announced from Australia, destroyed an enemy transport, six landing barges and battered a cruiser, probably sinking it. Medium bombers and fighters also raked other Japanese barges and supplies, strafed landing troops and started many fires.

The United States Navy Department at Washington, meantime, termed the continuing action in the southeastern Solomons 'encouraging' with at least 13 Japanese ships damaged in the [illegible]in effort thus far to recapture the bases held by United States marines.

Australia 500 Miles Off

The enemy landing in New Guinea, circling around the mountains that had barred an overland advance southward, obviously increased the threat to the Australian mainland, less than 500 miles distant. The landing was not unexpected for Allied observers believed the Japanese would attempt the manoeuvre to get at Port Moresby, the strongest Allied New Guinea base, 230 miles to the northwest.

Establishment of a strong air-sea base at the Milne Bay site would facilitate Japanese bombardment of a string of Australian mainland industrial cities across the Coral Sea to the south, and serve as a centre for further counter-attacks on Allied positions in the Solomons.

Buna, apparent springboard for the advance of the small Japanese convoy, was attacked by Allied air forces with six Japanese fighters destroyed and two damaged. Thirteen enemy fighters were destroyed in surprise attacks Tuesday.

Besides pounding the ships and landing barges which ferried the invaders ashore, Allied fliers in four-engined Flying Fortresses, single-engined Kittyhawk fighters, and marauders, caused the Japanese heavy losses of fuel.

Some drums which the Japanese tried to conceal below water, were struck from low level and fires spread over a wide area.

The Allied planes met no fighter opposition, but were hampered by thick clouds which cut the ceiling to 1,000 feet and a downpour which cut visibility almost to zero.

Unofficial reports said the fighter pilots had particular success strafing enemy troops and shore positions and machine-gunning enemy-filled launches and barges while the bombers centred on supply dumps ashore.

Plenty of Targets.

One Kittyhawk pilot, asked if aid was needed flashed back the reply: "We're having great time strafing Japs on beach and doing nicely." The landing forces apparently were left to fend for themselves without air support.

Another Japanese naval force, operating to the northeast, is still involved in a major sea battle in which airplane carriers and warships are the target of bombers and fighters.

4 Ships In One Raid

LONDON, Aug. 27—(CP). Three German ships of 1,500 tons each were damaged severely and a smaller vessel was hit today by Hurricane bombers which attacked a five-ship convoy lying off Dieppe, the Air Ministry announced. The bombers were escorted by Spitfire fighters and all planes returned safely.

"We seemed to take them completely by surprise," said a squadron leader. "We flew across at sea level and attacked out of the sun."

Not Going To Sit Back Of Ditch —McNaughton

By CHARLES BRUCE

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 27.—(CP)—Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton told a group of newsmen today that "if anyone thinks we are going to sit here back of the ditch, which is this Channel, he has another thing coming."

Gen. McNaughton was welcoming a group of visiting Canadian editors and other correspondents to army headquarters and naturally talk at the press conference centred on Dieppe.

"The lessons of Dieppe are still being studied," he said.

In combined operations it is necessary for each of the forces concerned—land, navy and air—to assess and correlate information obtained. And after that not to tell the enemy all that has been learned."

The General said long training was necessary for Dieppe but did not rule out a quick succession of raids if that should be decided upon.

"Matters were gone at thoroughly," he said. "We had to develop and learn technique. But just as in industry, when you have the first models it grows easier.

"There is one thing that should be said—this raid proved the alertness and coolness under fire and the absolute devotion to duty of Canada's young officers and the confidence the men have in them.

"And it proved the three separate services can co-ordinate and carry out an action of that kind."

He said he believed the fact the enemy had moved its dispositions into forwar dareas did not necessarily indicate advance knowledge of this specific raid.

Just Getting Uneasy.

"It probably means he had a feeling that something probably would be done somewhere and made preparations."

He added "a great deal of useful information on enemy dispositions was obtained before the raid was made."

"Training operations were carried out on the British coast on two occasions and there was great improvement between the first and second of these. Every leader had full knowledge of what he had to do."

Welcoming the Canadian editors, Gen. McNaughton spoke feelingly of the army.

"We have a lot of young men and

Nazi Hammer Blows Held At Stalingrad

Invaders Reach Mozdok Turning Point To Cross Caucasus

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Aug. 27—(AP). — While Stalingrad battled doggedly for its life, Russia's Central front armies slashed at the German-held Rzhev-Vyazma railway 120 miles west of Moscow today and fought for footholds within the streets of Rzhev in a newly-announced offensive that has pushed back a Nazi salient 25 or 30 miles, and slain 47,000.

Although the situation of Stalingrad, industrial city on the lower Volga, was conceded to be critical, the Russians described it as "no worse" and counter attacks were developed.

German gains in the Central Caucasus, however, drew expressions of concern. A tank-led task force fought its way to Mozdok, 30 miles east of the Prokhladnenski battlegrounds and a jumping-off point for thursts both toward the oil fields of Grozny, 55 miles to the east, and Georgian military highway terminal at Ordzhonikidze, 40 miles to the south.

The 15-day-old Russian drive on the Central front was intended both to eliminate a long-standing German threat to Moscow in the Rzhev-Gzhask-Vyazma triangle and provide a diversion against the German offensive to the south.

The break into heavily-fortified Rzhev, on the Upper Volga, 130 miles northwest of the capital, was reported made from the north.

Dispatches from Stalingrad said the situation there was becoming more grave every hour as the Germans hurled new troops, tanks and planes into the fight in grim disregard of losses.

Russian lines northwest and southwest of the Volga city were reported holding firm, but dispatches said plainly that the pressure of the assault was intense.

From the Caucasus front, where German advance forces were 155 miles from the shores of the Caspian Sea, there were increasing intimations that the invaders hoped to swing southward in an attempt to cross the towering Caucasian range.

Although the effect upon Germany's southern drive was still pro-

WASHINGTON, August 27—(AP)—Junior Lieut. Lidmila Pavliuchenko attired in full regimentals of the Special Red Russian Army Corps and wearing two medals on each breast as awards for her deeds as a Russian sniper, arrived here to-day as a delegate to the International Student Assembly.

The young woman is credited officially with having shot and killed 309 German officer and men and trained 80 other snipers who killed some 2,500 Axis invaders in the Sevastopol sector.

She speaks no English, but talked to interviewers through an interpreter. After the war is won, she said she expects to go back into history research, in which she was engaged at the University of Kiev before the war.

See Hitler's Russian Tide Near Its Peak

Huns Losing in Centre, Near End of Tank and Air Blitz as Caucasus Slow Progress

By DE WITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Disclosure of the heavy—and thus far successful—new Russian offensive in the important sector northwest of Moscow, and a forecast by the Soviet army newspaper Red Star that the Bolshevists will halt the Nazis on the Caucasian mountain line, are an invitation to examine the possibility the Hitlerite tide may have about reached high water and be ready to ebb.

One approaches this idea with the utmost caution, because of the obvious dangers of the Russian position in face of the terrific striking-power being exhibited by the Germans. Still, as I have indicated previously, this is the time at which many military experts have thought the Muscovites might be able to stem the Hitlerite flood, namely, when the battle lines backed up against the towering Caucasian mountains.

Of one thing we are certain—the battle of the Caucasus is still anybody's fight. Despite the Nazi gains over the bodies of Hitler's wholesale human sacrifice, the Fuehrer is by no means the certain winner. On that basis, and having dissociated ourselves from wishful thinking, let's examine the situation.

The Red offensive in the Rzhev sector northwest of Moscow has been under way 15 days already. The Reds announce an advance of 25 to 30 miles, the capture of upwards of 600 communities and the slaughter of 45,000 Germans. This drive has been undertaken for two reasons:

(1) To compel the Nazis to withdraw strength from the Stalingrad front and thus ease the fierce pressure on that strategic city, and (2) to eliminate a German salient and thus strengthen the defences of Moscow.

The point about the Moscow defences is this: If Hitler should be successful in capturing Stalingrad and crushing the Bolshevist resistance farther south, he likely would make another supreme effort to capture Moscow before winter shuts in. His idea would be to make his position impregnable as far down as the Caucasus range so that even if he didn't succeed in forcing the mountains he would be able to hold his lines easily during the winter while devoting his energy to other pursuits — quite likely development of the Egyptian campaign.

As to the fighting in the Caucasus, Red Star says the battles there have entered a new phase now that the enemy has reached the mountain barrier. The sweeping plains over which Hitler's tanks have been racing are giving way to mountainous terrain where these steel mon-

Vichy Article Lists Vast Reserves Of The Allies

VICHY, Aug. 27 (AP)—A newspaper article by Jean Lecour de Grandmaison, president of the French Catholic Federation, in which he said the United Nations have great reserves of strength to throw into their war effort caused a stir today throughout unoccupied France.

The article, on the front page of Figaro this morning, stated "America, protected by distance, remains almost intact as a reservoir of men and materials."

Another of Grandmaison's observations was that "the British Isles remain the heart of the British Empire."

Russia, he asserted, "can continue more or less effective resistance from the depths of Siberia," and he believed it was evident "Japan will not suppress China."

Grandmaison concluded that "it is hard to see, in the present state of things, how force alone can bring the war to an end."

God Save The King, Taboo

Jap Ban Peeved Trade Chief's Daughters

OTTAWA, Aug. 27—(CP).—Not being allowed to sing "God Save the King" was one of the things that annoyed Jean Duclos, 15, and her sister, Susan, 12, among the party of repatriated Canadians just returned from Japanese-occupied territory in the Orient.

They are daughters of V. E. Duclos, Canadian trade commissioner at Shanghai.

"They wouldn't let us sing 'God Save the King' any more," said Jean with disgust last night when a number of the returning Canadians arrived in Ottawa by train.

"Nobody bothered us in Shanghai. We kept on going to school with 150 other kids," said Jean. "We heard of other people outside the settlement being treated badly though," she added.

Jean was born in Shanghai, Susan in Zamboagao on the island of Minda'ao in the Philippines.

Asked if she could read the Chinese tag on her suitcase, Jean replied, "No, but I know some swear words in Chinese."

Women Succeed On Machines Doing War Jobs

In Canada today as never before, women are manning the machines in industry and the war services in order to release men for more vital work. The National Film Board Series has brought to the screen the story of womanpower at war, showing women cheerfully undertaking work that has no parallel in history.

In Canada, the Canadian Women's Army Corps and the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. are releasing men by the thousands for active service and in the aircraft industry more women are now employed than the pre-war total of men and women combined.

In Britain, the camera shows women tackling jobs that three years ago would have seemed fantastic. Acting as ferry pilots, nothing daunts them from a trainer to a twin engined Wellington bomber. They test guns on factory ranges, take even chances with soldiers manning the anti-aircraft guns. In war industry 4,000,000 women hold jobs so vital that they cannot change them without permission. This is also being done in Canada now. British women have met the emergencies created by the drain on manpower by stepping in wherever they were needed at any job at all.

Russia Is Example

This film also shows the wonderful job being done by the women of Russia, who have for a long time been accorded equal rights with men. They control 75 per cent of industry, exercising almost complete control of collective farming, and are doctors, engineers, sailors and members of a "Battalion of Death," an outfit where girls and grandmothers act as guerilla fighters in defence of cities like Rostov, Sevastopol, and as they are doing now at Stalingrad. Their work is truly indispensible.

This picture, entitled "Women Are Warriors," shows how far women of the United Nations have already gone in sharing with men the full risks and responsibilities of war.

This is an effort in which women of all ages are taking part and a recent survey has produced the surprising information that a courageous brigade of elderly Canadian women, over 70 years of age, are engaged in gainful occupation. There are 7,851 all told. This was an incidental discovery of a Dominion Bureau of Statistics study of the number of women that might be called on as the labor requirements of Canada become increasingly severe. The survey also showed that the largest source of future labor supply is among married women between 15 and 44.

Fires Burn As Commandos Approach Dieppe

A photograph of historic import, shows smoke spiralling from the strategic German-held city of Dieppe on the French side of the Channel as it is approached by one of the fleet of invasion barges manned by grim, blackened-faced British commandos. The fires were started by R.A.F. planes and artillery. The invasion barges carried tanks. The "reconnaissance in force" was the largest landing force of its kind. The mission was a great success.

Urge Taxation Of War Plants

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—The principle of taxation of war and defense industries for municipal purposes was approved here last night by the assessors' section of the Ontario Municipal Association.

A resolution sponsored by the City of St. Catharines was adopted. The resolution favors the passage of legislation which clarifies the intention of the present law so that war and defence industries, owned by the Crown or in which the Crown has an interest, may be made taxable for municipal purposes.

It points out that municipalities are suffering substantial loss in revenue by reason of the fact that these industries in which the Crown has an interest, are claiming exemptions from taxation under the restrictions provided in the British North America Act and the Ontario Assessment Act.

"It is unjust and inequitable that the municipal taxpayers in the communities where these industries are located should be forced to assume additional tax burdens as a result of the exemption of such industries," the resolution read.

aters operate with difficulty or not at all. Also, inside the mountain range it is virtually impossible for airplanes to operate.

The Germans have been depending heavily on their tanks and warplanes, and a vast weakening of these two fighting arms may indeed alter the picture. However, the Nazis have demonstrated that they are no mean mountain fighters, and only time will determine the issue.

I should say that a great deal depends on the outcome of the siege of Stalingrad. That is a tough nut to crack and the Nazis are concentrating all available forces for the assault. The Bolshevists are expected to put up a fierce resistance, but it mustn't be overlooked that they are handicapped by the fact that this great industrial city is on the west bank of the Volga River. That means they must fight with their backs to the river instead of having its broad reaches in front of them for protection—a position which any defending commander would avoid if possible.

Should Stalingrad fall quickly, it would release many Nazi troops for the fighting farther south. Naturally that might alter the whole show, but since that point is reached by hurdling a lot of "ifs," speculation isn't very profitable.

While all this is going on in the Russian theatre, we mustn't relax our watch on Egypt. A great and crucial battle is likely to erupt there at any moment between the Allies and Nazi Marshal Rommel's forces, which represent one claw of the pincers that Hitler is trying to clamp on the whole Middle East.

stuck with his men, with his head and arm wrapped in bandages.

He wouldn't give in and kept fighting with his men, running among them and encouraging them through the horror of the bombing and machine-gunning.

At 8.30 a.m. a mortar bomb exploded near him, according to one soldier, who said he did not see Willis after that.

A Mortar Victim.

Capt. Dave Deziel was landing with his company in a tank landing craft and as it got to the ramp preparing to rush the beach a mortar bomb dropped near the craft's bow. Deziel was hit in the stomach and collapsed. He was listed as killed in action.

Lieut. Bill Scott then took over this company and led the men ashore with the shout: "Let's go, boys."

Soldiers recalled the gallant heroism of Lieut. Art. Hueston of Sarnia, Ont. He and his platoon were on a tank landing craft and as the ramp was lowered at the beach machine-gun fire and shells crashed around them, streams of bullets pouring into the boat.

A corporal was hit in the mouth and Hueston crouched to help him. Then some kind of high explosive landed inside the craft, setting the tank on fire. The other ranks clanked ashore and the boat started to drift off the beach.

It was 30 yards from land when Hueston and his men jumped into the water and started to swim in. They were all wearing "Mae Wests" but the weight of their arms and ammunition made swimming difficult.

Hueston reached the beach, which was being laced with fire. He didn't give a thought to his own safety but in the true officer tradition thought only of his men.

He threw off his equipment, said a soldier who was there with him, and went back into the water trying to rescue men who were still floundering in the sea. He finally had to give up and it is believed he crossed the beach to the seawall.

The regiment has no definite word about Lt.-Col. F. K. Jasperson, who is listed missing and believed killed.

Escaped in a Rowboat

It is believed, though, that he landed and fought on the beach. The second in command, Maj. Ted Williams, apparently was leading the battalion part of the time, for the force headquarters on the destroyer offshore heard his voice over the wireless asking for tank support. He was "calm and could be heard clearly," an officer said.

Capt. Don McRae of Ottawa, a Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry officer attached to the Essex, who left Dieppe in a rowboat with several men, said he saw Lieut. Jim Palms of Detroit at the seawall.

"Jim was crouching on the wall, directing his men and preparing to fire," said McRae.

McRae, with Willis most of the time, said the major was "magnicicent beyond words."

Capt. Walt McGregor evidently landed and put up a terrific fight, just as everyone who knew the tall, husky soldier was certain he would. He is listed as missing and believed killed.

Others listed as killed in action included Capt. D. W. Guest, who married an English girl several months ago and carried her picture into battle with him. Lieut. P. O. Lee was listed as missing and believed killed.

Nazis Scatter Fire Bombs On English Crops

LONDON, August 27. —(CP) — German night raiders again scattered incendiary bombs over part of the East Anglican countryside last night in an apparent effort to destroy crops.

High-explosive bombs also were dropped and three persons were killed in one town when a bomb hit a shelter.

Bombs also were dropped on a southeast coast town early in the night.

For the second successive night there was no R. A. F. attack on Germany, apparently because of bad weather over the continent.

The roar of planes and chatter of aerial machine-gun fire, however, indicated that an air battle was being fought at high altitude over the southeast English coast this morning.

Strike Colchester.

LONDON, August 27. —(CP) — The Berlin radio reported today that targets of German night raids on Britain were Colchester, 40 miles northeast of London; a factory area northwest of Dover, and "a small harbor town on the East coast of England."

given him by Suzanne Vachon of Montreal.

"Tell her I still have it as well as her picture and that I am well," he added.

Pte. Fernand Labrecq of Montreal said he was attached to the Royal Canadian Engineers who blew up the Casino sitting above Dieppe beach.

"How did it go up—with a bang?" asked other soldiers.

"No it was a double supernatural explosion. I thought it was the end of the world."

Sgt. Jean-Baptiste Bock of St. Jerome, Que., said that after he had fired 500 rounds from his Bren gun, an explosion on the beach blew it from his hands. Bock is recovering from slight leg wounds.

Capt. Bob Lajoie and Lieut. Pierre Benoit, both of Montreal, said they were attached to the Engineers and were aboard a tank landing craft for the raid. Neither was able to land but were exposed to all the violence of the German fire.

Reception All Ready.

"When our advance party landed on the central beach it was about 5:15 a.m.," said Benoit. "A reception committee was already on hand.

"As our tank landing craft approached, four direct hits were scored; two pompoms and two machineguns were put out of action. Jerry was trying to hit us with every conceivable kind of ammunition.

"We lowered the ramp and two tanks sprang out and shelled and machine-gunned their way up the beach. It has been said the beach was mined. But I saw one of our tanks roll over mines though indifferent to the explosions which shook it. A third tank had not much chance. Four shells struck it at almost point-blank range in quick succession.

"We tried to land when our last tank was out. But a lucky enemy shot cut the steel cables supporting the craft's landing ramp and it fell under water. We became an easy target for snipers firing from a tobacco factory directly opposite.

Soon Steadied.

"I wouldn't say their aim was accurate but the sheer volume of their fire was amazing. We finally managed to close the inside doors. All of us were accustomed to assault landing exercises under live ammunition and after the initial fire we behaved as if we were on a commando game."

Rev. Armand Sabourin of Montreal who is known as the 'smiling padre" of the Fusiliers, told this story:

He was en route to London a few days after the Dieppe raid. A boy in battle-dress entered his train compartment and asked: Do you remember me, Father?"

"I seem to ....."frowned the padre.

"Well," went on the soldier, "I'll remember you all my life. Remember when you saw me near you on the boat at Dieppe and gave me your last sandwich because I was exhausted?"

The padre remembered then.

"We were all hungry," he said, "but as a priest I needed the sandwich least. We are accustomed to abstinence, you know."

women over here who have been away for a long time and we feel that personal contacts with the homeland should be kept up," the army commander said.

"There is always anxiety that when we get away from home we get out of touch and thus out of sympathy. But there is a spirit here that our people back home should know about. We are an outward expression of the people of Canada.

Without Preparation.

"If people are told what is going on we can leave it to them to get this war won. We went into it, as democracies do, without preparation. We have hardly come to grips with the foe and we are still going through the phase of preparedness, but it will be won."

The general was enthusiastic about industrial war production in Canada and said that "in equipment Canadian manufacturers had to cut the teeth on existing types."

"In an almost extraordinarily short time the prototypes started coming back to us for experiment," Gen. McNaughton continued. "Canadian weapons and equipment are of the finest in the world; by that I mean in quality of steel, precision and so forth.

"The search for design, of course, is a continuing problem and on that we still have to pull level with the enemy and pass him. As long as there is a chance for improvement we must seek it and I know Canada is alert to the need. It is an everlasting struggle to experiment and invent."

In answer to a question, Gen. McNaughton said "I most definitely do not regard the threat of invasion of the United Kingdom as over."

On the manpower question, he referred to his statement on his visit to Canada at the year-end that transportation across the north Atlantic has been the only limiting factor.

All he would add was that "while we have been pretty nearly running up against limiting factors we have not actually done so."

Heroes In Sport Remain Heroes In War

By HAL WALKER.

In the hours before dawn last week at Dieppe some of Canada's finest young men gambled their lives in their eagerness to come to grips with the Hun.

They went unafraid, full of hope, to the French coast. Undaunted by murderous German mortar and machinegun fire, they fought their way along the beach following carefully prepared plans.

Gave Lives Willingly.

Not all of them escaped the hellish fire. Many more — still unaccounted for and for official purposes listed as "missing"—may not have survived that spine-tingling raid. They went there for us and some of them died for us.

There was, for instance Lieutenant Clarke Bell. Sparky gave his life. You remember Sparky, don't you?

Sure you do. He was the baby-faced youngster who ran the ends and through the broken field as a halfback for Ridley and later for Argonauts. Fleet, elusive and reliable in the clutch was Sparky. He was, perhaps, a better cricketer than he was footballer, toured England in the years before the war with a team chosen by the Hon. R. C. Matthews At Ridley and Toronto Cricket Club he hit the century mark for his team more than once.

Lieut. Clarke Bell of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, played for Camp Borden's football team in 1940 while in training as a soldier. He died two days prior to his thirty-second birthday.

Taylor, the Speed Boy.

Then there was his pal Lieutenant Jack Taylor, with him in the Dieppe show. And Captain Denny Whitaker, another buddy. The three of them were the nucleus of a better-than-fair backfield.

Lieutenant Taylor, one of the fastest running halfbacks to ever play Canadian football, is listed "missing." It was a terrific thrill to watch Jack lug that leather for Argonauts, first with the juniors, then the seniors. When he played for Hamilton Tigers, too, he was a constant threat to the opposition.

It seems just like yesterday — actually it was on the Labor Day week-end of 1938—that Jack came out of short retirement to play again for Lew Hayman's Argonauts. It was at the Ontario Athletic Commission camp at Orillia that this handsome young man went through conditioning preliminary to the fall grind.

He was tickled to be back in football moleskins. Jack played only briefly, though, against Balmy Beach in a city series game and then went back to Hamilton where he helped coach McMaster. And now he's listed missing, this hero of scores of touchdown dashes. Football fans who remember his brilliant weaving runs, particularly in '33 when he helped Argos to a Canadian title on a frozen field at Sarnia, will fervently hope that somehow, somewhere he is alive and well.

Denny Was There, Too.

The headlines said "Captain Denny Whitaker leads bayonet charge in Dieppe streets."

That would be just like the stocky Whitaker, chance-taking quarterback with Hamilton Tigers and prior to that captain and star running half of Royal Military College football teams. Captain Whitaker came back safe from Dieppe after hand to hand combat with the Nazis.

Denny Whitaker left the game of football behind for the game of war but he is still playing a star role. He was quite a footballer.

Denny played for Mike Rodden's University of Toronto School grid team before going to R.M.C. Mike used to recruit a few of us gridiron novices to engaged his schoolies for practice.

"Terrors" Meet a Terror

One particular rainy afternoon our outfit locked horns with U.T.S. in a friendly joust and for the first half our side—"The Terrors" — so named because of performance and appearance—was doing right well. The U.T.S.'ers hadn't scored. And neither had we.

Rodden announced he was going to start a new backfielder for the second half. He hoped, he added with a grin, we wouldn't mind. Flushed with success, our side said something to the effect he could use Lionel Conacher for all we cared. We'd look after ourselves.

The "Terrors" kicked off and the ball went directly to the new halfback. Down sped our outside wings, confident of dumping this newcomer in the mud and spoiling his nice clean uniform.

Well, to make a long story short the new halfback eluded our entire force for a 65-yard touchdown jaunt. Then he converted for the extra point. We kicked off again and our boys made a bee line for the touchdown-getter. But nobody laid a hand on him.

A One-Man Team

By this time Rodden and his U.T.S.'ers were in high glee. This upstart completed our humiliation by running for two more touchdowns, and kicking a 40-yard field goal.

When we could recover what remained of our dignity and the full time whistle brought welcome reprieve to the debacle we sought out Rodden and demanded to know what manner of man we were playing against. Who was this "ringer"?

"That," said Mike, "is Denny Whitaker. Used to play for me here. He's captain and star back with R.M.C. now."

Denny is with the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, one of the heroic regiments of the Dieppe "show." One of his biggest thrills, he said in letters home, came while on manouvres and he drove His Majesty the King in a light armored vehicle.

Captain Walter McGregor, former Varsity basketball star, was another athlete who laid down his life at Dieppe. McGregor, attached to the Essex Scottish Regiment of Windsor, was well known in local and Windsor sport circles.

Still In Star Roles

We mention these athletes—and likely there were many more among the Commandos who landed on the beach at Dieppe—because they were men we knew in the peacetime pursuit of sports. There were many others in that raid who didn't make the sport pages and they did their part with the same devotion, the same high courage.

We salute Lieutenants Bell and Taylor and Captains Whitaker and McGregor because they distinguished themselves as athletes in times of peace and now they have again distinguished themselves, said the Russians were fighting to win back a number of populated places, all heavily fortified.

As soldiers at war.

At Zubstov, just southeast of Rzevh, and eastward at Pogoreloy-Gorodische, Soviet life was being restored after 10 months of Nazi control. Karmanovo also was liberated in that sector.

Along the 325-mile front from Vyazma southeast to Voronezh no fighting was reported.

Voronezh: Street battles continued in an unspecified populated place south of Voronezh where Red Star reported the Russians had recaptured virtually ever house. German counterattacks in two separate sectors along the west bank of the Don were repulsed. Izvestia said the western and southern parts of another populated place had been cleared of Fascists with hundreds taken prisoner in street fighting. Izvestia said German storm troops had been moved up to take charge as a result of bad morale among Hungarian front line forces.

South of Voronezh: Russian KV and T34 tanks were used effectively in continuing fighting.

Stalingrad: Northwest of the city a defence ring of steel guarding the steel metropolis held firm against the repeated attacks of Nazi tanks and the battering of tons of bombs. Dispatches reported that the Germans wedged into Soviet defences in some places but that the situation was under control.

Southwest of Stalingrad: Reinforced Russian positions held off tremendous attacks of tanks and dive-bombers.

In the Caucasus South of Krasnodar: The Germans, seeking to cut off the Red Army's road to the Black Sea, launched new attacks, but Russian defences held. Red Star reported a large-scale fight for an unspecified populated point in this area and said the Germans were trying to penetrate through valleys to trap Russian advance forces.

Prokhladnenski and Mozdok: Showing stronger resistance, the Russians held their lines along rivers, railways and in the hills, in a last stand to keep the Germans back from the Grozny oilfields.

Jack Sedgewick Dies Suddenly

A well-known sportsman, John Henderson Sedgewick, 13 Anne Street, who was a familiar figure around the Bowling and Curling Clubs for many years, passed away Wednesday after a very short illness. He was in his 69th year.

His birthplace was Musquodoboit, Nova Scotia, and he was a member of a very prominent family. The late Judge Sedgewick, who was head of the Tariff Board, Ottawa, was a brother, and Dr. W. H. Sedgewick of Toronto, former pastor of Metropolitan Church, and one of the leading United Churchmen, is also a brother.

Mr. Sedgewick lived in Peterborough for 19 years, and in the main, during that time, he was an employee of Silverwood's. An elder in St. Paul's Church, he was always keenly interested and active in its activities.

Some years ago he took over the tobacco shop of the late Sam Ray on Hunter Street, near the Regent Theatre, and retained the back room, which has held the name of the "Hall of Wisdom" for almost a quarter of a century. In this hallowed spot, the old-timers and many of the middle-aged men gathered daily for a chat, a smoke and a game of cards, and their genial host won many new friends with his kindly manner, and ever present cheerful outlook.

Left to mourn his loss are three sons: Charles of Toronto, George with the R.C.A.F., and Don with the Royal Canadian Navy, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry Northrop, of Peterborough. There are also two brothers, Robert Sedgewick of Toronto and Dr. W. H. Sedgewick, Toronto, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Roman, Valleyfield, Pa., and Mrs. Gilbert Gladwin of British Columbia.

The funeral service will be held Friday at 7.30 p.m. from St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. J. D Smart officiating. Interment will be in Musquodoboit, N.S. The body will rest at the Comstock Funeral Home until Friday evening.

Valuable Team Dies In Field

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 27—(ENS).—Misfortune struck at two farms in the Lakefield district during the last ten days, and in each case damage was fairly extensive. At the home of Warden Quakenbush, a team of valuable horses broke into a field of clover, and died after over-eating before the owner could secure ervices of a veterinary.

On the farm of J. H. Grant, a silo was blown down by the force of a gale that swept the district last week-end. The falling silo narrowly missed a valuable cow owned by Mr. Grant, and which was being taken into the stable for milking.

Vital Struggle For Egypt Seen At Hand

Bombers Kill Hundreds Of Axis Troops Moving To Front

CAIRO, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Allied airmen already have begun peeling off the thin veneer of calm on the western desert, too crucial a battlefield to stay quiet long, and rested, reinforced armies on both sides of the Alamein line are ready to lock in what may be a supreme battle of the war.

The two-month lull may erupt into another major struggle when the brightness of a full desert moon begins to wane tonight or the break may come tomorrow or later.

But whenever it comes, British authorities are sure of three things —it won't be long, they and their American allies are ready and Prime Minister Churchill has promised them every aid possible to put up a fight as though for Britain's own soil.

One portent of a developing new battle on which may hinge mastery of the Mediterranean and Hitler's hopes of closing a giant nutcracker on the Middle East through Egypt and across the Caucasus was the growing scale of Allied air activity.

Long-range R.A.F. fighters raked enemy transport columns west of El Alamein Tuesday, killing or disabling hundreds of Axis troops and destroying 20 vehicles headed toward the front lines loaded with soldiers.

New Zealanders In Action

(That night, a British Exchange Telegraph report in London said, New Zealanders stormed an Italian-held segment in a moonlight reconnaissance raid and brought back a number of prisoners.)

In the first air operation on this front four Axis air bases in the Sid Barrani and El Daba areas were raided.

Well-placed informants in London, who could not otherwise be identified, said they had no knowlege a new battle had started, but that considerable movement behind

Son of the late William McDougal and Minnie Crogie, he leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, the former Hannah Mayhew, one daughter, Mrs. Jack Orde, and four sons, Gordon, Melville, Harold and Raymond, all of Peterborough. There are also a sister, Miss Annie McDougal, Renfrew and a brother, Colin of Douglas.

He was a member of All Saints' Church and the funeral will take place Saturday at 2 p.m. from the Nesbitt Funeral Home, 347 Charlotte street, the Rev. W. A. Filer officiating. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

WM. C. WARMINGTON.

One of the older residents of Peterborough passed away last evening in the person of William C. Warmington. He had lived here all his life with the exception of a few years in Detroit, but on the death of his wife, the former Agnes Phelan, a year and a half ago, he returned to Peterborough, and had made his home with his sister-in-law, Miss Bridget Phelan.

The late Mr. Warmington was in his 78th year. He is survived by two sons Harold V. of Detroit and John who is overseas with an anti-tank regiment, and one daughter, Mrs. M. E. Kent of Detroit.

The funeral will take place on Saturday at 8:45 a.m. from the funeral home of Thomas Lane & Son to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Hepburn Given Chebaw-Tik Indian Name

FORT WILLIAM, Aug. 27—(CP). — Chief Chebaw-Tik, "Turbulent Waters," was the name conferred on Premier Mitchell Hepburn by the Fort William Ojibway Indians band at a colorful ceremony at Chippewa Park Tuesday before a crowd of 500.

"Because of your aggressive spirit and unflinching determination we liken you to the white waters of a river that is ever in action," declared Arthur Widnall, city parks superintendent, who as Chief Great Thundercloud, is honorary Ojibway Chief, in welcoming the Premier into the band at the pow-wow.

While the tom-toms throbbed, Chief Bannon, elective chief of the Indian band, placed the headdress of feathers on the head of the Premier, proclaiming him by his new Ojibway title.

As the pow-wow dance waxed faster, with braves and squaws participating, Mr. Hepburn joined the dance with Mayor C. M. Ross and Rev. Dan McIvor, Liberal member of Parliament for Fort William.

After the dance, Premier Hepburn addressed the Indian band.

"It is a very fitting title," he said. "I have floated along the turbulent sea of life for 16 years. It is time for us Indians to take the country back and run it for ourselves."

Charge Priority On Wires Given To Race Results

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 —(AP)— "Messages announcing the results of horse races are receiving priority" when "even messages to General MacArthur" are being delayed, C.I.O. President Philip Murray charged yesterday in advocating a five-point program "for the immediate conversion of the telegraph industry to meet the nation's war needs."

"The communications industry threatens to become a serious bottleneck in war production and the public should know about it," Murray said.

The program, proposed by the American Communications Association (C.I.O.), listed these points in remedy:

"Service policies must be set on the standard of 20-minute service from sender to receiver; all traffic not vital to the war effort should be eliminated; labor recruiting to provide an adequate supply of personnel must be immediately undertaken; wages must be raised from the present sub-standard levels to stabilize the industry; and the production program should be financed by the government."

The C.I.O. head said that "Wall Street-inspired merger schemes are no solution to the present communications crisis."

He said the government vitally needed adequate communications to win the war and "should be ready to supply the funds."

Rookies' Book Is Best Seller

By ELMER DULMAGE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (CP).—American soldiers in hundreds of camps in the United States are getting a tremendous kick out of the army adventures, serious and otherwise, of Private Marion Hargrove, who was drafted from his newspaper job in Charlotte, N.C., shortly before Pearl Harbor.

Private Marion Hargrove has written a book that is (1) a best-seller and (2) a classic story of the drafted citizen soldier in a free country.

It's too bad a Canadian soldier hasn't written a book like "See Here, Private Hargrove."

Discovering the United States army through the eyes of Private Hargrove is hilarious fun. His rookie hatred of sergeants, early rising, kitchen fatigue, corporals, drilling and all forms of discipline is a delight. Private Hargrove hated these things extravagantly.

Why It Was.

While other draftees became corporals, Hargrove stayed on as private. The list of his petty crimes grew and were related to him by his sergeant:

"On the drill field Saturday morning you pulled 48 boners out of 50 marching commands. Everything you did was backwards.

"Friday morning you fell out for reveille without your leggings. Saturday you had your leggins but no field hat. Monday morning neither of your shoes were tied and none of your shirt buttons were buttoned. Tuesday morning it was without leggins again."

See why the private wasn't promoted?

"I suppose I'm just not the executive type," is the explanation of Private Hargrove.

Private Hargrove met several wonderful friends at Fort Bragg, notably an ex-restaurateur named Sher, photographer Bushemi and ex-reporter Mulvehill. They are not fabulous characters, just human.

"See Here, Private Hargrove" is the laughing answer to the question, "What's army life like?"

Too bad a Canadian soldier didn't write it.

Minesweeper Captain Sends His Thanks

PORT HOPE, Aug. 27—(ENS). — A letter has been received by Mrs. Alex. Walsh, Barrett street, from Captain Turner, H.M.C.S. Port Hope, in appreciation of a wool cushion which Mrs. Walsh, who is 83½ year old, had made herself as her contribution to the Port Hope minesweeper. The letter is as follows:—

H.M.C.S. Port Hope,
c/o Fleet Mail Office,
Halifax, N.S.

Dear Mrs. Walsh.—Please accept my thanks for the nice little cushion which you so kindly made and had presented to me at Port Hope on the 5th of August. I appreciated your kind action very much, and you may be interested to know that it is an excellent match for the afghan quilt on my bed.

We had a fine run down river to Quebec, with a few days stop-over in Montreal for stores, etc., and we are now almost ready to take H.M.C.S. Port Hope on her Great Adventure.

With best wishes,
Yours sincerely,
Wm. Turner, Lieut. R.C.N.R.

Periodic heavy gunfire also was heard.

Waves of fighters later returned from France. The cannon fire of planes was heard over the Channel.

Cobourg Briefs

COBOURG, Aug. 27 — (ENS). — John Collins, Cobourg transport driver, who was taken to Newark, N.J., last week to stand trial for breach of parole while awaiting sentence for larceny, arrived back in Cobourg yesterday. Collins stated that he had been released by U.S. authorities. He was arrested several weeks ago at Cobourg and held for Newark police. Later he was released on bail and last Saturday waived extradition proceedings and was taken back to Newark by a deputy-sheriff of that city.

Boiler for the new heating plant has arrived at Cobourg Public Utilities building and will be installed at once. The Commission, due to the government ban on heating by electricity, was obliged to buy a boiler fired by coal, as a substitute for electricity. Apart from the fact that a chimney has to be built, there will be no other changes in the heating system as the present piping and registers can be used.

William Carke, who has been in charge of the machine shop and vocational training at Cobourg Collegiate Institute, has been granted leave of absence by the Collegiate Board. A machine-shop expert, Mr. Clarke has been engaged by the Department of Munitions and Supplies. The Collegiate Board has engaged Mr. O. P. Pengelley to fill Mr. Clarke's place here.

Busybodies Held Morale Killers

TORONTO, August 27 — (CP).— Sharp criticism of "busybodies" who write letters to men serving overseas was voiced here last night by Richard S. Hosking general secretary of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., who has just returned from Britain.

"There are a lot of busybodies over here writing letters saying 'That your wife isn't behaving herself,'" said Mr. Hoskins. "A lot of women should be better employed.

"While there may be some truth in some of these allegations, others have been traced back. It is known that some of these letters have been written for spite and jealousy — because a soldier's wife has beaten another in bridge or for some other reason. When a soldier gets a letter like that he is no good for a couple of days. Nothing could be more demoralizing."

Peterboro Eggs Wholesale Tops Set At 46

OTTAWA, August 27 — (CP).— An order setting maximum wholesale prices for eggs based on prices set for 11 Canadian cities which serve as main distributing points, was announced last night by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The order, effective to-day, establishes zone price differentials designed to maintain uniformity of supplies in all parts of Canada and sets maximum retail mark-ups.

Only maximum prices are established by the order and normal fluctuations below the top levels are expected to continue through most of the year.

Following are the highest prices wholesalers may charge at each point for Grade A large eggs: Montreal 50 cents a dozen, Toronto 49½, Winnipeg 48, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary 47, Peterborough 46, Vancouver 49, Saint John, N.B., Halifax and Sydney, N.S., 50¾.

These ceiling prices the board said represent a wholesaler's delivered costs, including all his packing costs except cartoning. Eggs packed in dozen or half-dozen cartons by either wholesaler or retailer, may not be increased in price more than two cents a dozen.

At points not designated in the order, the grade A delivered price must not exceed the price at the nearest designated point plus normal freight charges. Lower grades and sub-grades must be sold at appropriate levels below prices set for Grade A. Usual quality premium prices may be maintained but must not exceed those of the 1941 basic period.

A retailer may add his regular mark-up to the wholesale price, not exceeding 20 per cent of his selling price or eight cents a dozen, whichever is lower.

New Ration Books Arrive

The new ration books are arriving through the mails. They provide five different sets of coupons, each good for six months' supply. There is a red set for sugar, a green for tea and coffee and three additional sets, one blue, one gray and one brown. On the books which have arrived we have already heard that these additional sets mean the rationing of such-and-such other commodities and people believing these tales, will rush off to the stores to buy in anticipation of curtailment. Such a course is foolish as well as unpatriotic, for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has definitely stated that at this time it is not contemplating further rationing. But because these ration books are to be good for six months—and no one knows what might happen in that time—the spare sets have been included. From books for children under twelve the green coupons have been torn, as they are not entitled to tea or coffee rations.

There are thirteen coupons for sugar, thirteen for tea and coffee combined, thirteen in one of the spare sets and twenty-six in the two other spares. Thirteen may be considered unlucky but this number is chosen because there are fifty-two weeks (four thirteens) in a year. Thus in the case of sugar, tea and coffee, each good for a two weeks' ration, will last 26 weeks or half a year. On and after September 7, a coupon holder may purchase a month's supply by surrendering coupons 1 and 2; and on and after October 5 another month's supply by surrendering coupons 3 and 4. And so on.

Although the new ration books are here the temporary cards issued July 1 are still valid and do not expire as many people thought on August 24. The "A B C D E" coupons for tea and coffee were valid on and after August 3 and can be used anytime. The sugar ration coupons were valid on successive dates, the last becoming valid August 24, but any of the coupons can be saved at any time after that date.

There is no provision for farmers obtaining extra tea and coffee to serve help engaged in threshing. In the case of sugar there was a special provision, whereby the farmer could obtain extra sugar on a purchase voucher but no provision has been made for tea and coffee. If a farmer serves tea and coffee to his threshing hands, it must come out of his own ration, or be supplied from the ration of the individual thresher.

In using these books there are a number of "Don'ts" to be observed.

Don't tear out and mail the postcard attached inside the back cover. It is to be used to secure a new book in six months.

Don't tear out coupons except in the presence of the storekeeper or his clerk. It is illegal for him to accept loose coupons.

Don't loose the book and don't fail to keep a record of its serial number in case loss occurs. Unable to give that number you cannot obtain a replacement.

Don't fail to return to the ration office the book of a member of the family who dies.

If joining the active forces don't fail to take the book with you.

On receiving your book the addressee must enter his name and address and serial number (which will be found on the cover) on each page of coupon in ink. While the red coupons are marked "Sugar" the green are marked "Spare." But they are for tea and coffee. With other spares no attention need be paid at present except to put the name and number on them.

And above all don't try to lay in a supply of some commodity on the say-so of some person who heard some other person who "ought to know" designate some named commodity as "about to be rationed." There is no other rationing at present in view. And if there was, it would be unpatriotic to forestall it.

Regarded As Home

As many as 177,500 Londoners sought shelter nightly in Underground (subway) stations at the height of the blitz and although bombs have fallen in the capital only at scattered intervals during the past year some 2,000 still spend their nights in the Underground. English authorities have sought during the past month to consolidate the 79 official subway shelters, half of them were closed forcing the human moles to new refuges and the result was that without exception they were found in other Underground stations.

Many of these people had been bombed out of their homes and all preferred their communal life below ground to the old life above. The reason is not hard to explain for it can be taken that many of these "dwellers in caves" are finding more comfort in the Underground than they ever experienced in the homes which they occupied. London in the past decade made great strides in the abolishing of slums but with the outbreak of war still many remained and in the great blitz these were wiped out along with the better homes. Then there is that thing in nature of many people which makes them love to be in crowds and putting them in a house of their own away from the crowd they feel deserted and lonely.

To Lily Brider the closing of the Strand shelter was a blow. "I don't like living alone and I feel the crowd here pleasant. I've decided to move to Trafalgar Square but don't expect to like it. They have such funny people there."

At Holborn, still open, a Mrs. Burford who works twelve hours daily in a war plant remarked: "I can't sleep above ground, and as I want to be fit to do my job I come down here."

Another woman: "We've got fond of this platform. We've slept here two years. Children have just missed being born here. We've all seen a bit of life together."

Such is human nature and it is one reason why Hitler cannot understand the English.

The Duke of Kent Is Killed

The Duke of Kent, the King's youngest brother, has been killed in the service of his country. He was a passenger aboard a Sunderland flying boat which crashed in Scotland killing all aboard. He was on his way to Iceland.

The low -toned radio announcement made by the BBC on Tuesday night of his death came as a shock to Canadians who held him in affection and respect. He was in Canada only a year ago and then he impressed himself upon Canadians by his kindly nature and his understanding. While today there is sorrow throughout the British Commonwealth of Nations it is also mingled with that feeling for the British Royal Family for it was in their tradition that the Duke of Kent gave his life.

They have all been under fire and they have never failed of courage. Nor have they sought to put aside the routine duties which go with the glamor of the throne.

Destined to follow the traditions of the Royal Family the Duke entered the navy at 14, he was the first civil servant in the Royal Family, he worked in the Foreign Office to fit himself to become a Governor-General of one of the Dominions and he travelled much in the interests of the Empire. But aviation was his special interest and he served devotedly with the R.A.F. One of his last official acts was to visit an R.C.A.F. reception centre with the Canadian Air Minister, Hon. C. G. Power, last week.

Britain from her highest family to her most humble has felt the effects of the war. It has left no family unscathed. The homes of the poor have been bombed and Buckingham Palace, too. The mothers and wives who have already lost some of their menfolk and those of the countless thousands who yet may die will personally share the grief of the Royal Family. He died on active service but while the pipes of Scotland sounded the first lament it will be a call heard throughout the entire British Commonwealth.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A man who wanted to commit suicide was found practicing recently in Philadelphia. These amateurs!

Ross Munro has put Canada's army on the map as well as bringing acclaim to The Canadian Press and making a name for himself as a war correspondent.

A metal worker at London, Ont., recently branded a comrade with a hot nut, and ended up in police court. Hadn't he the sense to bolt?

"Expert Favors Many Bodies To Keep Peace" says a headline. Couldn't we just keep on with the old unit model we've had for so long?

Though neutral, Sweden is spending more than a million dollars a day because of the war. Interesting that it should cost so much to keep out of a fight.

Wheels Found Within Wheels

By DAVID GRAHAM

RED tape still clogs our machinery for making war; Blimpery in its various forms (including the jolly, asinine form that is perhaps the worst) is still rife in our Services. If you doubt it, read the three stories that follow. I have them all at first hand and I vouch for their accuracy. In a way they are funny; they might be only funny if one could be sure that the same sort of thing goes on in Germany.

The Red Sea is 1,200 miles long, with an average width of 190 miles. It takes a ship, steaming at 10 knots, 10 days to traverse it from end to end. Throughout the voyage the ship is within easy reach of either shore. The shores of the Red Sea are composed of loose sand.

One day a British merchant ship under wartime naval control left Port Said for Aden and beyond. She passed through the Suez Canal and steamed for three days and nights without incident. Her captain kept her at a steady 10 knots, her most economical speed with regard to both fuel and time.

On the fourth morning an urgent wireless message from the naval authorities was handed to him. It ordered him to return forthwith to Suez. No explanation was given, and the captain knew better than to ask for one. So he turned round and reached Suez after three days' steaming.

There he went ashore, reported to the authorities and asked why he had been recalled. He was told that a new regulation, issued just after he had cleared the canal, required all ships to carry sand bins on deck and in the 'tween-decks to use in case of fire. Masters would provide their own bins, in the shape of empty oil-barrels or other disused receptacles, as far as possible, to save sheet metal, but the bins must be filled and inspected before they entered the Red Sea. He had been called back to Suez to fill his bins.

A FRIEND of mine keeps in close touch with General de Gaulle's headquarters and makes a point of interviewing all interesting persons who arrive from France. One day he heard that three French fishermen from Boulogne had reached England in their boat. He contacted them and got from one of them an interesting account of life under the Germans which he made into an article, giving it the title "I come from an Invasion Port." He explained in the text that the article was an interview and signed it with his usual nom de guerre. He then submitted it, as he had promised to do, to the head of de Gaulle's Press service, who read it with interest, consulted de Gaulle's chief of staff, and said the article contained no harmful information and could be published as it stood.

None the less, the Editor thought it wise to submit the article for censorship. Shortly afterwards, an offical of the censorship rang up urgently.

"The article by XXX, with the title, 'I come from an Invasion Port,' he said, 'is not to be published on any account. It contains information of the greatest value to the enemy. Moreover, the Intelligence Branch of the War Office wants to know how this information was obtained, and they would like to see Mr. XXX as soon as possible'."

While XXX was still with the Editor, the telephone rang again. This time the call was for him, from the head of de Gaulle's Press service.

"Dites donc, cher ami," said he, "we've just had a call from the Intelligence Branch of the War Office. They seemed very upset about your article. They said it contained information valuable to the enemy, and information they themselves hadn't got. I pointed out that all the information was about the enemy, and that we had sent it to them a week ago, but that didn't satisfy them. Now they've rung up again to ask who you are. This time the General himself is talking to them."

General de Gaulle informed the War Office that the article was most interesting and contained nothing harmful to us that he could see. In any case, he said, it had his full approval. Thereupon, the War Office, nonplussed, passed the buck back to the censors, who after a further delay telephoned once more to the Editor and said they would pass the article, but a great deal would have to be cut out of it.

However, second thoughts are best, even in the censors' office sometimes. When the article was finally returned "passed for publication" only one word was changed. My friend had written: "The following story was told me by a Frenchman who recently made his way to England." The censors had struck out the word "Frenchman" and put the word "neutral" in its place...

Unconsidered Trifles

Doctor Niceman (after spraying the lady's throat): "Madam, it is a pleasure to treat you—you've got such a fine control of your tongue."

Mr. Henpeck (sharply): "Here, doctor, let's have your bill. It's evident that you don't know what you're talking about."

The baby car was speeding along the road, but every fifty yards or so it would hop a few feet into the air and then rush on again. At last a puzzled policeman halted the car.

"Am I crazy or is there something wrong with your car?" he asked.

"The car's all right," said the driver. "It's me. I've got the hiccoughs."

Pepper entered the restaurant, seated himself at a table, and picked up the bill of fare.

"What would you like?" enquired the waiter.

"Egg," barked back Pepper, "boiled, but not too soft and not too hard."

"Very good, sir," said the waiter. "Anything else?"

"Toast," went on the diner, "thin, not too hard, but well browned."

"Any special design on the egg cup?" said the waiter desperately.

Two friends (one married, the other a bachelor) were at the latest play, admiring the performance of a famous actor.

"By jove," the married man murmured, "he's grand; he's wonderful. The way he displays affection towards the leading lady, eh."

"Yes—pretty good," the bachelor agreed. "But, you know, he's been married to her, actually, for eighteen years."

"What? Really married?" gasped the married man. "Gosh—what an actor!"

HIGH EXPLOSIVE!

Dakar Ripe for Stroke

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

THE Axis, which up to recently has not had much cause to worry, is beginning to squirm in suspense over the likelihood and direction of Allied counter-blows.

Berlin and Rome uneasily recognize that they no longer completely monopolize the initiative, that the United Nations' potential striking power is mounting to a point where second front can be threatened elsewhere than on the French Channel coast.

The resultant rumors, guesswork and fishing for information recall France in the winter of 1939, when the most burning question was where the Nazis would strike.

Italy, says a report received by way of Berne, now is eyeing Allied concentrations of transports and warships at Gibraltar and in West African ports, suspecting preparations for an attack "somewhere in the Mediterranean Basin" like the surprise Dieppe raid.

GUESS AT TUNISIA

Maybe, it is speculated, the destination is French Tunisia, where the Allies would be at the back of Rommel's Western Desert army threatening Egypt. Elsewhere in the Mediterranean the Italians profess to believe the Axis is well prepared for eventualities.

Whether there actually is such a naval concentration can no more be confirmed, of course, than its purpose. The Berne report does, however, serve as another tow in the strong war undercurrent tending just now toward the South Atlantic and thence to Egypt, the Middle East and India.

A wonder is that the Axis speculation did not send the reported fleet toward Dakar, the strategic African base closest to the Western Hemisphere, which Britain and the Fighting French failed just two years ago next month to wrest from Vichy's hands.

Brazil's entry into the war puts the United Nations for the first time into position to take decisive measures to clinch control of the South Atlantic, providing a base on the western side of the 1,600-mile waist of the South Atlantic which can be used to full advantage in any offensive operations to crush the present campaign of U-boats and surface raiders.

TWO-EDGED SWORD

Brazil's Vice-Admiral Alvaro Rodrigues de Vasconcellos reminded the foe immediately that Dakar could be a two-edged sword.

Berlin and Rome are on formal notice that enemy control of Dakar will not be suffered. Well before the attack on Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt specifically named the key West African port along with Atlantic islands whose control by the Axis he said would menace the security of the Western Hemisphere.

Only four months ago he advised that "the United Nations will take measures, if necessary, to prevent the use of French territory in any part of the world for military purposes by the Axis powers."

With the northern gateway to Russia all but closed and events in the Middle East rapidly building up to a crisis, the South Atlantic is more than ever a vital artery.

In view of the recurrent and persistent reports that crop up from time to time that Dakar has been used by U-boats with the connivance of the fettered French, possibly it suits the Axis to have a minimum of public reference to this particular point of geography.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON, Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 27—(CP).—Parliament received its oldest and youngest visitors of the year the same day when the 93-year-old aunt of a member and the 12-year-old son of a peer attended sessions of the Commons and Lords respectively.

The aunt was Mrs. M. Radclyffe of Brighton whose nephew is G. L. Reakes, Independent member for Wallsaey.

Her reactions to a Commons debate: "I enjoyed it but my word, they do talk a lot."

The boy was Rodney, son of Lord Elton. While the Lord Chancellor, Viscount Simon, spoke to assembled peers, Rodney, bare-legged and wearing sandals, sat on the steps of the throne, absorbing every word.

You would think M.P.'s would get away from lectures during the summer recess, but not Andrew McLaren, R. R. Stokes and Will Cove. They spent two weeks lecturing at the I.L.P. summer school at University College, Bangor...

R. S. Hudson, Minister of Agriculture, has few admirers more ardent than Lord Woolton. "I think he has done a marvellous piece of work organizing the farmers of this country," the Food Minister said using this rather unusual comparison to emphasize his admiration: "You may have lived with your wife for many years and it's a good thing to tell her now and again that you love her. I feel that way about Mr. Hudson."

The Government, which since its formation has always gained a substantial majority of votes in the House of Commons, was defeated 26 votes to 13 in the House of Lords on the question: "Should home guard officers travel first or third class?"

The vote, of no national significance, followed a boisterous debate in which good-natured speeches were devoted chiefly to the anomolies created by the Government's insistence since the home guard was created that there should be no financial differentiation between officers and members of the ranks and that all should travel third class when in uniform.

Canadian soldiers are leaving their mark on Big Ben. The white walls inside the famous clock bear the names of thousands of Dominion soldiers who have used them as a visitors' book on their tours of the Palace of Westminster.

Appointment of Evelyn Baring as Governor of Southern Rhodesia at the early age of 38 is viewed in political circles as an excellent sign of the revitalizing policy of the Colonial Office. Baring, son of the first Lord Cromer, had experience in the Indian Civil Service but was called from business to his present post.

The Parliamentary committee set up to suggest machinery for a war-time election, should one be necessary, has almost completed its inquiry, but its findings are not likely to be used except in an extreme political crisis.

Prime Minister Churchill, it is reported, has decided against any such election and one of the first things Parliament will have to do when it reassembles is to extend its own life by another year. This has already been done twice.

Sir William Jowitt, Paymaster-General, has set an example in economy the rest of the country might well follow. Feeling the pinch of clothes rationing, he went through his wardrobe and found an Inverness cape more than 30 years old.

He seldom wore it, for soon after he bought it capes went out of fashion. Now he is going to wear it again—as a coat and vest which his Savile Row tailors are fashioning from the old but still good Cheviot cloth.

The Rare Banana

American soldiers now in the British Isles have been writing home telling the folks how they miss bananas, but no doubt the home folks have reported back that since they went over the ocean, bananas are just as scarce in the United States as over there. That is due to the U-boat campaign and the diversion of ships to more necessitous purposes.

For a good many years the banana has been one of the most common articles of food. Average imports in North America have been from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 bunches a year. So plentiful was the supply that even last year a 7,400-ton cargo ship was launched at Beaumont, Texas, on ways greased with 7,000 pounds of bananas instead of oil and tallow.

According to scientific research the banana was grown in India a million years ago. From there is spread to other countries, yet the banana was not brought to this continent until 75 years ago from Jamaica. It is one of the most valuable foods known to man. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

A Bible Message For Today

And they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him. And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his finger into his ear, and he spit, and touched his tongue; and looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened.

And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.—Mark vii, 32-35.

And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David. And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you? They said unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened.

So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.—Matt. xx, 30-34.

The Consumer Is Licked

The cigarette smoker is a patriot, the cigarette chain-smoker is a super one. Analysis of the tax structure shows that for a 30-cent package of 22 cigarettes, the consumer contributes to the government 17.6 cents. There is probably no tax on any other commodity, with the possible exception of imported liquor, of as high a percentage of the retail price as that on cigarettes. Men and women by the hundreds of thousands veritably smoke to pay for the smoke of the battlefield.

Beer drinkers are reported to be none too pleased with the quick rebound of the beverage room interests in cutting the ten cent glass down to nine ounces. It is claimed that ten cent beer has previously provided more than 100 per cent net profit, and the beverage rooms could have absorbed the increased tax without hardship. Rather than absorbing any of the tax, it is passed right on to the customer. And the crowning indignity of all is the complaint that in the absence of the proper sized glass, the tap is turned on strong, and a two or three inch head of foam is handed out. The consumer is licked before he starts. The beer room waiter simply tells his patrons: "We are treating you white."—St. Catharines Standard.

A Painful Necessity

Despite sundry amendments the income tax retains its long, sharp teeth—as Canadians will discover when pay-roll deductions start in September. A painful business, but there is no alternative if we are to make good our words about all-out war.—Ottawa Journal.

U-Boat Output Still Runs High

LONDON, Aug. 27 (CP).—Despite heavy aerial attacks on U-boat yards and bases, German undersea raiders still constantly menace Allied shipping, official circles said today.

"The output of German submarines remains large and the Allies must depend on anti-U-boat devices to protect shipping," a source said. "The submarine threat is still very grave and our attitude toward it should recognize this fact."

The comment followed reports of increased sinkings of U-boats in the Atlantic and a reduction of Allied shipping losses on the sea lanes off the American coasts.

The Germans are devoting their entire naval building program to the construction of U-boats and therefore can afford material losses, the commentator said.

"The loss of submarine crews is the important thing to Germany," he added. "The Nazis particularly feel the loss of U-boat commanders, who must have experience to be successful."

Fraser Lauds Yanks

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—(AP).—New Zealand's Prime Minister Peter Fraser arrived here today at the invitation of President Roosevelt to spend about 10 days in the United States.

Almost his first words were warm praise of the American fighting men in New Zealand and elsewhere in the southwest Pacific.

Mr. Fraser exchanged greetings with State Secretary Cordell Hull, British Ambassador Lord Halifax, New Zealand Minister Walter Nash and other officials who met his plane.

Into Formation Again After Raid On Dieppe

Commandos, faces still blackened, showing evidences of weariness, "fall in" on the quayside to march back to barracks after the historic "reconnaissance in force" on the German-held French port of Dieppe.

Press Demands Winston Churchill Block Apathy

LONDON, Aug. 27 (CP).—Several London newspapers said today that Britain looks for concrete evidence that Prime Minister Churchill's trip to Moscow and the Middle East has produced results.

The Daily Herald, allied with the labor movement, declared: "The British public's taste for trivial gossip about the Prime Minister's missions is flagging and its appetite for real news—news of results—is approaching the famine point."

The editorial was considered significant because the Trades Union Congress is to consider a resolution demanding a second front at its conference opening September 7.

The Herald said Mr. Churchill's trips to Moscow, the Middle East and Washington "will become mere curios of history unless there emerges from them a coherent plan and common strategy for conduct of the war." The newspaper added that Britain is not yet "sufficiently assured that the goal of its efforts is sold and not illusory."

The Daily Mail asserted: "Among free people, apathy may become a deadly menace.

The Daily Mail proposed that Mr. Churchill visit British cities to give the people guidance and thus "deal with the apathy before it begins to spread."

Not Enough At Crisis Hour.

The more restrained Times remarked that neither the Dieppe raid nor the bombing of Germany "has relieved the continuing sense of inadequacy in British military achievement at a time when our Allies face a supreme crisis—a sense which translates itself in a demand not for premature or ill-considered action but for strengthening our military organization and its better adaptation to meet the present emergencies."

"Problems are looming ahead on the home front which...cannot be neglected without prejudice to the efficiency of the national war effort," the Times warned.

Political sources said Mr. Churchill's first public report on his mission to Moscow and the Middle East probably will be made to the House of Commons in about two weeks.

Captive In Tunisia

OTTAWA, Aug. 27—(CP). — The Royal Canadian Navy, in its 105th casualty list of the war announced today that it had been notified from the British Admiralty that Midshipman Allan Hopkins Wilmot, R. C. N., of Ottawa, is safe and well in Tunisia after the loss of the Royal Naval ship in which he was serving.

The announcement said the notification was based on information recived through diplomatic sources It added Midshipman Wilmot "will be interned somewhere in Algeria, probably Laghouat or Biskra."

Assam Province Back In Line

LONDON, August 27—(CP).—The important Indian province of Assam on the Burma frontier returned to provincial autonomy yesterday under a ministry formed by Sir Muhammad Sadullah, a Moslem and former chief of government whose ministry fell last December.

At that time Assam was proclaimed a "governor's province" under the Government of India Act—a province administered by a British governor without aid of a native government.

In this connection the India office announced that Indian ministries now were operating in five of the 11 provinces—more than at any time since the Congress party of Mohandas Gandhi caused the provincial ministries to resign in November, 1939, in a non-co-operation move.

"The return of responsible government and full co-operation in such an important province as Assam at this juncture is of no little importance in view of the Congress campaign," the India office announcement said.

Mess Room Chatter From Britain

By ALAN RANDAL

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The German ack-ack gunners are not so stupid after all. That's the verdict of Flt. Sgt. Sandy McLean of Welland, Ont., who came back to this air station in the Midlands and reported getting "the business" over a German town on which he had no designs at all.

McLean and his fellow-members of the crew of a Lancaster from an R.A.F. bombing squadron were out on the second raid on Mainz when they overshot the target.

Here's what happened, as McLean tells it:

"We found ourselves over Frankfurt. Those wily Huns were pretty clever too. Instead of opening up on us with searchlights and flak while we were on the edge of the city, they waited until we were well over the middle. And then, wow! They threw everthing at us except the guns themselves. We were lucky to get out of there and when we dropped our load later, over Mainz, we found it peaceful by comparison."

Mainz, it should be remembered, was left by men of the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. with 135 acres devastated.

At this same R.A.F. station the boys were chuckling about the story of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon which is going the messroom rounds. The Duke was gazetted a pilot officer and when the officer responsible for the postings saw the name he arranged postings for what he thought were two distinct personalities.

The Duke of Richmond (pilot officer) was ordered to one station. Pilot officer the Duke of Gordon was sent to another. Only one station received the Duke in person while the other waited anxiously for several days before reporting the non-existent Duke missing.

The Public Library

By F. M. DELAFOSSE.

Among the many developments that have taken place in Library Science since the beginning of the present century probably the most important is the stress laid on useful and healthy literature for the children. Prior to that period, although a good deal was said about the necessity of catering to the needs of the young comparatively little was done towards making it a special feature of library work. Now, every library anxious to keep in the forefront of progress does its best to further the cause of the children, and one is guilty of no platitude in saying that successive boards of management have consistently kept this point in view. The result is that to-day our juvenile section possesses about 8,500 volumes, including many splendid works of reference, such as encyclopaedias, pictures and maps. Taken altogether, it is a highly distinctive branch of our library and its usefulness is abundantly visible in the advantage taken of every part of it by teachers and pupils alike.

In order to make the department additionally interesting to the younger children there is a story hour every Saturday morning for ten months in the year. On one occasion as many as 350 boys and girls attended one of these gatherings. The average weekly number is well over 160.

Books Like Human Beings.

Anyone who is at all conversant with books is conscious of the fact that they suffer from almost as many ills as those who fathered or mothered them into the world. Many strange tales could be told by legions of them of adventures and mishaps that have befallen them in their journey through life, for adults as well as juveniles are often to be found who regard the term "Public Property" in a sense far beyond the range of the wildest communistic rendering.

Books suffer from disembowelment, and all sorts of mutilation. They are subject to all kinds of atrocity thumbing with wet fingers, and notes by wise men left in the margins being not the least of them; they are often made receptacles for scissors, notes and MSS of every description, dollars of varied value, spectacles and photographs. Is it any wonder that many of them suffer an early death and many more have to pass weary months in hospitals?

All the above is but the prelude to a short account of the fortunate finding of a magazine which was found hidden under an eavetrough of a house in Scotland where it had apparently lain concealed in rheumatic seclusion for about eighty or ninety years. When dried out it was found to contain a copy of a poem entitled "Cupid," a very indifferent production on the whole, written by an obscure Army officer of the name of Mordaunt. The remarkable thing about the poem, however, was that it contained amid much lovesick balderdash, a verse which had long been attributed to Sir Walter Scott and about which there had been considerable controversy.

The magazine in which the poem was found was called "The Bee," a weekly literary paper published in Edinburgh. The date of publication was October 12 1791.

And now, as those who read this article will probably wish to know what the verse was that caused such excitement, here it is:

"Sound, sound the clarion fill the fife,
Throughout the sensual world proclaim
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name."

WESTCLOX GIRLS TAKE FIRST GAME FROM YORK LADIES 12 TO 5

Return Game Is Called For Saturday

Westclox girls, Peterboro champions, got away to a great start in their Ontario campaign Wednesday when they invaded Toronto to defeat York Ladies, Queen City representatives, 12 to 5 in the first game of a best two-of-three intermediate provincial series.

The second game will be played at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock and the Big Bens are hopeful of cleaning up the series in two straight battles.

With Marg. Watson pitching steady effective ball the Westclockers swept through last night's game in good style. The only time they were behind was in the first inning when the first Toronto girl to bat managed to score a run. The visitors tied that up in the second and then went out well in front in the third when they chased three runs over the counting station to make it 4 to 1. The Westclox team continued to forge ahead, adding one in the fourth, two in the fifth and a big four-run splurge in the sixth that put them in the lead 9 to 1.

York Ladies finally got a second run in their half of the sixth and garnered two more in the eighth and another in the ninth to close the gap a little.

All the Westclockers played good ball both at bat and in the field. Marg. Hawthorne slammed out a homer in the third, Eunice Armstrong slapped another four-master in the fifth and Tommy Bullock made it three homers for the visitors by driving out a circuit clout in the big sixth. Altogether the Westclockers clicked for 15 hits and bunched them effectively. The York Ladies were credited with 13 but they were well scattered.

Manager Hayden's winners lined up as follows:

A. Anderson cf, V. McLean 2b, Eunice Armstrong 1b, Marg. Hawthorne 3b, I. Bullock c, M. Watson p, Barbara Rome lf, D. Walker rf, V. Patterson ss.

Lawn Bowlers and Curlers Lose Great Lover of Games

By HERB MARTIN

Lawn bowlers were shocked with the news this morning that John H. Sedgwick had passed on during the night. Although not in the best of health for the past two weeks, yet no one ever thought that his illness was anything serious.

On coming to Peterborough some twenty-five years ago from Nova Scotia he immediately joined with the bowling club, then situated at the corner of Brock and Aylmer street. He was president of the old club for three years and he was instrumental with others in forming the present club. He was a strong supporter of good, clean sport and was ever willing to help in whatever capacity he could best fill. Of a kindly disposition he soon made many friends and became very popular not only on the local greens but throughout the district.

He will be greatly missed by the men with whom he has associated for many years.

In curling circles he was also well known. He served on many committees and was elected president in 1930-31.

He has two sons now serving in His Majesty's forces, and it was just the other day he confided in us, that when all his family was home together early in the summer, that it would probably be the last time.

The sympathy of all bowlers and curlers will go out to his sons, Charlie, George and Don, and to his daughter, Mrs. H. Northrop.

Sport Shots From Britain

By ALAN RANDALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, August 27. —(CP) — Sport is going hand-in-hand with war at Roehampton where wounded men are restored to the greatest degree of health they can attain. Football is one of the big items in recuperative treatment.

Almost any fine morning men who have lost a leg may be seen playing football—with an especially light ball—on the theory that a man wounded in one limb must not allow the others to degenerate. Even bed-ridden patients get exercise.

The football is for men with below-the-knee amputations and they are encouraged to kick with what is left of the limb. This hardens the muscles and makes learning to walk that much easier when an artificial leg is fitted. For above-the-knee amputations skittles is substituted.

One of the sport's ex-headliners who are carrying on this work is Sqdn. Ldr. Dan Maskell, former Wimbleton lawn tennis coach, now with the R. A. F.

One of the most enthusiastic cyclers in Britain is James Cochrane Spence of Aylesbury. Seventy-seven and a great-grandfather, he cycled 6,906 miles in the past four years.... Most progressive chess club in the country is composed of schoolboys at Springfield Drive, Ilford. Founded in 1940 it had 50 members. Now it has 400. Interest was stimulated when B. H. Wood visited the Ilford school and played 127 boys simultaneously in four hours. Then nearly every lad in the school wanted to join the club.

Little Eddie Petrin of Montreal is a bear for punishment. Less than a week after Jackie Paterson, British and Empire titlist, put him away for a 10-count the game Canadian Army mauler was back in the ring at Watford Town Hall exchanging wallops with Alf Ward of Cheam. Petrin, much the better, slammed Ward to the floor for several counts during the eight-round bout, but all he got out of it was a draw. The referee based his decision on Ward's superior in-fighting, but even the Cheam boxer seemed flattered by the result.

The King, who came up with a couple of champion two-year-olds last year, Big Game and Sun Chariot, has got another juvenile in his stable which might go places as a three-year-old. Open Warfare, a handsome filly with plenty of stamina, cracked her maiden in her second start by winning the Balsham Stakes at Newmarket. Although she was ridden by Gordon Richards, veteran English jockey, the public passed her by and she got away at 100-5 in the books ....Mrs. Claire Rich, well-known race horse owner and patron of Walter Nightingall's Epsom stable, died at Thetford, Norfolk. Her best horse, Silvermere, won the Ascot Gold Vase and finished third in the St. Leger in 1932.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR ARMY?

(29) 15-CWT. GENERAL SERVICE TRUCK

This is a more prosaic type of vehicle, a "workhorse" in the modern mechanized Army.

Its technical name is the 15-hundred General Service Truck, and as its name implies, it is used for many things by many and varied sections of the Canadian Army.

The vehicle is a four-wheel drive, and the infantry uses it as a platoon-carrier. It is also widely used in the field artillery and other branches of the combatant forces. Nothing much to look at—but rugged and durable, as demanded by the strenuous use to which it is put in rough country.

Tire Tips From Your Peterborough Safety Service

DON'T

RACE AROUND CURVES

Never speed around corners. This practice not only scares the daylights out of pedestrians, but also wears your tires out faster than any other driving you do. Also avoid sudden starting and stopping.

And above all be sure that your wheels are properly aligned. When wheels are out of line, the normal life of a tire will be more than cut in half.

Ted Schroeder Held Court Tops

By GAYLE TALBOT.
Associated Press Sport Writer.

NEW YORK, August 27. —(AP) — Young Ted Schroeder of California, who was just a promising if slightly erratic doubles specialist a year ago, will find he has made an astonishing rise in tennis firmament when the United States amateur championships begin today at Forest Hills.

He will find himself playing the first day's feature match right in the big stadium, itself against Lieut. Russell Bobbitt of Georgia. A year ago, Ted needed a guide to locate the remote outlying court on which he played his first match.

It is not that Ted's tennis has improved so sensationally in the last 12 months, but that the players who overshadowed him a year ago are gone, either into the professional ranks or into the armed services. Ted is seeded No. 1 in this year's championships and is favored by a majority of students to win the crown relinquished by Bobby Riggs.

The opening match in the stadium was scheduled between L. Brough the women's favorite, and Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, a veteran campaigner, with Miss Brough calculated to win about as she pleased. Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, who beat Pauline Betz in last year's final, is not entered.

In two other feature matches, Lieut. Gardnar Mulloy meets Arthur Macdonald and Sidney B. Wood warms up on James Brink.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The trail ended for the Peterborough Juveniles last night when they were nosed out 7 to 6 by Soup Campbell's Oshawa Commercials in a game that they might quite easily have won. The Peterborough youngsters really beat themselves in the game that meant elimination for they presented the visitors with three unearned runs and failed to make up for their generosity by falling down in the pinches in the attack. They had plenty of scoring chances for they came through with nine hits and Oshawa's pitchers issued nine passes but the blows in the clutches usually failed to materialize. Oshawa showed a smart fielding club and played heads-up ball but their pitching was only fair and the Petes had men on the runways in every innings but the ninth and could easily have reversed the decision with a timely blow. It was a good battle. Most of the scoring was done in the first three innings and after that the teams battled tooth-and-nail for the win. The argument was not settled until Oshawa pushed over the winning run with two out in the ninth to take the series in two straight games and get revenge for their defeat at the hands of the Petes last season.

It will be Oshawa Colts the Plazas will meet in the Motor City Saturday in the first game of the O.A.S.A. intermediate playdowns. The Colts cleaned up the final series with Oshawa Laundry, last year's winners, in three straight games, taking the last one 10 to 0 and they are all primed and ready for the Peterborough invasion Saturday, Scribe Soup Campbell announced. Soup was here yesterday as coach of the Oshawa Commercials and he was chortling after his pupils had pulled off a ninth-inning win over the Peterborough Juveniles that it was the eighth time that Oshawa clubs with which he was connected had won out in playoff games on the local diamond. Campbell is playing with the Oshawa Colts and he declares they have a strong club with two fine pitchers in Dean McLaughlin and Preem Whiteley and strong in every department of the game. Probably however the Oshawa scribe was trying to get in the first blow in a war of nerves. Anyway, Plazas do not seem to be worrying. They haven't even sought to get a military replacement for Julian Wade although they are entitled to one.

Although the senior championship of the Ladies' Softball League has been decided there is still another interesting title to be settled. That is the intermediate championship, with which goes possession of the Knox Trophy. Brintons and Electrics are playing a best four-of-seven games to select the title-holders in their class and they will meet at the Bowl tonight at 6.30 o'clock. The clubs are very evenly matched. When they clashed in the first game of the playoffs they wound up on even terms, each having scored eight runs. Tonight they renew the battle and it promises to be an exciting tussle for supremacy, as both teams will go all out to grab off the opening counter and get an early lead in the final round. The pitching choices are Leila Hughes for Brintons and Mary Larmer for Electrics and both camps report that they will have full line-ups in action.

Rolling Right Along

If Plazas can get by the Oshawa obstacle there is another big proposition to overcome in this section of the province for down at Belleville Johnnie Bawden, whose pitching has been a feature of Belleville softball for years is having one of his best years. Pitching against Trenton Rexalls in a playoff game the other night Bawden shutout the opposition, allowed only two hits, struck out ten batters and issued only one walk. Bawden is with the Army and Navy Vets, Belleville winners and they also have Jim Hunter, a fastball pitcher of note on their staff. Ken Colling says of Bawden's latest effort: "No doubt it will be Jim Hunter and Stacey in the second game and if the Vets give "Elongated Jim" the same fine support that was afforded Bawden last night the series should be over in two straight, but it won't be without an effort on the part of the locals. Just to show how strong Bawden was getting as last night's game progressed, he struck out two in the fifth, duplicated this feat in the sixth, whiffed three in the seventh and for good measure struck out the side in the ninth. The only two Trenton batters to touch Bawden for safeties were Barney McColl, their strongest hitter and Bawden's sizzler over short. Bawden struck out ten to Isted's two and walked one, while Isted saw four stroll to first via the four-ball route. It was Teddy Henn who paced the locals on the defence last night, while Anderson took care of considerable defensive work for the Rexalls at shortstop. Trenton only got four batters as far as first base and only had three left on the runways."

Play Here Saturday

The Westclox girls, champions of the local Girls' Softball League will play the second game of their provincial playdown series with York Ladies, Toronto champions at 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon with the game staged at Riverside Park. The Big Bens got off to a fine start in the series when they invaded Toronto yesterday and defeated the York lasses 12 to 5 in the first game of the round. A repeat of that win here Saturday will send the Westclockers into the next stage of the provincial series. It should be a real battle as the Toronto girls, facing elimination as a result of their unexpected defeat at home will fight to the last ditch to take the Westclockers here and sew up the series. The York team fielded smartly in last night's game and are liable to come up with a performance here Saturday that will keep Pat Hayden's team busy grabbing off the second tussle in the series. Westclox deserve a big crowd to see them tie into the Toronto champs.

With the teams tied with one win each St. Peter's and Cubs will clash at Memorial Park tonight at 6.45 o'clock in the third game of the Catholic League playoff series. It should be a memorable argument. The rivalry between the two outfits is keen and both want a win tonight to flash out in front in the series. Cubs took the first battle easily 19 to 7 but Saints came back with a 10 to 9 win in the second. The Cubs have such well known softball stars as Fred Garvey, Caccavella, Brady, Heffernan and R. Garvey, the latter always dangerous with the war club. While on the Saints lineup are Joe Rochetta, Father Wolff, Honey Tompkins, Jack Condon and other good softballers. It will be Hayes on the rubber for the Cubs and likely Gordon for the Saints. The fourth game of the series will be played tomorrow night at Riverside Park.

It's a hoss race in the National League again and getting to be one in the American loop as well. Both the Cards in the National and Red Sox in the junior organization gained a full game on the respective leaders yesterday. St. Louis took its third straight game from the Brooklyn Dodgers, cutting the Bums' lead to 4½ games. It was a tight pitching battle between two fine young twirlers Johnny Beazley for the Cards and Macon for the Dodgers and it went ten innings before St. Louis finally squeezed over a run to win 2 to 1. In the American loop the Red Sox won their ninth straight win and their 15th in 16 starts by beating the hapless Cleveland Indians 4 to 1 with Bill Butland pitching three-hit ball. Meanwhile the Chicago White Sox who hadn't won a game in New York all season picked on yesterday as a good time to beat the Yanks and that gave Boston a gain of a full game and cut the New York lead to 7½.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: The Oshawa Colts-Plazas game at Oshawa Saturday has been called for 3 o'clock....Westclox girls are continuing their winning ways in the provincial playdowns. Their neat 12-5 victory over York Ladies, Toronto representatives indicates that the Big Bens played good ball on their first road trip....Usually passing a batter to set the stage for Reg Leether, Juveniles' third-sacker would be asking for trouble....Soup Campbell, coach of the Oshawa Commercials ordered that course in a tight moment in last night's game here and got away with it for Leether flied out harmlessly to centre with two out and the bases jammed....Incidentally last night's game came close to being a deadlock.... If Oshawa had not scored in the ninth it is not likely the battle would have gone on into extra innings as darkness was closing in fast....Ted Williams and Joe Gordon are having a great battle for the American League batting championship....Gordon went ahead on Tuesday but Williams flashed back into the lead again yesterday....Eddie Bush and Don McCaig of last season's Detroit Red Wings are now with the R.C.A.F. at Toronto.

E.R.F.U. Decides Not To Operate With 3 Teams

TORONTO, August 27. —(CP — Jimmy Dolan, secretary of the Eastern Rugby Football Union, said today that the league will not operate this season because only three teams were entered in the circuit.

Mr Dolan said the matter had been under discussion for the past 10 days and he had received a letter from the Montreal Football Club this morning saying it was entirely satisfactory to them that the league suspend operations.

He said Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Balmy Beach had signified previously they were in favor of the suspension because only three teams had made their entries in the loop.

Toronto Argonauts made known their decison to withdraw from the league at a meeting here on August 11 and at that time the E. R. F. U. had determined to carry on. The Argo decison was prompted by so many players going into active service.

"We thought that we could get an army or air force team to fill in to make it a four-team group," said Mr. Dolan today. "But we haven't had any applications from either of them and the Ottawa, Montreal and Balmy Beach clubs decided to suspend operations for this season."

Ab Box, president of Balmy Beach, said today he had just come back from a bout of sickness and had heard nothing of any decision to suspend operations, but added that in his opinion, "it would be unwise for a three-team league to operate," because the expenses involved would not justify operation.

MONTREAL, Aug. 27 (CP)—Len Peto, president of the Montreal Football Club, said today his team, Montreal Bulldogs, agreed it was "unwise" with only three teams entered to operate the Eastern Rugby Football Union this fall and had notified union officials his club was willing to suspend operations.

Blame Army Teams

OTTAWA, Aug. 27 (CP)—Decision of the Eastern Rugby Football Union to suspend the league's operations for this season was taken because armed services teams, expected to seek entry into the league, failed to make application, James P. McGaffrey, business manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, said today.

Possibility a senior city league may operate in Ottawa now the E.R.F.U. is definitely suspended was seen here by Cecil Duncan, convener of junior football in the E.R.F.U. and the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

Plans for such a league are still indefinite, Mr. Duncan said, but they would depend on whether armed services in the Ottawa district wished to put teams in the field. He suggested there was a possibility a playoff for the eastern championship might develop between Ottawa and Montreal and any Toronto teams that might develop.

It has been a long time since our notice board has been as bare of tournament notices as it is at the present time. Not nearly as many tournaments as other years.

Don't forget the mixed tournament tomorrow evening. It's the last Friday night of this month. And just in passing, there'll not be many more Friday nights this season. So make the best of it.

The games committee is meeting in a day or two and will then decide on the program for Labor Day. There is no doubt but what there will be some kind of a competition. As soon as we know, we'll pass it on.

Well, the second schedule is getting on. Last night, Group No. 2 played and tonight's schedule calls for Group No. 1 to go out and do their stuff.

We have no report from our bowlers who took in any of the outside tournaments held yesterday afternoon and evening.

Ottawa Thinks O.R.F.U. Done For Duration

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—(CP)—The Ottawa Journal said in a sports-page story today that unless an unexpected change in plans develops the Eastern Rugby Football Union will not operate this season "and may even fold up for the duration of the war."

"A change in the attitude of officials in Toronto regarding the proposed entries from air force and army has brought about the change in plans, according to the latest news received here," the Journal said.

At a recent meeting in Toronto, officials of three teams in the union —Toronto Balmy Beach, Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Bulldogs—decided to continue to operate and announced that entries from other teams had been invited. Toronto Argonauts decided to withdraw from the league.

"Now," the Journal said, "faced with almost certain withdrawal of air force and army teams, Rough Riders, Balmy Beach and Montreal are also ready to quit.

"In the event the Eastern League folds up, and at the present the odds are ten-to-one that it will, plans are under way to form a Senior City Football League here this fall to replace Rough Riders. The idea is to have perhaps two entries from the air force, one from Rockcliffe and another from Uplands, compete in a circuit with at least two civilian teams. The league would mean the revival of the Quebec Rugby Football Union which operated here and in Montreal several years ago."

Salmers' Single In Ninth Wins 2nd, 7-6

Salmer's single to right field in the top half of the ninth inning sent Third Baseman Kewin of the Oshawa Commercials home from second base with the run that meant a 7 to 6 defeat for Peterborough Juveniles in their O.A.S.A. playoff game with Coach Soup Campbell's Oshawa youngsters at Riverside Park last night. The win gave the Motor City kids the round in two straight games, and Reg. Kingdon's athletes are through for the season.

They lost last night because they made three costly errors that gave the visitors as many unearned runs in the early stages of the game and also because they failed to hit in the clutches. They had many opportunities to score, leaving 13 runners on the bases. Maga, starting Oshawa pitcher was wild, walking seven batters and finally Wercholaz the southpaw who pitched Saturday's game against the Petes had to go to the rescue. He too got into trouble in all but one inning, but the needed hits were not forthcoming with runners in a scoring position.

It was a tough game for the Petes to lose. They spotted the invaders two unearned markers in the first frame and were down 4 to 1 at the end of the first half of the second, but they battled back and tied the count at 5-5 all at the close of the third. Oshawa went out in front again in the sixth, but the local kids sewed it up again in seventh and the teams were deadlocked until Commercials managed to build up the winning run in the final frame.

Bill Jones went the route for the homesters and deserved a better fate. He levelled away after a shaky start and pitched good ball all the way, but those early defensive lapses beat him.

Kewin, Batten and Maga with two hits each led the Oshawa attack while Freddie Garvey had a homer and a single for the Petes and Greatrix came through with two blows. In fact, they could not keep the left-fielder off the bases. He walked the first three times up and then slammed out two hits for a perfect night.

The fielding features were supplied by Jack Carpenter in centre field for the homesters. He tore off a couple of picture catches on long drives.

Two Cheap Runs.

Oshawa got two cheap runs in the first. Kewin opened with a Texas League single to let. Higgins bounded one to Jones for what looked like a double play but the pitcher threw high to second and everybody was safe, Kewin going to third. Salmers rolled to Jones and was thrown out the runners being held. Barker grounded to Leether for an out, but Detlor threw low to the plate trying to nip Kewin and both he and Higgins registered. Rospond was called out on strikes.

The Petes got one back in their half when Garvey, second man up, poled a long homer down the left field foul line.

The homesters came back with a pair in their half. Greatrix and Carpenter walked and Batley beat out a bunt to fill the bases. Miller struck out. Anderson singled to second scoring Greatrix and Carpenter came home on Garvey's fly to left. Leether was tossed out by Kewin.

Commercials added another in the third. With one out Barker singled past Leether and Rospond was safe on Detlor's error. Lince forced Barker at third on a tap to Leether, but Batten singled to centre scoring Rospond. McDonald was tossed out by Jones.

Petes Tie It Up.

The Petes climbed up on even terms in their end of the frame. With one gone Detlor singled to right and Greatrix walked. Carpenter struck out but Batley drew a pass to fill the bases and Millen singled between short and third to score Detlor and Greatrix. Anderson flied to Barker.

That was all the scoring until the sixth when Commercials took the lead again. With one away McDonald walked. Wercholaz cut a single through Millen, sending McDonald to third, but the batter was out trying to go to second on the play. Kewin beat out a high bounder to Leether for a hit McDonald scoring. Higgins flied out to end the activities.

The Petes made it all even in their half of the seventh. Greatrix singled to centre and was sacrificed to second by Carpenter. Batley blazed a line drive single over Barker's head, scoring Greatrix. Millen rolled to Batten but Anderson drew a walk and Garvey was purposely passed to fill the bases. The strategy worked for Leether went out on a high fly to Salmers in centre.

That was all the scoring until the first of the ninth when Oshawa put the game away. With one out Kewin walked and went to second on Higgins' sacrifice. Salmers, who had gone hitless all night slashed a single over Detlor's head, Kewin running home with the million dollar run. Barker was called out on his bounder to Leether and kicked so strenuously at Umpire Batley's decision that he was chucked out of the game Baxter taking his place at short for the second half of the frame.

For the first time in the game the Petes failed to get a runner on in their end of the innings and it was all over.

Centre Humbles Giants Before 19,988 Women

By The Associated Press.

Big Pete Center of Baltimore may not be the only "ladies' man" in the International League, but he had 19,988 women talking about him after yesterday's pitching performance against Jersey City Giants.

That many feminine fans were in the crowd of 25,853 which turned out at Jersey City for a special "Ladies' Day" honoring Mary T. Norton, New Jersey Congresswoman.

Center humiliated the Giants before their feminine followers, holding them to three hits as he hurled the Orioles to a 4-0 shutout. He walked only two men and struck out three, permitting only three Giants to get as far as second base and none any further.

Adrian Zabala held the Orioles to one run until the ninth inning, when they knocked him out of the box with a three-run blast.

The league-leading Newark Bears downed Syracuse Chiefs, 5-1, in a night game, although the series went to the Chiefs, three games to two.

Joe Abreau of the Bears and Woody Williams of the Chiefs shared a perfect evening, each with four hits in four trips to the plate.

Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Rochester Red Wings, 6-2, to sweep a four-game series. Toronto virtually stole the contest, for in addition to making the most of the five Red Bird errors, the Leafs swiped six bases.

No-Foolin' Cards Paste Dodgers

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Soprt Writer

St. Louis Cardinals have shown the rest of the National League they aren't kidding about making a finish fight for pennant which Brooklyn Dodgers confidently thought they had cinched.

A tremendous stake rested on today's twilight finale of the four-game series, because the Red Birds need to take it to get the Dodgers really tottering. But win or lose the Cardinals are making good their truculent claims they would battle till the schedule runs out.

A few weeks ago Brooklyn had a 10-game lead, yet the feat of the Cardinals in sweeping the first three installments of their four-game series with the National League champions in St. Louis has helped whittle this down to 4½.

The Cardinals are waging a lone fight, for although they have won 11 and lost eight against the Dodgers this year, no other club has given Brooklyn as much as an even battle in the season's series.

This has not dauned he Red Birds, as proved by their capturing a second straight 2-1 extra inning decision over the Dodgers yesterday for Johnny Beazley's 16th success.

Meanwhile the St. Louis Browns still have time to cause some commotion in the American League.

Joe Cronin's crew has won nine straight games and 11 of the last 16 to shave the lead of New York Yankees to 7½ games.

Indians Slump 4-1.

Boston humbled Cleveland Indians again yesterday 4-1 on the three-hit hurling of Bill Butland, who permitted two of the tribe's blows to come in the first inning for a run.

Meanwhile he Yankees dropped a 5-3 affair to Chicago White Sox, who were making their final appearance of the year in New York and had not won a game before in the Stadium. Their victim was rookie Hank Borowy, winner of 12 games and unbeaten on his home field. He was rapped for 10 hits, including two homers, in the first three frames.

In the only other American League action Detroit Tigers threatened Cleveland's berth in the first division by taking a doubleheader from Philadelphia Athletics 1-0 and 4-2. Virgil (Fire) Trucks outpitched unlucky Russ Christopher in the twilight tussle, although giving six hits to five. Don Roes singled across the winning run in the ninth. Then Lefty Hal White pitched a five-hitter in the night game. This lifted the Tigers within two games of the Indians.

The third place New York Giants of the National League snapped their five-game losing streak by battering Cincinnati Reds for 11 hits and an 11-2 triumph credited to Bill Johrman, the nemesis who has beaten Cincinnati five times this year.

The Phils and Chicago Cubs divided a doubleheader with the tailenders taking the first game 3-2 in 11 innings and the Cubs capturing the nightcap 3-0 on the five-hit shutout hurling of rookie Bill Fleming. Danny Litwhiler's four singles and a double were the deciding factor in the opener.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, August 27—(CP).—Heroes make the grade the hard way in Timmins, Ont. Last week when a little righthander named Mike Cherevaty pitched four wins for Hollinger Mines, Vic (Timmins Press) Copps commented: "Cherevaty is probably the most underrated pitcher in the north, in the opinion of opposing hitters." If that's what the under-rated lads up there can do, let's have a line on one of your stars, pal.

Dreamville, B.C.:

Duffers dream every night about drives like those Stan Leonard showed the boys in the Lions Gate Open at Vancouver Shaughnessy. On the 495-yard fourth one day he blasted one 345 yards and pitched on with a seven iron. In the same round his drive on the 515-yard eleventh was 352 yards. He made the green with an eight-iron.

Incidentally:

Joe Cooper told Eddie (Winnipeg Free Press) Armstrong he'll be the 20th professional hockey player posted to the Ottawa district when he reports there to the R.C.O.C.... If that rate is maintained, only the 20-goal men will make a spot on the Ordnance team....Harry Mendel, Tony Galento's manager, told Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson that Galento was signed to meet Pat Comiskey, but Comiskey flew the coop. Said Mendel, sadly: "Imagine anyone running out on Galento."

Two athletes named Eddie Bush are stationed in Ontario with the armed forces....LAC Eddie bush, the Detroit Red Wings defenceman, is at Manning Pool in Toronto with the R.C.A.F. and Pte. Eddie Bush at Stratford in the army....Pte. Bush pitched a no-hitter for Stratford Nationals in the Senior Inter-County Baseball League's final game against Galt....Milt (Stratford Beacon-Herald) Dunnell writes that fans who watched the game were just as tired as Bush when it was over....The suspense was terrific....Infielders were knocking down liners and bouncing them to first, but making the putouts.... Bush loaded the bases in the eighth on an error and two walks...Then Galt's cleanup man smashed a liner that was caught and turned into a double play.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—If the Yankees should decide to break up their No. 1 farm club at Newark, there'd be $160,000 in it for them... The Dodgers are supposedly ready to pay $50,000 for George Stirnweiss, who is more likely to wind up playing third base for the Yanks. Other unofficial estimates on what the Bears would bring are $25,000 each for Pitcher Tommy Byrne and Shortstop Bill Johnson and $20,000 apiece for Infielder Hank Majeski and Outfielders Russ Derry and Hud Metheney...It's an even trade for golf in Atlanta. CAIT. Bobby Jones, now on duty with the Army interceptor command, has been house-hunting in Jacksonville, Fla., but Johnny Bulla, who gave up pro golf to become an airline co-pilot, has settled in Bobby's home town...Maxie Shapiro, who fights Cleoshans at the Garden tomorrow, wanted to be a ball player until Bill Terry told him he was too small for the big leagues.

Red Sox scouts are interested in Angelo Bertelli, the Notre Dame quarterback who passed up a pro hockey career for college football. He hit .350 for a Springfield, Mass., semi-pro team this summer and more than half his hits went for extra bases...Bobby Specht, national figure skating champ who turned pro to join the Ice-Capades, took the step because he didn't see any use waiting for the next Olympics.

Service Dept.

Lieut. Dick Starks of Midway, Ky., who managed to get his Flying Fortress back to England, with the aid of his bombardier, after Starks had been wounded and the co-pilot killed, was a member of Midway's state championship basetball team in 1937 and later boxed at Kentucky U. and Duke.

Last Laugh

When the Milwaukee players raised a howl about poor lighting in the Columbus ball park recently, Prexy Bill Veeck of the Brewers carefully refrained from saying a word...But the next night he appeared in his box with two kerosene lanterns.

Shots Taken During The Visit Of Duke of Kent To Canada Last Year

The Duke of Kent, killed in a plane crash en route to Iceland, visited Canada in 1941 to inspect the air training schools built under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Here he is seen, LEFT, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King at Rockcliffe Air Station, Ottawa. The King's youngest brother is pictured next, as he arrived at the R.C.A.F. headquarters in Ottawa where he made his first of a long list of inspections. The Duke then relaxed in the garden at Rideau Hall, Ottawa, after a busy day at Air Force centres. With him is his uncle, The Earl of Athlone. Japs Get Little Co-operation In New Asia Plan

NEW YORK, August 27. —(AP) — The Japanese scheme for a "greater co-operative East Asia," their version of the Nazi new order, is not working out, either politically or economically, Relman Morin, Associated Press correspondent, said yesterday.

Morin interend and questioned by the Japanese at Saigon, French Indo-China, at the start of the Pacific war, returned yesterday on the Exchange Liner Gripsholm. Before going to Saigon, Morin had be AP Chief of Bureau in Tokyo, 1937-1940, and then began a roving assignment which took him to Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

"The scheme was never anything but a propaganda lure in any case," Morin sand. "In some areas taken by the Japanese army during the last nine months—in former white colonies of territories— the native populations are co-operating almost 100 per cent with their new rulers. In others, orientals not only fought to keep out the Japanese, but even today are resisting in their own quiet ways."

Chaotic conditions developed swiftly following the Japanese conquest of Southeastern Asia, Morin said he had learned in talks with various American observers, doctors and economists, and the food problem was weekly growing more acute in Japan herself.

Vaughn Meisling, former Associated Press correspondent at Hong Kong, said the so-called Japanese co-prosperity hit the once rich British Crown Colony "like a desert wind." Hunger, looting and disease prevailed.

How It Is Working.

Morin, outlining the results of the Japanese attempt to win over the Oriental peoples, put it this way:—

Chinese—probably 65,000 Chinese followers of the Wang Chian-Wei puppet regime served Japanese interests in and around Hong Kong before the war and acted as spies and fifth columnists. The remainder of the city's 1,650,000 Chinese co-operated" by fleeing to the interior of China.

Filipinos—there were probably fewer than 500 Japanese-owned Filipinos in all the islands before the war and the bulk of the people fought Japan throughout the desperate campaign which ended at Bataan and Corregidor.

Thai—Thailand is thoroughly enmeshed in the greater East Asia" plan partly by choice, mainly by force of circumstances.

Burmese—many uninformed Burmese troops turned against their officers during the quick campaign last spring. The powerful Burmese priesthood apparently was Japan's means of winning over the peasants. Today, Burma is as solidly fixed as Thailand in the Japanese lineup.

Malaya—Malay traitors were chiefly responsible for guiding Japanese troops through the jungles after they had landed on the coasts.

Idonesians — The independence movement among the Idonesians in the Netherlands East Indies was organized and well developed long before the outbreak of the war. Japanese agents had tried hard to link the Japanese "Asia for the Asiatics" movement with the aspirations of the Idonesians. But there was an almost total lack of success.

Indo-Chinese — The Japanese have been in French Indo-China longer than in any other European colony. They came in force, in August, 1941 under the French-Japanese agreement. At first the main natives— Annamites, Tonkinese, Cambodians — were inclined to welcome them. After a year's experience with the Japans they turned in the other direction.

made contact with the invaders.

His statement was taken here as an indication the Japanese would find the going harder at Milne Bay than at Buna, Calamaua and Lae—the bases in North-eastern New Guinea which they seized earlier with only slight opposition.

It appeared the Japanese had taken advantage of adverse weather to move down the east coast of New Guinea and slip into Milne Bay, partially protected from Allied air attack by low clouds.

Allied airmen who attacked the convoy the day before yesterday while it was moving southward through the Trobriand Islands 100 miles north of Milne Bay, said the dense clouds and mists as low as 300 feet above the water made the location of the ships difficult.

In some cases, the pilots said, they found themselves over the ships almost before they could be seen.

However, they reported they had scored a direct hit amidships on one transport as the Japanese were carrying out their landing operations yesterday and that it had sunk immediately. Six enemy barges were reported destroyed a cruiser was listed as "probably" sunk, and a destroyer as damaged.

Milne Bay is about 230 miles from Port Moresby—which is apparently the immediate objective of the Japanese—and about 700 miles from Townsville, on Australia's east coast.

The harbor is excellent but the surrounding shores are lined with mangrove swamps which makes the military operations difficult.

While the action was going on in this theatre Japanese planes attacked Broome on the Australian west coast, dropping a few bombs which Allied Headquarters said caused little damage and no casualties.

blematical, the Government announced that Russian shock troops under Gen. Gregory Zhukov had hurled Nazi lines back 25 or 30 miles in the Rzhev-Gzhatsk-Vyazma salient during the last 15 days and captured 610 communities.

At Rzhev Suburbs

Fighting was reported in progress on the outskirts of Rzhev, a Nazi-held stronghold on the Upper Volga 130 miles northwest of Moscow, which was by-passed in the Red army's winter offensive.

The Russians mingled counter attacks with static defence operations before the gates of Stalingrad in an effort to break a potential stranglehold by the plane-supported pincher columns of Field Marshal Fedor von Bock. They were officially reported to be "holding the enemy onslaught and wearing down his manpower."

A German gain was recorded in the Central Caucasian campaign, developing its bloody pattern in the Terek River Valley almost 350 miles south of Stalingrad.

While Russian gunners wiped out an enemy bridgehead on the Terek or a tributary in the Prokhladmenski area, it was announced that a Nazi force had driven to Mozdok, 30 miles to the east and just 55 miles short of the oil-rich city of Grozny by road and 20 minutes as the bomber flies.

Near the Black Sea Coast, German tanks and infantry were reported heavily engaged by the Russians south of Krasnodar. The Soviet Information Bureau said Red Marines recently routed the Rumanian 5th Cavalry Division in that sector, killing, wounding or capturing more than half its effectives.

The midnight communique emphasized German losses in the Battle of Stalingrad, developed by simultaneous Nazi trusts from the northwest and the southwest wihin the narrow corridor between the Don and the Volga.

One Sector Stops 62 Tanks.

An armored formation destroyed 13 German tanks and killed about 500 Germans, it said. Russian fire in one sector was said to have accounted for 62 tanks.

A rifle detachment was credited with repulsing five consecutive attacks in which the German survivors abandoned 11 damaged tanks along with their dead.

"On a neighboring sector," it was announced, "one of our artillery batteries barred the way to an enemy tank column, destroying 14 tanks. In an attempt to avoid this battery, the Hitlerites came under the fire of our anti-tank riflemen and lost another four tanks."

The Russian seizure of the initiative before Moscow was disclosed in a special report last night which credited organization for the offensive to Gen. Zhukov, who turned the Germans from the capital last Fall, and Col.-Gen. Ivan Konev.

Heavy losses were declared inflicted on the Nazi 1st and 5th Tank Divisions and the 328th, 183rd and 78th Infantry Divisons and nine other divisions were reported routed.

"Up to August 30," it was stated "our troops have liberated 610 populater places, including the towns of Zubtsov, Karamanovo and Pogoroeloye-Gorodischche."

Captured or destroyed German war equipment was reported in preliminary lists to include 574 tanks, 1,100 field guns and 4,820 motor vehicles. Soviet airmen and ground gunners were credited with shooting down 250 enemy planes and 296 more were declared destroyed or damaged on German airfields.

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 27—(AP).—Almost the entire population of Nazca, a city of 10,000 persons 325 miles south of Lima, was living in streets and fields today as a result of Monday night's earthquake, persons arriving from the stricken city said.

Vital Struggle

Field Marshal Edwin Rommel's lines indicated he is about ready to try to drive the last 80 miles from El Alamein to Alexandria.

Great rewards await the Allied forces if they can smash the enemy's striking power in North Africa, The Daily Mail emphasized.

"It will be possible," it said, "to recover command of the Mediterranean—and that will be the turning point of the whole war....Imperial forces will then be able to begin the gigantic but essential task of closing in on the enemy....will be able to hit Italy harder, more often, and at closer range."

New Confidence, Aims

New strength in manpower, new weapons, new confidence and a new commander, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, await the test on this side.

The old desert campaigners are rested, the recent arrivals are eager for action and any despondency or weariness left from the defeats in Libya and the long withdrawal to El Alamein is gone.

But the enemy, despite losses from constant aerial strafing of his supply line across the sea, also has large reinforcements of men and supplies ready.

Parachute troops, both German and Italian which have been serving as elite infantry for several weeks, are reported to have disappeared from the front, probably waiting for the moment to reappear from the sky.

Charles Vining Heads New Publicity Setup

OTTAWA, August 27. —(CP) — Organization of a new Federal Agency dedicated to the concept of information services as an "essential activity of war," was in progress today as the government's answer to insistent demands from public and ficial groups for an extension of Canada's public services.

The new "wartime information Board" will be directed by Charles Vining of Montreal, 45-year-old newsprint administrator and veteran newspaperman upon whose recommendation the Board was created. He will be responsible only to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who announced Mr. Vining's appointment yesterday after a long meeting of the war committee of the cabinet with which the new board will work.

Mr. King also announced that Hon. Philippe Brais, K. C., of Montreal, government leader in Quebec Legislature Council and Quebec cabinet minister without portfolio, will be vice-chairman of the Board and will resign his seat in the Quebec cabinet. Other appointments are expected to be announced shortly.

While the board is being organized, the present Bureau of Public Information will continue to function under G. H. Lash. Mr. King said he would want Mr. Lash to serve as a member of the new board.

Have Branch Offices.

Board headquarters will be in Ottawa with offices in Washington and New York and possibly other cities. It will handle only war news and information.

Early this summer, Mr. Vining conducted an investigation into possibilities of wider distribution of Canadian information in the United States. While the report was never made public, Mr. King said the recommendations had been adopted "without reservation."

"Mr. Vining's recommendations are based upon a conception of information services as an essential activity of war," the Prime Minister said. "In this view the war is regarded as one of mind and spirit as well as of physical forces."

The Bureau of Public Information, superseded by the new board, has a staff of approximately 15 working on information and picture production at a net outlay of about $50,000. The entire Government information service, exclusive of clerical assistants but including some working overseas, employs about 1.2 working at aggregate salaries of about $325,000.

Mr. Vining is a native of Winnipeg, a graduate of the University of Toronto, and has held editorial positions on the old London advertiser and on the Toronto Star.

He was associated with the advertising firm of Cockfield, Brown and Company, and for some years has been president, of the Canadian Newsprint Association, which loaned him to the Government for the various services he has performed since the war. Some weeks ago he became Administrator of Newsprint for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

STARTING ROAD WORK

Curran and Briggs, contracting firm, is reported to have started work on the Apsley-Bancroft highway at the northern end this morning. The new work will commence at the foot of Paudash Lake, where the highway proper joins the old road. This would indicate that the link to the north will be completed this year, as Johnson Bros. have been working on the southern link for some months now.

ONE MORE ENLISTS

Percy W. Harris, R.R. 1 Lakefield, was accepted for service with the Engineers at the Armouries this morning, and was posted to the district depot. Others are awaiting the results of their medical examinations. Lieut. G. P. Brook with his two assistants, Corporals H. Brais and G. D. Ansley, have returned to Kingston to continue recruiting for the Veteran Guard of Canada.

NEW DEPOT.

A new salvage "main" depot is to be opened for workers September 1. It is situated on Hunter Street behind the Paris Beauty Salon in a warehouse owned by Ben Chesler. Those in charge feel this will be a very satisfactory arrangement as it is so close to the bus terminal. The former depot at South Central School will be used for storage purposes, Mrs. R. Whalon said.

A REAL CATCH

Cliff Nattress, Jack Smith, Harolf Foster, Walter Jackson and Bill Mitchell had a dandy fishing trip to Crowe Lake early this week. They caught 20 small mouth black bass and two maskinonge, each weighting about six pounds. Walter Jackson made the prize catch, a small mouth black weighing a few ounces over five pounds. Forrest Dennis was the guide.

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

William Little, recently discharged from the Military Training Camp was charged with vagrancy in police court this morning and at the request of the Crown was remanded for a week for investigation. FINE RECORD.

Pte. Dalton Nelson, son of Mrs. A. Nelson, 349 Stewart Street, who has been at the local Training Centre, has been moved to Petawawa, where he will continue his training in the Ordnance Corps. This is the fourth son to enter the armed service. The others are: LAC. Leslie Nelson, Dauphin, Man.; Pte. Milton Nelson, 7th Battery, overseas, and Pte. Keith Nelson, Prince of Wales Rangers, Prince George. One other son, Rae Nelson, a stretcher-bearer, was killed during the last war.

IN TRIBUTE

Flags on government buildings were flying at half-mast today in memory of the Duke of Kent, who was killed in a flying accident a few days ago. Orders came through to lower the flags on Wednesday afternoon. Flags on municipal buildings and churches had been at half-mast the day before.

IT'S UNNECESSARY.

One of the north-end grocers was extremely indignant yesterday over the way children are flocking to buy beans and tapioca for their pea shooters. The grocer pointed out that the Government is asking the citizens to conserve food as much as possible, and he didn't feel that it was right to have the amount wasted daily that the children want. He says he absolutely refuses to sell either the beans or the tapioca to the children.

A GRAND OUTING

Master plumbers and representatives of the plumbing and heating supply houses enjoyed a hilarious stag picnic at Popular Point, Lake Chemong, on Wednesday afternoon. George Hutchinson and Fred Goodfellow were in charge, while J. L. P. Smith and Jim Richmond looked after the sporting events, which included horseshoes, swimming, fishing and ball games. It was one of the best outings ever held by the plumbers.

REMANDED FOR A WEEK

A local women, mother of seven small children, was remanded for a week when she appeared on a vagrancy charge before Justices of the Peave V. Eastwood and E. B. Fowler in police court this morning. The remand was requested by Crown Attory, P. D. Kerr, K.S., who said that the police wanted to make some inquiries.

HE WAS EXCITED

The lockmaster up at Lovesick Lake must have thought someone was drowning Wednesday evening when a tourist from Forest Hill Lodge hooked a yard-long muskie, and started to holler for assistance. The man succeeded in landing the prize. Reports are that black bass are plentiful at Black Duck Lake near Lovestick, and may be seen jumping clear of the water at the dam.

MADE OF BRONZE

Criticism of the Utilities Commission for failing to paint the metal lamp brackets on the Hunter street bridge has brought the information that these brackets are made of bronze and should no need painting. However, they are badly tarnished and detract from the smart appearance resulting from the painting of the standard. Harry Beatty is now experimenting to see if he can improve the appearance of the brackets.

Police Seeking Relatives Of Dead Woman

Police are endeavoring today to locate the relatives of Mrs. Carrie Williamson who was found dead in bed in her home at 575 Romaine Street, Wednesday night.

Mrs. Williamson, 60 years old, had occupied rooms at that address for some time. Her husband was formerly employed in the Outboard Marine plant but it is thought that he has been working in Toronto for some time and Mrs. Williamson had trunks packed as if she was about to leave to join him.

Frank Taylor, tenant of the property at 575 Romaine Street, told police that Mrs. Williamson had been subject to weak spells and that she complained yesterday morning about being ill. Dr. R. K. Magee was called last night but Mrs. Williamson was dead when he arrived. Dr. Eugene Snider, coroner, was called and he stated that death was due to natural causes.

There are no relatives in Peterborough and police are seeking to locate the husband or other members of the family.

District Girls Volunteer To Pick Fruit

Girls of the Peterborough district are rallying to the call for fruit pickers who are so badly needed in the Niagara District. Three more girls were accepted and left on August 22, Mary Walsh, Hastings, Josephine Heffernan, Norwood, and Norma Stark, R R No. 7, Peterboro.

These girls deserve an extra pat on the back because they have been in some cases working on their own farms all summer and are at the stage where they are ready for a holiday. But instead, they are going to the Niagara District to help pick peaches, and are expecting to have as much fun as they have had other years on a regular holiday.

Girls who have had some farm experience are just the thing for the job. Being more accustomed to the work, they pick up things easily, whereas the city girl has to take a little bit longer to get the hang of things. The long hours out in the open air are no hardship because that is the life they have always lived. With city and country girls mixed together, living in harmony with their work and play, it helps bridge that gap that so often exists between the two groups, and this augers well for future co-operation and understanding. Country folks often claim that their city brothers know knowing about and take no interest in the problems of the country. In this way quite unconsciously both groups will assimilate useful knowledge about the other's problem.

The three girls mentioned above were particularly taken with the idea of being able to get out with a bunch of girls, Miss Scott of the Department of Agriculture said. When there are a number together in one place under such conditions, the girls just let loose and enjoy themselves. They work hard, but with youthful resiliency they bounce up and play with just as much enthusiasm. In a group there are always some with talent who can play some musical instrument or sing, or something equally as entertaining, that makes the time pass pleasantly for all concerned.

Enjoy Outing

CAMPBELLFORD, August 27. — (ENS). — Members of the choir of St. John's United Church held their annual outing at the summer home of Dr. and Mrs. H. O. Richardson, Healey Falls, on Friday evening, when all had a most enjoyable time which began with refreshments, and included a games and miscellaneous program. A committee of ladies from the choir assisted with the supper arrangements, and following there was community singing, for which Arnold Bates presided at the piano. At the close of the evening a hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Harvey Donald and seconded by Harold Twigg to Dr. and Mrs. Richardson for their hospitality.

Bankers Claim 5th Columnists At Work In City

Persons liquidating their Victory Bonds are fewer in Peterborough today than at probably any other time since the Government began to borrow from the people for the financing of the war. That is the opinion of local bank managers as expressed today.

"Welshers" are not numerous in this community, and the word "welsher" appears in national financing publicity as applied to the man or woman who buys a Victory Bond or Certificate to save face, then sells it—except in case of dire necessity.

"We have some persons who say they are leaving the city or they want to buy fuel," said one manager. "Usually there is the element of need and pressure behind their wish to sell their bonds. If the money is for fuel we probably suggest that they might borrow the money and thereby keep possession of their bond."

Bankers say they have been sometimes amazed at some of the rumors which are reported to them by persons seemingly of ordinary intelligence.

"I would not be at all surprised to hear that we have fifth columnists right here in Peterborough spreading subversive rumors about the finances of our country, industries and so on."

That was the substance of comment by two of Peterborough's bankers.

"It is either ignorance, reckless statement or the work of enemies," one manager remarked. "People come and tell me that they hear the Government is going to confiscate all bank deposits after a certain date. That is one of the rumors.

"Surely the average man knows that the Government follows the practice of borrowing from the banks. There would not be any necessity of confiscation.

"The general opinion of these people, affected by rumors and statements they have heard somewhere or other, is that their money and securities are going to lose their value. We have had persons transfer their cash from the bank itself to a safety deposit box.

Others were reluctant about buying bonds. They felt more secure with the cash in the bank and to their credit."

Bankers apparently are hesitant about proffering advice to their customers unless it is sought. On the other hand, and again apparently, they consider that they owe a certain esponsibility to the government and that means the country.

So, they have said: "Put your money in this bank and we pay you 1½ per cent. interest. Buy a Victory Bond and the government will pay 3 per cent. Do you think there is ultimately any difference between a bank note and a government bond? The government bond represents a primary claim and lien on Canada. Your ten-dollar bill is the bank's undertaking to the person who owns it. Your Victory Bond and your bank note, in fact and property you have, is secure just so long as we can keep the Germans and Italians and Japs out of this country.

"If by any chance we were to fail in that, then Mr. Hitler would take possession of the deeds to your property, and your whole financial structure."

People right here in Peterborough are going about talking subversive things whether they realize it or not. Their number is not so large, but there they are, and you can believe it on the statement and experience of local bankers, who are incidentally doing their bit to counteract such ideas and opinions.

One manager said that a customer of long standing told him the other day that the word was out to the efefct that after December 15 all deposits were going to be taken over by the government. That story was in circulation before, even a year ago.

If the people as a whole were as active on the side of Canada and its people and their security these rumor-mongers would not be able to get a hearing. They would be branded immediately as speaking from sheer ignorance or a positive intent to aid Hitler.

John M. R. Fairbairn Buys Leeming House

The Robert Leeming house at the corner of Aylmer Street and O'Carrol Avenue is reported to have been bought by John M. R. Fairbairn, retired chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway. A nephew of the late Judge G. M. Roger, Mr. Fairbairn has retained a lively interest in Peterborough. His summer home at Stoney Lake has also drawn him rather frequently to the native locality, and it is understood that he intends to move into the Leeming house early in November. The three months' tenancy restriction applied to this purchase with the full-time effect.

Scenes From Invasion Of Dieppe By Canadian Forces

A souvenir of the successful large scale raid of Canadian and British Commando units, American Rangers, Free French and others, against Nazi-held Dieppe, on the coast of France, is brought ashore by returning raiders. The souvenir is a German prisoner—one of many—who can be seen blindfolded in the CENTRE here.

With months and months of hard training behind them, Commando troops are hardened to pushing on through a barrage of the intensity of that put down by the coast defence guns of the Nazis at Dieppe. The barrage raises a perfect screen of flying water, smoke and metal as the assault boats carrying Canadian and British Commando units, American Rangers and fighting French to shore to achieve their objectives in large-scale raid at Dieppe, France.

Returning from the successful joint operation of Canadian and British Commando units, American Rangers, Free French and others against the Nazis at Dieppe, France, wounded men climb from a landing barge onto a destroyer to be dashed back to England.

The photographer who made this photograph had a ring-side seat at the stirring combined Allied operation against the Nazis at Dieppe, France. A destroyer, LEFT REAR, lays down a smoke screen through which the troop and tank-carrying invasion barges dash to make good their landings against the enemy.

Work Is Started On Last Link Of Bancroft Rd.

Completion of No 28 Highway between Paudash Lake and the Chandos boundary of Haliburton county, south of Eel's Lake, has been begun by contract recently let by the Department of Highways to Curran and Briggs of Toronto whose heavy machinery was moved into the section last Friday.

These contractors have been allotted the three miles reaching from Paudash toward Apsley, and it is understood that Johnston Brothers have the remaining three miles to the Haliburton boundary.

The highway was originally begun from Peterborough north to Apsley. Meanwhile the northeast end was undertaken and finished from Bancroft to Paudash, leaving the long Chandos link to Paudash unassigned and nullifying the usefulness of the work done on the rest of the highway.

Unofficial information received by the Examiner outlines the present progress from the south end of the Chandos link northerly and easterly. Johnston Brothers have reached the stage of grading and filling in the Apsley section which is said to be about done. They have another group of workmen on the section from the Haliburton boundary who have been doing a brushing job in a stretch of three miles and are now in the vicinity of Kidd's corners.

The Curran and Briggs contract lays out virtually a new route to Paudash. The highway crosses the old road at only two places, the Examiner was told, one of which is on each side of Kidd's corners. This link from the boundary to Paudash is expected to be passable by Christmas. Official sources of information were cut off today. Charles Pontyon of Port Hope, district engineer for the Department, was reported to be on his holidays; and telephone communication was out of order to Bancroft, leaving W. A. Clarke, resident engineer, temporarily inaccessible.

Earlier Closing Ordered For Most Stores

TORONTO, August 27 —Two orders which will have a drastic effect on the habits of Canadians are almost ripe for issuance. One is from the Power Controller to ban after Oct. 1 show-window lighting and advertising lighting of all kinds inside and outside; the other is an order, presumably from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, to bring about earlier closing of most retail establishments.

It is thought that one order will help the other, that the dimming of the lights will incline people to stay at home in any case, and that the early closing will save more power. This lighting order will apply mainly in Ontario and Quebec wherever the power shortage is found. It will not be necessary, for instance, in Fort William and Port Arthur.

The closing order will suggest, it is expected, that stores close at 8 p.m. four nights a week and 10 p.m. twice a week. The hours would be limited to fifty-six hours a week Drug stores will be allowed to operate on Sunday, and for that purpose are given another six hours a week, or sixty-two hours in all. Restaurants are exempted, but will not be allowed to sell anything other than for consumption on the premises. Hotel news-stands are allowed also to stay open for six hours on Sundays. Any further sales could be made only to guests in their rooms.

Irate Females Refute Story

Indignation in the terms of "huh" and various feminine "phooies" greeted an Examiner reporter today in several offices where the young ladies protested the substance of a story published Wednesday to the general effect that the new income tax forms reduced women to utter confusion.

Probably some girls flounder about in the unfamiliar depths of the tax blanks, but there are others who say they can find their way around as readily as most men.

One of the spots that mentioned the invidious item was at the city hall where great big policemen have been dropping around to consult just mere girls about the seeming intricacies of fixing up a tax sheet. And so on.

Arthur King Sentenced To Three Months

Arthur King, 39, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in the county jail by Judge McGibbon in the County Judge's Criminal Court this morning after he had entered a plea of guilty to a charge of common assault.

King had originally been charged with indecent assault, involving an eleven-year-old boy, following an alleged incident at the city dump.

After the Crown's evidence had been heard this morning Judge McGibbon called counsel, Acting Crown Attorney F. D. Kerr, K.C., and W. C. Grant for the defence into consultation in his chambers.

When court re-opened Mr. Grant announced that he was preferred to enter a plea of guilty to a charge of common assault if the Crown was willing to reduce the charge, Mr. Kerr consented to the charge.

In imposing sentence Judge McGibbon stated that there was a duty on the part of the courts to protect children but he pointed out that in cases of criminal assault the law required corroboration and in this particular case there was just the boy's story, with nothing to back it up. It would be dangerous to register a conviction in the more serious charge under the circumstances." he said, pointing out that conviction would involve a heavy sentence.

On the charge of common assault he imposed a sentence of three months in the county jail.

Council Asked To Form Bd. Of Education

PORT HOPE, August 27. (ENS)—The summer monthly meeting of the Port Hope Town Council met for their August meeting in the council chamber on Monday with all members present.

A letter was read from the Fire Department asking that an alarm system be placed in the pumping station and this was referred to the Fire and Light Committee.

Board of Transport Commissioners of Ottawa wrote the council asking that a special sign be erected by the municipal authorities on either side of the Railway Crossing, namely Archer's Crossing at McKibbon street where the accident occured and two men were killed a few weeks ago. Placing these 300 feet back from the crossing at either side.

The council was addressed in connection with the forming of a Board of Education for the Town of Port Hope, which was strongly supported by Deputy Reeve Moncrief and seconded by Councillor Thompson, asking that a special meeting of the Council be held to consider the matter.

$2,000.00 was transferred to the school account and $30.15 to the Direct Relief account. Expenses of Fire Chief Record were ordered to be paid in connection with his attending the Fire Chiefs Convention in Kitchener.

The Street and Bridge Committee were authorized to purchase a further six drums of cold patch and a minimum car of chips to complete the work on the streets.

The usual grant of $100.00 to the Agricultural Society was ordered to be paid.

The resignation of Mr. Roy Dayman as mechanic in charge of the Fire Truck was accepted this to become effective September 1.

A by-law was passed discontinuing the collection of dog and poll tax by Chief of Police and authority was given the tax collector to collect same and to keep the necessary records. In future these taxes will be paid at the Town Hall.

A special meeting will be held on Monday night, August 31, of the Council to discuss police matters.

Bowling Club Makes $116 For War Victims

The story of how an afghan donated to the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund, commenced an effort which has culminated in the splendid sum of $116.60 being raised, is unfolded in today's account of the fund's activities.

Mrs. W. Wheeler, whose only son is serving with the forces in England, made and donated a really fine afghan to the fund, and the ladies' section of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club undertook the task of selling tickets for it, and from among the membership four other prizes were donated by Mrs. L. Yeotes, Miss Mabel Patterson, Mrs. J. Baird and Mrs. Dr. Fulford which added considerably to the interest and attractiveness of the draw. Then to wind up the whole affair, they held a tournament which was splendidly organized with Mesdames H. Wilson, F. Dawe, S. Scott and B. McLean the committee in charge, with Mrs. J. Baird and Mrs. H. Beatty in charge of the refreshments, and Miss Mabel Patterson responsible for the draw itself.

During the course of the tournament, when almost every available green was occupied, a recess was called for the serving of refreshments and the making of the draw for the five prizes.

With President F. Dearborn in charge, the draw for the afghan donated by Mrs. Wheeler was made by Herb Martin, and the winner proved to be Herb Long of 294 Parkhill Rd. and curiously enough, it happened that Mrs. Wheeler herself had sold him the ticket. The second prize of a crystal cake plate donated by Mrs. L. Yeotes was drawn for by Howard Clegg and resulted in G. Snowden being the winner.

An Italian pottery relish dish donated by Miss Mabel Patterson was the third prize and J. Baird drew the ticket which awarded it to T. A. Hopins of 330 Annette St., Toronto, while the fourth prize of pair of embroidered pillow slips donated by Mrs. J. Baird went to Mrs. H. Beatty through the draw made by Ralph Burns, and finally Chief G. Gimblett drew the ticket which gave the cake donated by Mrs. Dr. Fulford to Mrs. M. Louden of 201 Brock street.

Miss Mabel Patterson, president of the ladies' section of the club, presented the returns from the draw, which in all has netted $75.10 to the secretary of the fund, and Bob Hendry presented a cheque for $41.50 which represented the proceeds from the tournament of the evening making in all a splendid total of $116.60 as a result of the fine work of all concerned on behalf of the fund.

Drawing ever closer to the amount needed to send the next £500 to England, with less than $150 required to make that an actual fact, the secretary of the fund hopes to cable this by Saturday noon of this week, and with the tragic news of the loss of His Majesty the King's brother, H.R.H. the Duke of Kent through active service in the R.A.F. on behalf of the country's war effort, it will emphasize this city and district's sympathy for the Royal Family in their loss, as with all other citizens of Britain who have suffered through the cruel fate that was has forced on them. Your contribution to hasten this will be much appreciated.

Padre Goes Back 'Boys Need Help'

LONDON, Aug. 27—(CP Cable).—Under a heading "The Men of Dieppe," the News-Chronicle told this story Tuesday:

The raid was over. Loaded barges were pulling out of Dieppe. Suddenly on one barge carrying Canadian soldiers a man stepped to the side. On his battledress he wore the three pips of a captain and a deep purple ribbon.

He was the Presbyterian padre who had accompanied his unit on the raid and had landed with the troops, scaled cliffs, and when the signal was given returned to the beach.

"I'm going back," the padre shouted to the men. "There are enough padres in England. Our fellows left behind will need help."

He dived overboard and swam ashore. Before the barge pulled out of sight he could be seen wading up the beach.

The identity of the padre can not yet be revealed. One of the men of his unit said "he was the finest guy in the regiment."

The padre is a 40-year-old Canadian Scot and had trained and lived with the men.

"And he was tough," said a Canadian soldier. "There was nothing of the armchair padre about him."

Control Keeping Prices Seventh Of The First Great War Climb

WINNIPEG, Aug. 27 (CP).—Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Federal Minister of Labor, in a statement released here last night, said that since the introduction of price control last autumn the cost of living index has risen only one seventh as much as in the comparable period of the last war.

The statement said that during the nine months since control was introduced last October, the index had risen only 2.4 points. During the corresponding period of the First Great War (September 1916 to June 1917) the index rose seven times as much, the advance being 18 points.

"The index shows that 78 per cent of the increase since last October arises from higher prices for three farm products, namely, beef, potatoes and lamb.

"All in all, the cost of living is more likely to fall than rise in the next few months," the statement said. "And in the index which measures living costs falls more than one point, the recent increase in the cost-of-living bonus will not need to be continued through the autumn at its present rate."

Bumper Crops Are Sought By Western Farmers

By DENT HODGSON,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNINPEG, August 27—(CP).—Producing arms and equipment for the armed forces is not the main war job assigned the Canadian West, but during the first three years of war the Prairies have manned an ever-widening sector of Canada's industrial front.

Agriculture remains the chief industry, but the West is determined to win distinction other than as the "bread-basket of the Allies." Consequent adaptation to war work of a number of civilian plants and birth of new industries is a factor of the prairies' three years at war.

One Manitoba sheet metal producer is turning out ammunition trays, depth charge casings and aircraft refuelling tenders. Former railway shops in Alberta now are a large source of guns, gun mountings and munitions. A one-time automobile assembly plant in Saskatchewan is manufacturing gun-carriages. Large prairie chemical firms which in 1941 turned out more than $10,000,000 worth of explosives—nearly double the West's 1940 out put—are expanding further.

Airplane parts are being made in quantity in plants which also assemble training craft for schools of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, and service the planes of the air schools.

One Manitoba firm, providing water-works materials for air fields and military camps, has worked on every military project from the Pacific Coast to the Great Lakes. A large steel plant is working on a secret device "for which no details can be given."

Variety of Manufacture

Large quantities of military clothing and service equipment are produced. Typical Western ingenuity is displayed by one firm which, reconditioning old woollens and mixing the fires with new wool, has made thousands of blankets for the army and air force.

Despite this expansion, Westernerns are not resting on their laurels. None of the prairie provinces can place its proportion of Canada's total war contracts at more than five per cent, and the West has called repeatedly for more.

Some observers say the West's best bet is to develop industries subsidiary to agriculture, which would fit into post-war plans better than munitions plants. Take, for example, the egg-drying industry, which converts eggs into a powder that will not spoil, takes one seventh the shipping space and loses none of the food value. Such plants are in operation at Calgary, Saskatoon ad Winnipeg, and a new plant is about to open at Edmonton.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27 (CP).—Munitions Minister Howe announced today that "long strides have been taken" in substituting reclaim rubber for crude rubber in making essential war supplies.

7 of 9 Provinces Show Jump In Tuberculosis

OTTAWA, August 27.—(CP—The Canadian Tuberculosis Association, said Canada had not been able to escape "the effects of a World War on the problem of tuberculosis" and there had been an increase in the death rate from this disease last year.

The Association said that Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures for 1941 showed the actual number of deaths had risen from 5,790 to 6,057 and the rate from 50.6 to 53.1 per 100,000 of population.

The association said the figures represented "a warning and a challenge" and demanded that Canada carry on anti-tuberculosis activities.

"There must be no tendency to put off until after the war measures which we can take now," said the report, issued by Dr. G. J. Wherrett of Ottawa, executive secretary.

"Disease can be as serious in its casualties as enemy bullets and can also be the arch saboteur on the production line."

In 1941, tuberulosis rose from eighth to seventh place as a cause of death of the nine Provinces of Canada all except two showed an increase in deaths. British Columbia Columbia and Manitoba showed reductions.

This was the first appreciable increase during the past 15 years, the association said. While there was an increase in 1936, it was a slight one and was more than offset by the further reduction in 1937.

Both B.C. Classes Drop

"When the population other than Indian is considered, an increase in the number of deaths is shown in every province except British Columbia," said the report. "In British Columbia a reduction in both white and Indian deaths is noted, while Manitoba, which showed a remarkable reduction in Indian deaths.

"One gratifying feature is the reduction in Indian deaths for Canada....from 792 to 715. This was particularly noticeable in Manitoba, Albert and British Columbia. These three provinces had previously the highest death rates for Indian tuberculosis. It is to be hoped that this in an indication of the value of an expanding program for tuberculosis control by the Indians Affairs Branch which has been carried on in the provinces."

For the first time since vital statistics have been recorded in Canada Saskatchewan did not maintain its record of the lowest rate in the Dominion. In 1941 the death rate for Saskatchewan increase to 32.2 from 25.2, while Ontario showed a rate of 29.2, lower than Saskatchewan but with an increase from 26.7 per 100,000 in 1940.

The death rates per 100,000 population in each of the provinces were as follows: Prince Edward Island, 74.5; Nova Scotia, 73.8; New Brunswick, 69.3; Quebec, 80.8; Ontario, 29.2; Manitoba, 45.4; Saskatchewan, 32.2; Alberta, 41.6; British Columbia, 64.8.

Public Service Bar Defeated

TORONTO, August 27. — A resolution calling for an amendment to the Municipal Act compelling every candidate for municipal office to make a cash deposit of $25 on qualifying, was turned down by the elected representatives' section of the Ontario Municipal Association yesterday. Return of the deposit provided the candidate polled not less than one-half the votes obtained by the lowest elected candidate, was provided for in the resolution.

It was the opinion of the delegates that in wartime no bar should be set up against persons wishing to offer themselves for public service. One delegate described the resolution as "undemocratic."

The meeting approved another resolution favoring compensation for cunicipalities whose streets form direct highways for war purposes and other through traffic. Representation of the consumer on the Ontario Milk Control Board "so that the price of milk cannot be raised without proper consideration of the rights of the consumer," was also favored.

No action was taken on a resolution providing that all school boards and Boards of Education should have at least one of its members a member of the municipal council or a person appointed by the Municipal Council. Approval was given another resolution requesting an amendment to the Municipal Act to permit the setting up of reserves for specified purposes.

The clerks' section of the O.M.A. in the afternoon session adopted a resolution in connection with proposed modernization of the Municipal Act. Grant Crawford, city clerk of London, Ont., who acted as chairman said many of the statutes were the same as they were 100 years ago.

"Many of the statutes are antiquated and conflict" said Mr. Crawford.

Alderman C. A. Curtis of Kingston said that any one familiar with the Municipal Act knew revision was necessary. The delegates approved a plan to set up a committee for this purpose. A resolution to this effect was adopted.

A discussion on postwar programs for municipalities showed that several Ontario municipalities were setting aside sums of money to be used in the postwar period. W. E. Rowe, St. Thomas, said his municipality had $25,000 in Victory bonds put aside.

"It is not much but it is a start," he said.

Christmas Boxes Now Being Packed

APSLEY, Aug. 27—(ENS).—The War Service Club held a special meeting and quilting in the Library on Tuesday night. Plans were made for packing overseas boxes, also for shipping a box of knitted good to the Red Cross Society in Toronto. At the conclusion of the business Mrs. J. McColl, one of our members who is leaving the community to live in Peterborough, was given an art ware flower vase. The address was read by Mrs. Wellington Lean and presentation made by Mrs. James Downing.

We are sorry to lose Mrs. McColl as she has been one of our most untiring workers.

Lack of rubber and gas does not hinder some of our Canadian girls having a vacation. Miss Shirley Brown of Stouffville, who spent July at our hospital as a student-nurse, accompanied by her sister, Betty Brown, rode their bicycles from their home to Apsley. They spent the night with Miss Reesor, Reg.N., called on friends and were on their way the following morning. They went to Coe Hill then to Belmont Lake and from Havelock will take the train home. They were really enjoying their trip.

Mr. Bob James is making a rapid recovery after a throat operation in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Mrs. Astrom was in Peterborough Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lean of Peterborough are holidaying at Mrs. W. Hales.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley MacDonald spent Sunday in Colborne.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tanner were recent visitors in Campbellford.

Pleasure Drivers To Get Less New Gas Books

OTTAWA, Aug. 27— (CP) —New regulations lowering the gasoline ration for those who use their cars for pleasure only are expected to be announced with the next week or two, it was learned here today.

The proposal, as announced in the House of Commons by Munitions Minister Howe last June 17, is to issue a new ration book for pleasure drivers who will be in category "AA" and will receive less gasoline than those in category "A," the lowest category at present.

At that time, Mr. Howe said he could not at the moment indicate what allowances would be given in category "AA," and he said it would take some time to set up the new category.

Mr. Howe returned from Washington this morning and was busy all day with the Cabinet War Committee and a meeting of the Privy Council. G. R. Cottrelle, Oil Controller, was not in Ottawa.

But it was learned from a departmental offical that the controller should be ready to issue the new ration books within a fortnight.

At present the "A" category ration books provide sixty coupons, the value of each coupon being three gallons in the three Maritime Provinces, four in Central Canada and British Columbia, and five in the Prairie Provinces.

Decision to set up the lower category was based upon the necessity further to reduce gasoline cousumption and the desire not to make it any more difficult for those "A" cataegory motorists who use their cars in connection with their occupations.

The "AA" ration books will be given to those who use their cars only for pleasure driving.

Convoy Runs Gauntlet Of U-Boats

By FRANK LOWE.

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, August 27. —(CP) — U-boats were all around, more than a dozen of them within striking distance, but the convoy got through to Canada without a scratch.

The chart in the fo'castle passage way of the Royal Navy corvette told the story. It showed the North Atlantic. There, close to the Irish coast was a green pin. Several red pins were placed near it.

To a landlubber, the pins didn't mean anything. I had just completed an eastward convoy voyage on a Canadian corvett and was now starting back on the British ship but had not yet encountered the map and pin proposition. So a Royal Navy officer explained.

The green one, he said, represented the postion of the convoy. The Red-heads were the German U-boats thought to be in the vicinty.

The convoy, the biggest one I was to see in six weeks of Atlantic voyaging, was met according to plan. Most of the ships were big slate-covered freighters, riding high in the water as they were returning to America with empty holds to be gorged anew with goods needed in Britain.

Among them were several sausage-shaped tankers, new ones covered with weird camouflage designs. The mixture of colors looked as though they had just happened, but officers explained the designs had been worked out by experts and were really deceiving to the man on the business end of a periscope.

Some Not So Lucky.

All were destined to reach Canada unscathed, thanks to the guardianship of their escorting corvettes and destroyers. But others on the Atlantic at the same time were not so fortunate, and terse stories of their fights for life came in on our ship's wireless.

Trouble came to the placidly-moving processions of ships in the form of a German reconnaissance plane. Every ship opened fire on the aerial spotter, shell bursts leaving splotches of dark color against the low-hanging clouds while the sea reverberated to the ear-splitting cacaphony of war.

There didn't seem any chance of hitting the plane, but they belted away hopefully. "At least," said a young English Lieutenant, "its good practice."

But the German had done his work well. The convoy had been spotted, and already signs indicated submarines were closing in.

All night long, the ships and men waited for an attack. There was one alarm, and all hands piled onto the decks in a pitch black night.

Once a bright streak cut the blackness, pointed for the corvette. A lookout shrugged; merely a porpoise horsing around, he said. Others could be seen then, threading the dark with bright ribbons of white as the fish flashed over the surface.

As the alarm ended, I headed back

Some Choice Recipes Are Offered by Clever Cooks

By MARY MOORE

In my filing cabinet I keep a folder with that title and about once in six months I examine its contents to see how interesting the accumulation of news recipes is.

The first two listed have red pencil initials on them "O. K. F." which intepreted means "Tried and good enough to feature."

The Maple Syrup Butter Tarts didn't seem to be particularly seasonable for August until I tasted them at a picnic. They were not more than 2½ inches in diameter and were just the right amount of sweet tidbit to polish off a sandwichy salady picnic.

Maple Syrup Butter Tarts

Three tablespoons shortening, 3 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon cornstarch, 2 eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons vinegar. Cream the shortening and butter well together and add the sugar and cornstarch, beating well. Add the eggs and beat well to make the mixture smooth. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Have ready one dozen small pastry lined tart tins (having shells about ¾-inch deep of rich plain pastry) and pour in filling. Bake at 425 degrees Fahr. for 10 minutes, reducing heat to 350 deg. Fahr. to finish.

The story on the Honey Bran Muffins is good. They were invented by a little lady whose young son's digestive tract needed a little stimulating to put it in very lady-like terms.)

Her doctor said give him bran—but the boy didn't like bran.

She lived in the country and couldn't get whole wheat bread every day.

They kept bees and hens and grew wheat and had a small grain grinder.

All of which adds up to

Donny's Honey Bran Muffins

Two cups sifted whole wheat flour (bran siftings included), 1 cup sifted white flour, 1 cup bran (sifted out of whole wheat flour—leftover flour can be used as you would use white flour. Donny's mother says), 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup chopped walnuts or raisins or a mixture of both, 1 egg well beaten, ½ cup strained honey, 1¼ cups whole milk, 1 tablespoon melted butter or lard. Mix and sift flours, baking powder, salt. Stir in the bran and the nuts or the raisins. Combine remaining ingredients and add to the dry mixture, stirring only enough to mix them well. Dip into greased 2-inch muffin tins by tablespoonfuls, filling 2-3 full. Bake at 400 degrees Fahr. from 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 24 small or 16 large muffins. A 2½- or 3-inch muffin requires 35 minutes baking.

One of my readers sent the following offering saying: "Speaking of Galumpki. I make a meat roll—that my mother called Pigs in Blankets—I don't know if it is known as that now but it's good and I never see it mentioned in the cooking page." She preceded to outline the following recipe, which I have used many times and think it is equally good as Galumpki.

Pigs In Blankets On Bed Of Ice

(I deny any responsibility for the name.)

Have beef (or veal) sliced ½ inch thick and lay on board and pound to thickness of about ¼-inch. Cut in pieces 2½ x 4 inches. About 1½ pounds will serve six people.

Rub inside with salt and pepper. Lay on each piece about 1 tablespoon stuffing and roll up and fasten with toothpick. Or lay I slice bacon and 1 slice onion on each slice of beef and roll up and fasten with toothpick. Roll each piece in flour. Sear meat on all sides in hot fat and add boiling water or tomato juice or tomatoes to depth of ¼-inch, reduce heat and cover closely and cook slowly for about 1 hour if meat is veal; 2½ hours if meat is round or flank steak. Water may need to be added to keep to ¼-inch level.

When ready serve hot flaky rice on hot platter and place meat rolls on it and pour over gravy. Garnish with parsley.

This is a delicious and economical main course for dinner, especially when tomatoes are used for the gravy.

Blueberry Muffins

You remember my friend Garny of cooking fame? She sent me this little jewel of a recipe.

Two cups flour, 1-3 cup sugar, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 egg, beaten, 1 cup milk, 3 tablespoons melted fat, 1 cup fresh blueberries. Sift dry ingredients. Combine beaten egg, milk and melted fat (slightly cooled). Add to dry ingredients. Stir until flour disappears but not until batter is smooth. Fold in blueberries, mixing as little as possible. Fill greased muffin tins two-thirds full, handling the batter as little as possible. Bake in hot oven at 425 degrees Fahr. for about 25 minutes.

This Week's Best Wartime Recipe

Contributed By Mary Moore Readers

"Dear Mrs. Moore.—I am not sure exactly what kind of recipes you want; but we live on a farm and I have to find ways of using up the windfall peaches. I make conserve of course, and jam and peach pie, but this is the favorite with our boys."

Peach Water Ice

(Contributed by Mrs. Homer Jones.)

Three cups mashed peaches, ¼ lemon juice, 1 cup strained honey, ½ cup sugar, 2 cups water. Sprinkle the sugar and honey over the well-mashed peaches and let stand one hour. Add water and lemon juice and force through strainer. Put in tray of electric refrigerator to freeze."

"Sometimes when I need mayonnaise I use 4 egg yolks for it, and I use the leftover whites for a white cake to serve with the Peach Water Ice. This is only for a special occasion though—I know that would not be considered a wartime economy.—M. J.

Thanks, Mrs. Jones. I thought to try this, I would make half a batch because our dessert was unprepared and this made a second one. However, the family ate both and wanted more peach water ice! There's my testimonial.

ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

Question: I read and enjoy your page and as it is getting near canning time again I thought I would write you for some information on canning peas. When I canned my peas two years ago I put a little boracic acid in the top of each bottle before I processed them, but I have forgotten the amount I used and I would like to know if this would be harmful. They kept very nicely and I find peas hard to keep if this is not added. Mrs. Robt. A.

Answer: I cannot advise you regarding the use of boracic in canning peas. I can find no mention of it in commercial or household methods of canning peas, nor does the chemist at the canning laboratory of the American Can Co. have any knowledge of its use. He says you might as well use it in very small quantities since it will do no harm, but what you must be sure to do is sterilize the sterile jars full of peas for 3 hours, either in oven at 350 deg. Fahr (standing in pan of water) or in hot water bath at boiling point, having water come to within 2 inches of tops of jars.

I am sorry I cannot advise you regarding the amount of boracic acid, but think if you uuse it at all the amount should be minute.

Hoping to be of better use next time.

Question: Last year I did some pickles from a recipe I got out of our paper, but in some way my recipe has been mislaid. It was cucumber and if you wished it other vegetables, and it was done up the same day you out the vegetables. There was just white mustard seed for flavoring and sugar and vinegar, but I do nto know quantities. They were extra good. If you have the recipe please forward it to me. Thanks. Mrs. J. Gordon M.

Answer: Thank you for your letter.

Answer I believe the cucumber pickle you are referring to is my Sliced Cucumber Pickle.

Two quarts sliced cucumbers, (1 large onion and 1 large pepper sliced may be added if desired,—but if not used increase cucumbers to 2 quarts and 1 cup) 4 quarts water, ½ cup salt, 1 quart vinegar, 2 tablespoons mustard, 2 cups light brown sugar, (¼ teaspoon turmeric is optional). Use green cucumbers, scrub well, cut off ends and discard them, but do not peel, slice thinly. Dissolve the salt in water, pour over sliced vegetables, let stand 3 hours; drain. Heat vinegar with mustard seed and sugar to boiling point, add cucumber (and other vegetables if used). Bring to boiling point again, add turmeric if used, let cool. Seal when cold. This is a delicious pickle—very crisp.

QUESTION: I would like to know if it is possible to can broad beans—if so what method should I use. I always can my peas, green beans, and corn without water in the jars, in hot bath; would the method be alright with broad beans? Thanking you kindly.—G. E. H.

ANSWER: Unless broad beans are very young and tender they should be shelled, boiled hard 1 minute, and packed into sterile jars; add one teaspoon salt to each quart jar and fill to overflowing with boiling hot water in which they were parboiled. Sterilize in hot water bath 3 hours, counting time after water begins to boil. Broad beans belong to the class of vegetables that are non-acid and I do not recommend canning them if pressure cooker is not available. Always boil for 5 minutes beans that have been processed in hot water bath, before eating.

QUESTION: I am enclosing an ad, which I think refers to the product you mentioned in last week's paper. It sounded much like it so I would like to know as I did down berries with it and they lost all color but have not opened them yet. I did asparagus and it looks all right, but do not want to do too much if it is no use.

If it is not advisable to use this product why doesn't "Ottawa" prohibit its sale and manufacture as many housewives will try it and if each home has even two bottles of spoiled fruit think of the waste of good food. In these times we cannot afford to waste anything. Thanking you, I always enjoy your page and watch for different recipes.—Hazel Pickering, London, Ont.

ANSWER: I have sent your letter with many others to Ottawa to get an answer from the Dominion analyst. There has been so much unfavorable comment on the product you refer to that there will doubtless be some ruling made on its sale in the near future.

I am sorry that I cannot be more specific. However your letter and others like it will help to speed a decision.

For Friday, August 28.

A day of outstanding possibly dramatic and spectacular events is forecast by the lunar and mutual aspects of major planets Excitement, commotion, disruption and upheaval may descend from hidden surprising and unexpected sources, with definite demand for exceptional balance, calm and resourcefulness, if a splendid opportunity, of great scope and possibilities is to be firmly grasped and engineered to high goals.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year of remarkable, spectacular, intriguing and challenging circumstances, which must be bravely, decisively and crushingly manipulated if a very real desirable, and worthwhile opportunity for high achievement, honors, expansive and far-reaching good fortune and happy destiny are to be attained. But this will take great skill, ingenuity, acumen and sagacity as well as alertness to deception, fraud, underhand and unscrupulous attack, both open and subtle.

A child born on this day may have many practical as well as exceptional talents and abilities, with ingenuity originality and independence, all of which it may need to cope with strange events.

M. Mary Doherty Is Bride Of John A. Jordan

The Church of the Sacred Heart was the scene of a pretty August wedding yesterday morning when Marguerite Mary Doherty, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty, formely of Otonabee, was united in marriage to John A. Jordan, of Read, Ontario.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, James Doherty, of this city, was charmingly attired in a gown of ivory brocaded duchess satin fashioned on princess lines and falling into a flowing train. She wore a veil hung from a halo head-dress and carried a bouquet of American beauty roses. Miss Geraldine Doherty, niece of the bride, was bridesmaid in a lovely floor-length gown of heaven's own blue net over taffeta with matching halo headdrss and veil and carried a bouquet of pink gladioli and fern. The groom was attended by his nephew, Mr. Clair Jordan.

Rev. Father Houlihan performed the ceremony and Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien was also present in the sanctuary.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Kawartha Club, where about 30 guests were received. Later the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Ottawa and points east, the bride travelling in a navy ensemble and jacket with matching velvet hat and accessories.

The groom's gift to his bride was a handsome cedar chest, to the bridesmaid a compact, and to the best man a cigarette lighter.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will live on the groom's farm at Richmond, Ontario.

Hawley-Stainton Vows At Zion United Church

In a beautiful setting of ferns and tall standards of pink and white gladioli, with the memorial windows of Zion United Church lending a distinctive atmosphere, there took place on Saturday, August 22, the wedding of Berenice Eleanor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stainton of Hampton, to Adam Ostrom Hawley of Peterborough, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Hawley, Charlotte street, Peterborough. The Rev. Walter Rackham, Hampton, officiated. Mrs. Ross Lee, sister of the bride played the wedding music and during the signing of the register played Grieg's "I Love Thee."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of chalk white lovely lady crepe, fashioned on classic lines with a softly draped neckline, tiny buttons down the back, and a small train. Her finger-tip veil of fine French net fell gracefully from a coronet of gardenias and she carried a bouquet of Briarcliffe roses. Her only ornament was a gold locket, gift of the groom.

Miss Eileen Stainton was maid of honor for her sister, and Misses Diane Lee and Nancy Varcoe, nieces of the bride and groom respectively, were junior bridesmaids. Miss Stainton was gowned in horizon blue velva crepe, in draped style, with fitted waist-line and long skirt falling in soft folds at the front. She wore a tiny cap of the same material in which were fastened several fresh roses, and she carried a bouquet of Briarcliffe roses. The junior attendants were charming in forget-me-not blue and blush pink taffeta made with sweetheart necklines and bouffant skirts and trimmed with contrast in velvet bows. Halos of sweet-peas graced their heads, and they carried colonial nosegays of pink and blue sweet-peas. Herbert Hawley, R.C.A.F., brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Lloyd and John Stainton, R.C.A.F., brothers of the bride.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, which followed the ceremony, the bride's mother received wearing a gown of flowered pussy willow crepe, a large black hat. Mrs. Hawley chose a frock of Alice blue with matching hat. Both wore corsages of Hollywood roses. Ten relatives and friends of the bride assisted in serving the guests. Dr. C. W. Slemon of Bowmanville was toastmaster. For her wedding trip the bride chose a gold wool dress with black accessories. On their return they will live at 595 Division street, Peterborough.

Toronto Bride Known In Peterborough

Parkdale Presbyterian Church, Toronto was the scene of a very pretty choral wedding on Saturday evening, August 8, at seven o'clock, when Alvina Marie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Walter Welch, Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, where she was born., became the bride of Mr. Clarence N. Werner, Hamilton, only son of Mr. J. W. Werner and the late Mrs. Werner, Ayton. Rev. Gilbert D. Little, of Chalmers Presbyterian church, Toronto, friend of the groom, conducted the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of ferns and tall white standards of white and coral gladioli.

Mr. Harry S. Reid was at the organ and played throughout the service. Preceding the entry of the bride and her attendants, the choir, of which the bride had been a member, sang.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a form-fitting gown of ivory slipper satin, with sweetheart neckline and a train. Her long embroidered illusion veil was held in place with tiny white rosebuds and she carried a cascade bouquet of Joanna Hill roses, white gladioli blossoms and bouvardia.

Miss Verna McConnell was maid of honour, gowned in a slipper-length turquoise sheer crepe dress. The bridesmaids were Miss Marjorie Armstrong, Miss Ruth Carter, and Miss Pauline Werner, Listowel, cousin of the groom. Their gowns were all fashioned alike of coral sheer crepe, and all wore silver lockets and carried arm bouquets of coral gladioli blossoms. Braided halos with clusters of coral gladioli blossoms held their shoulder-length veils in place.

Mr. Harold Widmeyer, Brampton, was best man for his cousin, and Lieutenant Fred R. Armstrong, R. C. A. S. C. and Private Harold Carter were ushers.

During the signing of the register, the choir sang again. A wedding breakfast followed at the Old Mill where the bride's mother received the guests, attired in a flour-length concord crepe gown, black accessories, kolinsky furs, and corsage of Token roses and violas.

For their wedding trip, the bride and groom left for Montreal, whence they sailed down the St. Lawrence and Saguenay rivers, and on their return visited in Quebec and Montreal.

The brides travelling costume was a military blue wool crepe suit with silver fox fur, black accessories and corsage of Token roses and gladioli.

This Is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

Many people today are vociferous in their desire to improve the lot of this or that down-trodden portion of humanity. We have all been smbitten, at some time or another, with a desire to make things easier and pleasanter for our fellow-men. Loudly we have demanded this social reform or that improvement. We want to tear out our city slums and build air-conditioned apartments equipped with bathtubs and electric washing machines; we snatch grubby, pale-faced slum children from the city pavements and set them down for two weeks in a rural camp, after which we return them to the slum. Most of all we want to bring about social and political reforms that will permanently improve the lot of those less fortunate than ourselves.

We want—and let us be honest about this—we want, in many cases, to satisfy our own vanity by playing the benevolent feudal lord in modern guise; scattering largesse of reform upon those whose way of life is less comfortable than our own. And we often wonder why such reforms as we do accomplish seem to have so little effect.

We forget too often something that is plain in every chapter of our history books. We forget that the freedoms and privileges of the democratic way of life, which we take so much for granted today, were not the gifts of a benevolent ruling class, but the result of unflagging labor, untold suffering, and even death, on the part of our ancestors, who won them, not for someone else, but for themselves. We forget that the seeds of revolt against existing wrongs were sown in the minds of those who were wronged and that it was from them the revolt came.

The Athenian democracy was no gift from the gods on Olympus to the citizens of Athens; it was the result of the struggle of those citizens against oppression and tyranny. The imperfect democracy we know today is the result of similar struggles and the perfect democracy which may exist in the future will be the result of further struggles by us, our children, and our children's children, to improve our own way of living, not the living conditions of others.

You see, it isn't much use giving people washing machines and bathtubs, unless those people have an overwhelming desire to be clean, and the keep their homes clean and beautiful. And when they have that desire they will get their washing machines without any help from you or I.

To send a slum child to a summer camp for two weeks may give him some transitory happiness. Good food, fresh air and sunshine may temporarily improve his health and enable him to exist through another winter in this city slum, but it accomplished no lasting good unless there is implanted in that child's mind the idea that this clean, healthy way of life should be part of his and every other child's birthright. When he recognizes the injustice in the fact that some children have these things and others have not, then the seed of revolt is sown, and it will grow and bear fruit.

Every reform that ever came about, happened because the people concerned made it clear and unmistakable that they would have this and nothing else. They did not blindly follow a leader who promised great things; they knew what they wanted, and they chose the leader who could get it for them. That is how democracy works.

DOROTHY DIX

ENGAGED WOMAN COMPLAINS OF MOTHER'S WATCHFULNESS.

She Listens to Conversation and Asks Fiancee to Leave If He Stays Late.

Dear Dorothy Dix: How can I make my mother see that my fiancee and I have a right to be alone and have some private conversation on the one or two nights a week that he comes to see me? She insist on sitting in the same room with us and listening to everything we say. If he stays later than 11 o'clock she asks him to leave, which is very embarrassing to us.

We are both 23 years old and decent young people, and we certainly don't want to do anything wrong. We hate to have to go out every time we want any private conversation, because we are both tired after working all day. But what else can we do? We can't talk like we would like to with her sitting around and criticizing everything we say.

If we go out and come in even a few minutes after 12 she raises the roof. What can we do? If you will write somethig about this I will see tha she reads it, even if I have to paste it on her dresser.

DISGUSTED DAUGHTER.

ANSWER: Your mother seems to have forgotten all about her own girlhood and how she felt about a third party listening in when your father came a-courting her. I'll warrant she didn't encourage HER mother to sit around like a skeleton at the feast every time he called and thereby turn the evenings that should have been a happy twosome into a boring threesome.

No doubt your mother thinks she is protecting you by her presence, but from what and whom? What danger is a girl in from the fine young man who is going to make her his wife? And if a girl can take care of herself out in the wicked world all day, why does she need a guard in her own home in the evenings? It is love's labor lost on your mother's part, and she certainly is losing her beauty sleep for nothing.

Chaperon Is Outmoded.

Can't you make her see that the chaperon is an outmoded institution in these days and that the conditions of modern life have abolished her job? Perhaps mothers could keep their daughters virtuous by watching them when maidens were kept shut up in their own houses and never allowed to speak to a bold, bad man except in Mama's presence. But now, when practically every girl spends her days in offices and stores working side by side with men, what's the good of watching her for a couple of hours in the evening? The little lambs have played with the wolves all day, and if none of them has been devoured it is because the wolves are not so bad as they are painted and the little lambs know how to take care of themselves.

The trouble with all espionage is that it falls down somewhere. And especially is mother's spying fruitless. Her daughters go where she cannot go. She can't hold their hands all day while they are taking dictation. She can't stand by their sides while they are selling goods. And she is silly to attempt it for the only results are that she drives eligible men away from her daughters and makes the girls miserable and resentful.

Nowadays every girl has to be her own chaperone and her mother has to do her work before the girl is adolescent. If she has, if she has taught Mamie and Sadie to have high principles and self-respect and to hold their honor above their lives, as old melodramas used to say, they won't need Mother to stand guard over them. They will know how to watch their steps.

ADVISED TO ELOPE.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a girl of 21, deeply in love with a boy of good character who has an excellent position and a very bright future. My parents are living and in comfortable circumstances. My problem is this:

My father has a heart ailment, but he is by no means an invalid. He feels that he has only a few years to live and that I should remain single on that account, although there are three other children. My fiancee wants me to elope, but my family think my father would not be able to stand the shock. Understand that there is no objection to my marrying the young man after my father dies. It is only that he doesn't want me to marry while he is alive. What shall I do?

ANSWER: Weep no more, fair maiden. Dry your eyes and step around to the parson and get married without agitating your father by discussing the matter, or putting him through all the turmoil of a big wedding. And go on your bridal trip without going home for any reconciliation scenes. By the time you get back everything have blown over and your father will be feeling fine.

If you have any scruples about this, talk it over privately with your father's doctor. He will tell you that people with heart trouble frequently live for twenty or thirty years, and sometimes longer. Also, he will tell you that there are thousands of people who use their poor hearts as a means of tyrannizing their families and keeping everybody on the jump working for them and waiting on them and giving in to them because they are afraid of crossing Father or Mother or Mamie or John.

You father must be an exceedingly selfish man to be willing to sacrifice your chances of making a good marriage and living a happy life with the man you love, just because he wants to keep you with him. Don't be foolish enough to do it. It is no part of your duty. And if he would look at the matter fairly he would recognize it and give you his blessing and rejoice in your good fortune.

A SELFISH MOTHER.

Dear Miss Dix: Do you think that a man whose wife s workng to supplement his small income has a right to give his mother any money toward her support? My husband and I are both working because his salary is very small and we are denying ourselves everything trying to save for our own home and to have a child. My husband's mother is a strong healthy woman who is capable of earning her own living, yet she has never worked a day in her life and has instilled in my husband such a sense of responsibility for her welfare that it supersedes his feeling for me.

He gives her almost half of all he earns and makes no effort to induce her to go to work. Am I selfish in feeling that my husband is not giving me a fair deal?

ANSWER: If your husband's mother was old and helpless or sick and unable to work, it would be his duty to support her, but I have never been able to see why a strong, healthy middle-aged woman should be a parasite upon her children.

Yet she often is. I know innumerable women who sit with folded hands and demand that their children support them when they are far more able to work than are their children.

I think that nothing would add more to the sum of human happiness than for every mother who is able to work to hustle herself a job. It would settle the mother-in-law problem and it would make those women happy because they would be independent.

to my improvished bunk on the wardroom settee. En route, a look at the passageway chart showed an even dozen red pins clustered about the green one, all within striking distance of the westbound fleet.

The navigator chuckled as I looked. "That isn't the worst of it," he observed cheerfully, "so many subs have been reported I've run out of pins."

Slip Cover Renews Old-Looking Chair

Pinned and Cut Right on Chair

Yes, chairs get their faces lifted, too! The beauty treatment? A brand-new upholstery-style slip cover you can make yourself — fitting the fabric right to the chair and snipping off what you don't need.

A sturdy cotton twill, in an attractive geometric pattern as in our picture, gives a firm upholstery effect.

To start, remove the chair cushions and pin fabric to top of chair. Smooth and pin it down inside back and seat, allowing 4 inches for tuck-in between, and trim around pins to 1½ inches for seams.

Now cover the rest of the chair in just the same way—a section at a time—arms, front, sides, back and cushion.

The next step is to pin pieces together, take out pins that hold fabric to chair, and remove the pinned-up cover to baste. A "fitting"—and you run it off on the machine!

Our 32-page booklet describes in detail, with diagrams, each step of making a slip cover the pin-on way—for chair or sofa. Tells how to finish, make plackets and trim; also how to fit auto seats, unusually shaped chairs. Suggests colors, fabrics to harmonize with your room.

For your copy of "How to Make Slip Covers" send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner, Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

FREAKS ARE DANGEROUS

HANDS WITH terrifically long suits are full of dynamite. When one suit is unbalanced to a great degree, all other suits are likely to be similar. Consequently, as veteran cardsmen have learned, it is wise not to bid too high on them. A first round ruff, or the breaking of communications between the declarer's hand and the dummy, may cause apparently sure things to become impossibilities.

North: ♠ 6 3 2 ♥ A K Q J 10 7 5 4 ♦ 6 3 ♣ None

West: ♠ None ♥ 9 8 6 ♦ K 5 4 2 ♣ A K Q J 7 5

East: ♠ 10 7 4 ♥ 2 ♦ Q J 9 8 7 ♣ 8 6 4 3

South: ♠ A K Q J 9 8 5 ♥ 3 ♦ A 10 ♣ 10 9 2

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
3 ♠	4 ♣	4 ♥	Pass
4 NT	Dbl	5 ♥	Pass
7 ♠

Queer bidding! But then it was queer at every table of the tournament where this hand was dealt. In nearly all cases it wound up at 6-Spades or 7-Spades. One North player got into 7-Hearts, and was set by a spade lead, ruffed by West.

Various things happened to the Spade contracts. Where West made his normal lead of the club K, it was a breeze for South, who merely ruffed that trick in dummy and then ran plenty of spades and hearts.

Two of the West players decided to lead a heart against the spade contract, reckoning there was a good chance for a first round ruff by East, who might well be blank in the suit. As it developed, this did not produce the expected ruff, but it did destroy communcation between the dummy and South's hand. One South managed to make 6-Spades after that lead. He won with the heart A, led to the diamond A, ruffed the club 2 with the spade 2, led the heart K, over-ruffed the spade 4 with the 8, ruffed the club 9 with the spade 3, led the heart Q and over-ruffed the spade 7 with the 9, ruffed the club 10 with the spade 6, led the heart J and over-ruffed the spade 10 with the J, cashed the spade A, K, Q and 5, and gave up the diamond 10 at the end.

At the other table, where a heart was led to the A, South decided to try for a trump split, playing the A and K, intending to use the 5 to the 6 for re-entry to dummy to run the hearts. When the split did not develop, he managed to ruff one club in the dummy, but wound up losing two clubs and a diamond, being down two on his small slam bid.

If West bids clubs and East spades during the auction, how can North and South, by proper use of the Blackwood convention, find out how high they can safely go in spades on this deal?

Canadians' Raid Likely To Pave Way To Victory

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, August 27—(CP).—The raid on Dieppe a week ago today may prove to be a distinctly Canadian contribution to the technique of modern warfare as well as a contribution to the ultimate victory of the United Nations, in the opinion of some students of military history.

After appropriate study from all angles it may point the way to a break in the present deadlock in the west just as the trench raids, also invented by Canadians, proved a means of ending a deadlock in the First Great War.

Similarities between the present position of the German and Allied forces and that which prevailed in the fall of 1916 have been noted. Both then and now the two forces confronted each other without apparently, being able to get at each other except by big offensive operations which involved tremendous preparations, great accumulations of men and material and great losses.

Then it was the system of trench warfare which both sides followed which brought movement to a standstill. Now it is the stretch of water which separates Britain from the continent of Europe.

Start of Trench Swoops

In November, 1915, the 7th Canadian Battalion, then under command of Victor Odlum of Vancouver, now a major-general and High Commissioner in Australia, pulled off the first successful trench raid.

A way was found of getting into the enemy trenches. It involved careful preparation, rehearsals of the part each man was to play and surprise. On the first raid a handful of men broke into the German trenches, smashed things up, killed 50 Germans and brought back 12 prisoners at the cost of one man killed and one wounded.

The purposes of the trench raids became standard practice throughout the British and French armies as a result of that experiment were to shatter the morale of the enemy, to damage his installations and to obtain information from prisoners and first-hand observation.

By this time the men who conceived and executed the raid probably know whether its results show the possibility of punching a permanent hole through which a mechanized army can march or a series of similar temporary holes for the purpose of harassing the enemy, and forcing him to tie up more men in the west while the Russians fight on in the east.

Dutch Officials Java Pilot Die In Storm Crash

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Aug. 27—(CP Cable)—Four Netherlands government employees, a commander of Royal Netherlands Navy and one woman were among 13 persons killed in the Sunday crash of a KLM (Dutch airline) plane, it was announced today.

The passengers killed were:

Cmdr. George E. Van Notten, R.N.N.; Willem Verbog, Klaas Hakhof, Peter Vaneeten and Harm Kinds, all government officials; Miss Alma Alwart, described as a domestic servant; Louis Vijzelman, Max Waaldijk, Otto Elmont and Paulus Mosterdijk, all of whom were otherwise unidentified.

The plane's three crew members also were killed. They were Piet Badings, the pilot, who fought against the Japanese with the Netherlands East Indies Air Force in Java and came to the West Indies only recently, Nicolaas Debruyn, mechanic, and Cornelis Vanoyen, wireless operator.

Bodies of all the victims were buried near the Piarco Airdrome, only two miles from where the plane crashed during an electrical storm. The airliner had just taken off for Curacao, about 400 miles away in the Netherlands West Indies, when the crash occurred.

The passengers all were in transit for Curacao from an unannounced point of departure, with Trinidad an intermediate stop. Piarco airdrome is about 15 miles from here.

Canucks Anxious For Another Raid

OTTAWA, Aug. 27—(CP)—Canadian fighting men, back from their first brush with the enemy at Dieppe, are just waiting to get another crack at him, Maj.-Gen. H. F. G. Letson, adjutant-general, said at a press conference today.

Gen. Letson returned to Ottawa by air from England last night, after spending last Saturday and Sunday chatting with the wounded men from the Dieppe battle. He visited every one in the four hospitals which contain the bulk of the men who came back from the battle of Dieppe with wounds.

"Two things were outstanding in the impressions I got from talking with the men," he said.

"First their spirits were right up. Their morale is high. They are only waiting to get another crack at him.

"Secondly, they kep asking me 'How is my officer?' They thought they had the most wonderful officers in the world. Time after time I was told they would not have got anywhere if it hadn't been for their officers."

This Well-Known Implement Salesman Praises Syntona

Tells of Big Improvement After Suffering For Years From Indigestion, Nervous Headaches, and Constipation. Sleeps Better and Has More Energy.

Certainly Syntona must have something that stamps it as an outstanding medicine for disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels when so many well-known and reputable men and women give it their public endorsements for the remarkable benefits they get by taking it. One of these public endorsements comes from Mr. Sumner T. Church, Jarvis, Ontario, widely known farm implement man throughout this district. Mr. Church reports as follows:

"I had sought relief for years from indigestion, constipation, and nervous headaches. Food would sour in my stomach and I would belch up scalding, sour liquids. I was afraid to eat many foods because they made me feel so uncomfortable. At night, I would turn and toss, so that when morning came I didn't feel rested or ready for the day's work.

"I had tried so many medicines without getting any real benefits that I was sceptical about Syntona, but after talking to the Syntona representative, I took home a bottle and began using it. Before the first week passed, I could tell it was helping me, so I continued with the medicine and now I can say there is a remarkable improvement in the way I feel. My food digests well now without those disagreeable after-effects. My nerves are more relaxed and I am free of headaches. I sleep better now and I arise mornings feeling rested, happy and ready for the long hours of work that my duties demand. I will be glad to have my friends and associates know how Syntona has helped me. I am convinced it is one really effective medicine."

Let this pure Herbal Tonic help you as it has hundreds of other local men and women. It is pleasant to take and quick to act. Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

Early Churchill Report Unlikely

LONDON, Aug. 27—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill's first public report on his mission to Moscow and the Middle East probably will be made to the House of Commons in about two weeks, political sources said today.

The diplomatic correspondent of the News-Chronicle said it was "rumored that major changes in the whole organization and character of Britain's supreme war direction" might follow the Prime Minister's homecoming.

Mr. Churchill's own comments in the Middle East before he boarded a bomber for the last, homeward leg of his three-week flight reflected confidence in the United Nations' situation in North Africa, potentially a crucial battlefield of the whole war.

"I feel that an historic, epic struggle in the desert will come to a victorious conclusion, though the road may be long and there will no doubt be many pitfalls and disappointments," he declared.

He pledged Britain would do all in her power to safeguard the Nile Valley against the Axis and to supply everything that could be flown or shipped to the forces there.

10th, 11th Lists See Toll 608

OTTAWA, Aug. 27—(CP). — The names of 608 Canadian soldiers have been placed on Canada's roll of honor—official title for the active army casualty list—since the Battle of Dieppe and still more are expected to be added to the list today.

Of those 608, 93 are dead, 390 wounded and 125 missing.

The unofficial count reached that figure last night with the issuance by National Defence headquarters of the 10th and 11th lists since the army began making the casualties public last Friday night. The figures are subject to a margin of error owing to possible repetition of names in succeeding lists.

Last night's lists—issued simultaneously—had been preceded by two others during the day. The 10th list was composed of warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and privates and gave six names, while the 11th list reported on 18 officers, including a brigadier, two lieutenant-colonels, one major, four captains and ten lieutenants.

Top-ranking officer on the 11th list was Brig. William Wallace Southam of Toronto, reported as a prisoner of war. That listing confirmed a Nazi news agency report that Brig. Southam, one of the three Canadian officers commanding the Dieppe raid, had been captured.

Other senior officers were Lt.-Col. Alfred Capel Gostling, Winnipeg, of the Manitoba Regiment, who was killed in action, and Lt.-Col. Dollard Menard, Quebec, of the Regiment de Quebec, who is among the wounded.

Reported among those killed in action was Capt. Erskine Robert Eaton of Toronto, a member of the Regiment de Quebec. Capt. Eaton's family had been advised previously of his death. A prominent horseman, he lived in Montreal for several years before the war and enlisted there late in 1939.

The men of the ranks in the 10th list were from the Quebec Regiment, the Central Ontario Regiment, the Manitoba Regiment and the Saskatchewan Regiment.

The total number of men reported dead and missing by the army since the outbreak of war now stands at 983.

HAVELOCK

Red Cross Group Loses Secretary

HAVELOCK, August 27—(ENS)—The resignation of the secretary of the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross Society, Mrs. Charles Couch, was accepted with regrets at their meeting on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Couch has been the efficient secretary for the past 18 months and enters Nicholls Hospital as a nurse-in-training on September 1. The appointment of a new secretary was left over until next meeting.

Mr. Lancaster distributed several copies of the Despatch in which is shown a map of Europe with all the prisoners of war camps clearly located. In the news bulletin it is noted that there is an increase of 25,000 parcels weekly to prisoners of war. In a cable received by the National Publicity Office from Captain David Legate, a recently repatriated prisoner of war from Italy, said he had received 14 parcels in one year, and the food was in perfect condition. The secretary was instructed to write for samples of the Christmas cards, calendars, and postcards which will be offered for sale after September 15.

The branch is to have official receipt forms for cash donations printed. Mrs. Donald Anderson, of Belmont, and Mrs. Frank Watson were appointed from this branch to serve on the Salvage Committee. Some discussion followed as to the change of day for the weekly meeting, the matter to be settled next week.

Five lovely completed quilts were brought in by the Belmont Institute and gratefully acknowledged. There were twenty ladies present, one quilt was completed and a number of boys' coats made and a large amount of knitting was turned in to the convener.

Lift Daily Worker Ban

LONDON, Aug. 27—(CP).—Home Secretary Herbert Morrison today raised the ban on The Daily Worker.

The Communist paper's publication was forbidden in January, 1941, on the ground that it had printed stories designed to foment opposition to Britain's war effort.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made to have the ban lifted after the German invasion of Russia.

RAF Helping In U.S. Sub Hunt

Both Planes, Fliers Sent Across, Already Had Action

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP)—The United States navy announced today that British planes and fliers have joined the anti-submarine campaign in the Western Atlantic.

The official statement said:

"Aircraft of the Royal Air Force Coastal Command are co-operating with the United States naval and air aircraft in anti-submarine operations in the Western Atlantic, and have already engaged the enemy."

The reference to "aircraft" was interpreted by navy spokesmen to mean both planes and personnel had been dispatched from the British Isles to the United States to aid intensification of the war on the U-boats—a war which naval officials say has been increasingly successful in the last two months.

How long the British patrol planes have been in operation over Western hemisphere waters was not stated, but apparently they have been working from American bases for some time since they have had opportunity to join battle with U-boat marauders.

The British fliers have the advantage of many months of practical experience in fighting submarines off Britain's own shores.

British naval units have been making a similar contribution to the surface phase of the anti-submarine war since early this summer.

On July 2 it was announced that British and Canadian destroyers and fully-equipped anti-submarine vessels "have for some time been operating with our forces in the Atlantic."

The Next Duke

LONDON, Aug. 28—(CP Cable). — The question of succession of seven-year-old Prince Edward to the dukedom of Kent and other titles of his father, who was killed in an air crash in Scotland Tuesday, is under investigation by legal experts, it was learned today. An announcement will await their decision, it was said.

AT A CANADIAN HOSPITAL, Somewhere in England August 28—(CP Cable). — The fighting soldiers of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry have one common aim for the future—to return to Dieppe.

I talked with a dozen 'Hamiltons" still in this rambling Southern England hospital. A dozen others have been released with their wounds sufficiently healed to allow them to return to their unit.

"The sooner I get out of this hospital the better I'll like it," said one private.

"I've had enough of this — I'm leaving pronto," said anther.

The men had no complaints about the hospital. The food is simple but good and the attention they receive probably is better than they would get at home. But the men had been in action against the enemy and wanted more action as soon as possible.

Chinese Grab Chuhsien, Big Airfield

Troops Also Battle Into Lishui 2nd 'Bomb Japan' City

CHUNGKING August 28—(AP). — The Chinese have re-entered Chuhsien, Western Chekiang Province, and have reoccupied the great airfield just outside the city, most important of the East China bases from which Japan could be bombed, Chinese dispatches from the front declared to-day.

Chinese columns made their way into the city at 4 a.m. to-day, the dispatches said, and the airfield was in their possession shortly thereafter.

Earlier the Chinese High Command had reported the Japanese attempting to put the field out of commission by systematic destruction, preparatory to their retreat from this strategic base which they had held since late May.

The High Command communique also reported that Lishui, site of the second most important "bomb Japan" base in East China, had been entered by Chinese forces which were engaged in fierce fighting within the city.

The recapture of the Chuhsien base was rated here the greatest success scored thus far by the Chinese Armies in their comeback in Chekiang and Kiangsi Provinces, where they are keeping constant pressure on Japanese forces withdrawing from their extensive conquests of May and June.

Some 200 miles of the 450-mile Chekiang-Kiangsi railway, all of which was in Japanese hands late in June, has been recovered and the Chinese are rapidly extending the area of their re-occupation.

And One German

BERLIN, Aug. 28—AP). — The German high command said the Russian Air Force lost 101 planes yesterday alone in dog fights and from anti-aircraft fire. Seven more were reported destroyed on the ground. "One of our own aircraft is missing," the communique said.

Canuck Sailors In Hot Spots On Dieppe Feeler

LONDON, August 28. —(CP Cable) —The men of the Royal Canadian navy played a dashing part in the fierce commando attack on Dieppe last week, with officers and ratings of the Dominion's expanding naval force manning the landing craft which carried the attacking force ashore.

There were at least 15 officers and 45 ratings on the raid. Some were members of Canadian landing craft flotillas inaction for the first time after seven months of arduous training in England on combined operations.

Others were Canadian officers serving with the Royal navy.

Lieut. Dave Lewis of Westmount, Que., and several other Canadians were in one of the roughest actions when a flotilla of 25-foot sled-nosed raid boaots carrying commandos to attack protecting coastal guns near Dieppe ran into a German convoy east of that port.

After a wild naval engagement in the darkness in which both fleets scattered, the boats in which Lewis was riding broke away and landed 19 soldiers of an English commando company, the only men to get ashore at this point.

These troops took up positions on high ground overlooking the Nazi batteries and snipped at the gunners for four hours, preventing them from firing on British ships off Dieppe.

Reds Swarm From All Sides To Ring Boche Units In Bloody Last Ditch Stand

Nazis Pour In Reserves Over Mounds Of Dead While Dive Bombers Scream Down Death; Russ Storm Into Rzhev—Caucasus Passes Hold

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Aug. 28—(AP).—Battle-grimed German forces which fought their way 400 miles from the Ukraine to the Volga valley reached the distant approaches to Stalingrad to-day, but Russian dispatches said they were blocked there by swarms of Red army infantry who closed in from all sides.

The situation at the great Volga city of Stalin admittedly was grave, with the fight raging to a climax, but Russian reports took the encouraging tone that shock-troops of the Nazi assault had been forced to form the classic round defence and fight for survival.

One German armored spearhead was reported cut off completely and encircled on the sun-baked steppes northwest of Stalingrad.

The main German forces streamed up from the rear in a desperate attempt to make good their break-through by force of numbers, and dive-bombers began destructive attacks on the city.

Reds Get Into Rhhev.

While the land and air battle for the "City of Stalin" raged to full violence, the Red Army was hammering home its own offensive in the suburbs of Nazi-held Rzhev where the Germans held out 130 miles from Moscow through last winter's Russian push.

Red Star declared that the fight for Stalingrad held "the key to victory," so important was regarded the great industrial town which sprawls for miles along the lowest bank of the mighty Volga.

With the stiffening of the Russian last ditch stand there, dispatches declared that in one salient (presumably northwest of the city) the Russians had hurled the Germans back in local counter attacks, recapturing three settlements.

The defenders were hardest pressed from the southwest where the Germans were reported charging over mounds of their own dead.

Pravada reported that a strong force of Nazi parachutists who landed behind the Stalingrad line and seized temporary control of a road junction had been wiped out.

Fighting for the Caucasus appeared moving at a slower pace now that the battles had moved into mountain passes more easily defended.

Without identifying the fortifications seized in the 16-day-old push west of Moscow, the communique reported "two tanks were destroyed and more than 100 Germans were killed."

"In another sector our troops, developing the offensive, occupied seven populated places," it was announced. "We destroyed 13 German tanks, 10 anti-tank guns and 25 trucks and captured two tanks, one armored car, several guns and other war material."

The midnight communique said Russian troops, maintaining the initiative in a drive launched August 11, broke into a heavily-fortified populated place on the central front and killed 200 Germans and disabled 26 enemy tanks.

Field dispatches indicated the point might be Sychevka, a way-station on the Rzhev-Vyazma railway 120 miles west of Moscow, or Rzhev itself, an upper Volga stronghold where Red vanguards were previously reported battling the Germans in the streets.

Huns Leave Weapons

"Our troops cleared a large wooded area of the enemy," the communique said. It added the Germans had abandoned many weapons and dead among the shell-scarred trees.

Gen. Gregory Zhukov, leader of the Central front operations, was named first deputy of the people's commissar for defence, a department headed by Premier Jospeh Stalin.

The Battle of Stalingrad was reported increasing in violence with the close of the second month of Nazi Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock's southern drive and the government said "The Hitlerites bring into action huge fresh tank and infantry forces."

Defenders wiped out Nazi parachutists who landed at an important communications centre and turned back a German flanking action northwest of that Volga River city by a counter-attack, it was announced.

"Eleven enemy tanks were destroyed and about two German infantry companies annihilated," the midnight communique reported. "In another sector our tankists and infantrymen beat off 10 violent enemy attacks, destroyed 13 tanks and annihilated two German infantry battalions."

DenyDieppeRaid Spoiled By Leak

LONDON, Aug. 28—(CP Cable). —The London Standard said tonight that "there is no foundation whatsoever" for insinuations appearing in some sections of the press during the last few days that because of a leakage of information the Germans had advance knowledge of the Canadian-led Commando raid on Dieppe and hence were able to tighten up their defences.

"Security authorities have proved, partly from detailed reports of the raid and partly from close interrogation of German prisoners that the rumors are entirely false," said the Standard.

"Captured Westphalians from a howitzer battery attacked and silenced by the No. 4 Commando unit have stated that captain and battery commander Schoeler, who was killed with most of his men in hand-to-hand fighting which wiped out the battery, was taken completely by surprise when the Commandos began their attack from the tops of the cliffs."

Further convincing proof that the Germans were not forewarned, the paper added, was that they allowed a tanker escorted by flak ships to remain in the vicinity of the Dieppe harbor.

Bombers Fire Gdynia And Kassel

Bombers Fly Across Whole Of Germany To Hit Ex-Pole City

LONDON, Aug. 28—(CP). — In twin raids on the key plane-producing centre of Kassel and the Baltic port of Gdynia in former Poland, the R.A.F. spread the massed might of its bombers last night from end to end of Germany.

To carry the great onslaught to smash the Nazi war machine across the whole breadth of Germany to Gdynia, the British bombers had to fly more than 1,500 miles round-trip from their home bases under a moon-lit sky.

Besides 30 bombers lost in what was called a "concentrated and effective" bombing, the Air Ministry announced that two fighter-bombers left two ships burning in the Channel.

The flight were part of a steady procession by airmen of the United Nations to squeeze the enemy homeland in an ever-tightening grip of fire and explosives.

The loss of 30 bombers indicated that some of the R. A. F.'s big planes made the raid. British losses on night raids have been roughly five per cent.

The raid was the heaviest of nine on Kassel since the start of the war and its costliness to the attackers, British sources said, could be attributed partly to the bright light of an almost full moon which helped Nazi night fighters and ground defences.

Kassel is 90 miles northeast of Frankfurt, one of the targets which the R. A. F. hit Monday in its last night raid on Germany, and its principal factories include the Henschel Aircraft Works, said to be the largest in Europe; the Henschel Aircraft Engine Works which make Daimler and Benz engines; and the Fieseler Aircraft Works which turn out Messerschmitt fighters.

Action in Kattegat.

While the big bombers were striking at this root of Nazi airpower, fighters were maintaining almost ceaseless offensive patrol over Nazi-occupied France and there were indications of possible naval encounters in the English Channel and Kattegat.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(CP).—The Red Army's thrust into Rzhev and the increased stubbornness of the Russian defence of Stalingrad combine to form a "considerably improved" Russian military situation, a British military commentator said today.

The commentator, whose name could not be used, said the German position at Rzhev had become "uncomfortable," with Soviet troops advancing according to a plan which Gen. Gregory Zhukov was believed to have formulated while Prime

Temper Claims To Sea Victory

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP)—An admonition against any descriptions of the current operations in the Solomon Islands as having brought a major victory for the United Nations came today from one of the highest government authorities.

This authority, who preferred that his name not be used, said that there actually had been two phases of Japanese activities since American forces established themselves in the Southeastern Pacific. And he said he was worried lest the press lead the country to believes a great, smashing victory had been achieved.

The first phase, he said, was the landing of 700 Japanese, who were wiped out, on Guadalcanal Island, and a series of smaller attacks by planes in which the United States came off pretty well, destroying 30 or 32 Jap aircraft and losing four.

The second phase, he said, should not be called a full scale offensive with a reconnaissance in force. This was the movement on the Solomons of units of the Japanese fleet.

This reconnaissance force, the authority asserted, has withdrawn. Some ship were hit, he said, and it is hoped some were sunk, but he would hate to have the people get the idea that a major victory was scored.

42 Names Added To Dieppe List

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—(CP). — A casualty list of 62 names, the largest for several days and the 15th since the Battle of Dieppe, was issued by the Department of National Defence today.

It reported 42 men of the Canadian (Active) Army killed in action, four dead from wounds, two other deaths of which the cause was not stated, five dangerously wounded and nine wounded.

Two of the officers reported killed in action, Lieuts. George Tinsley of Hamilton, Ont., and Alexander John McKellar of Winnipeg, were described as previously reported wounded and Lieut. Tinsley's name appeared among the wounded in a list issued Aug. 21.

Three men reported missing on lists issued Aug. 24 were reported killed in action today. They were Ptes. Fred Arthur Barnes of Brantford, John James O'Leary of Toronto and Henry Swanky of Winni-

Less New Clothes

London, Aug. 28 (CP Cable)

HUGH DALTON, president of the Board of Trade, said last night heavy shipping losses may mean fewer new clothes for the people of Britain next year.

He said the government may be compelled to extend the current issue of 60 clothing coupons beyond next Aug. 1 when the new coupons are scheduled to be issued if there are "any further calls on shipping or on already limited labor resources."

Hitler Short Planes, May Skimp Rommel

Narrow Egyptian Front Limits Tank Action And Air Power May Turn Trick

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The big, full fighting-moon continues to boom up from the edge of the vast Libyan desert to invite the embattled Allied and Axis forces to combat over a terrain which by day is a blazing furnace but at night is pleasantly cool and, important to note, largely free of the fierce artillery fire that in daylight sweeps its wide-open spaces.

Still the two armies have remained stationary, apart from comparatively minor sorties. It's passing strange that neither side has initiated a major attack, for in that inhospitable zone one of the decisive victories of the war is awaiting a claimant. Perhaps the answer to the delay is that the drifting sands also hold a decisive defeat for one of them, and this is no time for rashness.

Be that as it may, Rommel the Hitlerite and Alexander the Briton stand poised like two fighting cocks —hackles erect and steel spurs glinting. And if you ever have seen two birds sizing each other up in the pit you know that suddenly and without warning one of them strikes.

Exceptional caution has been imposed on Marshall Rommel and Gen. Alexander by the unusual positions of their armies. They no longer have fluid lines in wide level reaches over which tanks can race at will. They no longer are able to run around each other's flanks, like speedy warships manoeuvring at sea.

The mobile desert fighting to which we have become accustomed has for the moment given way to trench warfare. The two armies are "dug in" on a 28-mile front which is confined between the blue waters of the Mediterranean on the north and the great Gattara Depression on the south. That depression is a vast sink in the sands, and in places its escarpment rises hundreds of feet.

All this means that tanks, which this far have played so vital a part in the Libyan warfare, aren't likely to be able to assume their accustomed role at the outset of a new offensive. With the opposing armies drawn up in fixed positions opposite each other from Qattara to El Alamein on the sea there's no way for tanks to do their usual flanking stunts until the lines have been broken, and one would expect artillery and warplanes to prepare the way for an old-fashioned frontal assault by the infantry. It would be dangerous to risk tanks in the beginning against the gunfire they would encounter from fixed positions.

Assassins After Deat Again

Bomb Kills 1, Wounds 22 At Vichy Rally

VICHY, August 28 — (AP). — A bomb which exploded in a suburban meeting of Marcel Deats National Popular Headquarters on Wednesday night killed one uperson and wounded 22 others, a Paris dispatch reported to-day.

The bomb was tossed into a crowd of 1,200 persons from a gallery the dispatch said.

The attack occurred on the eve of the first anniversary of Paul Collette's attempt to kill Deat and Premier Pierre Laval, both of whom were wounded by pistol bullets.

It was the second bombing of a National Popular Assembly meeting, the first having occurred at Tours several months ago when a bomb was thrown at Deat from another theatre balcony. He escaped injury.

The National Popular Assembly was established by Deat in Paris in opposition to a Vichy Government effort to create a mass political movement of Fascist tendencies under the name of Popular Assembly.

Two Powder Buildings Blow

Quebec Clash Costs 2 Lives, $100,000 Loss

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.—(CP)—Two men were killed instantly today when an explosion destroyed two black powder buildings and partially wrecked a third at the commercial explosives plant of the Canadian Industries Limited at Beloeil, 20 miles from here. Equipment and property damage is estimated at $100,000.

Maurice Lajoie, 28, St. Hilaire, an employee at the plant for the last year, lost his life in the Corning Mill building where the explosion originated. Maurice Blanchard, 35, married and a native of Beloeil, was struck and killed by flying debris.

According to preliminary reports from the works, Lajoie was engaged in cleaning machinery in the Corning mill which was not running at the time of the accident. The explosion and resulting flash was transmitted to other nearby buildings, destroying one by a second explosion and partly damaging a third. The reverberations were felt over a wide area of the surrounding country.

An investigation into the accident is being conducted by officials of the company's explosives division in conjunction with the chief inspector of explosives from Ottawa but officials said little hope is held of determining the cause since the operator was killed and the corning mill building destroyed.

BATTLE RAGES TO BREAK JAP GRIP IN SOUTHEAST NEW GUINEA

Japs Retreat From Tulagi Scrap

Crocodile Swamps Of Milne Bay Scene Of Battle

By JOHN H. WIGGINS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—A raging battle to break a Japanese grip in southeastern New Guinea developed swiftly in crocodile-infested swamplands today as American naval and air forces emerged apparently victorious in the second round of the Solomon Islands conflict.

Disappearance of a battered enemy fleet from the United States-controlled Tulagi area of the Solomons temporarily narrowed the stuggle in the southwest Pacific to two Japanese footholds on New Guinea.

Enemy forces which landed two days ago at Milne Bay, some 225 miles from the strong Allied New Guinea base at Port Moresby and 420 miles from the Australian mainland, were pounded by an Allied land-air attack that destroyed Japanese planes, troops, supplies and fuel dumps.

Allied headquarters in Australia reported that Allied airmen shot down 12 or 14 enemy planes during the day in fights over Milne Bay and the Japanese base at Buna, 180 miles up the northeastern coast of New Guinea. Earlier Japanese losses at the swampy Milne Bay landing including a transport, probably a carrier and six landing barges.

Meanwhile, a terse navy department communique reported that "Japanese surface forces appear to have withdrawn from the vicinity of our positions in the Tulagi area."

It strikes me that air strength may represent the balance of power in the coming conflict. At this writing the Anglo-American air forces have superiority, and while Rommel is close to his sources of supply, the status of the fierce battle on the Russian front is likely to determine whether Hitler can spare warplanes for his henchman.

I understand from a thoroughly informed source that the Nazi chief is very hard pressed for air strength. He is short of planes, short of gasoline, short of oil and terrible short of pilots because of heavy losses in Russia during the past bloody year. Still, victory in Egypt is essential to him, and he is bound to aid Rommel if possible.

The Nazi marshal has been greatly strengthened with infantry and supplies since the fighting halted. He is reliably reported to have received 35,000 troops during July in small lots, by air and by sea, and for some time he has been getting about 500 a day by air from Crete. Thus, apart from air power, he probably is pretty well set for action.

R-boats that took the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg ashore at Pourville were Sub-Lt. J. E. Boak, Victoria; Sub-Lt. W. Sinclair, Edmonton; Lieut. R. M. Smith, Regina; Sub-Lt. D. H. Botley, Port Arthur, Ont., and Sub-Lt. Johnny O'Rourke, Calgary, who was on the St. Nazaire raid.

Taking the infantry into the main beach at Dieppe in other types of assault craft were Lieut. Henry Saunders, Charlottetown, P. E. I., and Sub-Lt. Glen Northgrave of Toronto. Sub-Lt. George Clarke of Victoria was engineering officer aboard one of the mother ships which carried the landing craft to the Normandy coast.

Lewis in describing the action off Berneval, where his unit was assigned, sad the rad fleet met the enemy convoy about 10 miles from France and starshells lit up the sky to starboard immediately. In the convoy were two E-boats, an armed trawler, a flak ship and a tanker. The Nazis, he said opened up at once with the ack-ack guns.

Tracer shells and bullets seared the night with their colored streaks and weird dotted lines of death. The raiding flotilla fought back with everything it had.

One Gets Both E-Boats.

One British flak ship knocked out the E-boats and trawler.

At the height of the fight the officers on Lewis' boat held a conference. All realized the importance of keeping the Nazi protecting guns near Dieppe at Berneval silenced.

"What are you going to do?" asked one commando major.

"My orders are to land you at all costs," replied a British naval officer.

"And my orders are to knock out the guns," the commando officer replied.

So then ran into shore — one lonely tiny craft with 19 commandos to undertake a seemingly impossible task which looked as though it would mean death for all aboard.

"We landed the Commandos quietly at 4:45 a.m. and they went up under a white cliff," said Lewis. "We then lay off-shore and as dawn broke R.A.F. bombers came over the sea just 25 feet off the water and seemed to climb the face of the cliff.

"While we were waiting for the Commandos to return a German tanker was grounded and the Nazi's heavy coast guns down the line opened up on it. The crew swam ashore and one of our R-boats went alongside and someone grabbed the ensign."

Lewis said the Commandos were taken off shortly after 8 a.m. from the same beach where they had landed. There was a low tide at the time and the withdrawal was difficult, but it was accomplished even under a shower of bullets from the Germans who had followed the Commandos to the cliffs.

Get All 19 Away.

The R-boat re-embarked every one of the 19 men and not one was injured.

"It was heavy going for a while," Lewis recalled. "Machine guns and heavy stuff were pasting us and we got eight holes in our gas tank. The coxsan was wounded. One Commando had his webbing shot off. The Nazis were sniping from the cliffs and we fired back at them.

"When we sailed off we had four Commandos hanging onto lines trailing from the boat. Finally we put our men on a motor launch and headed back for England. On the way a Heinkel bombed us with bombs but didn't hit us. The crew spent the day after the raid picking sharpnel out of the boat's hull."

Boak said that when they were taking in the Camerons they could see E-boats attacking a flotilla to the eastward. This was an attack on the Royal Regiment of Toronto as it headed for the beach at Puits.

"We landed after going in line abreast under considerable smoke and under fire from the shore," he said. "There were some heavy guns potting at us, but there was only one casualty in the boats.

"After landing, the flotilla pulled out and then joined the main concentration off the principal beach at Dieppe.

Save Three of Four

"Next we were ordered down to Berneval to help evacuate troops there. We found some soldiers clinging to a raft and being fired on by German machine-gunners. Our boats went alongside the raft and four of the soldiers were able to grab our lines. Three were saved."

He told of exchanges of fire between R-boats and Nazi troops on shore, and how finally the craft sailed out to sea, still harried by German fire.

"We went like hell," said one officer, "but it was the slowest hell I remember."

Sinclair said a Cameron piper aboard his R-boat played as the Highlanders went in to the land from Pourville's beach.

"The troops landed rapidly and in excellent order," he said. "Our crew fired at a pillbox with our Lewis gun during the assault."

Northgrave, a veteran of Vaagsoe, and Saunders went into the centre beach, taking in the Essex Scottish or Royal Hamilton Light Infantry.

While the landing craft were hoved to off the Dieppe beach for several hours in the morning, they were attacked frequently by German aircraft.

Every Canadian took a hand at driving off the raiders with Lewis guns, Tommy-guns or anything else that would shoot.

R.C.N.V.R. officers also helped land Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal at the main beach at Dieppe.

The Moscow radio said 92 German planes had been shot down in the area in the last two days.

Russian troops still fighting within the Don Bend were credited with the capture of 18 field guns, 122 machine guns and some prisoners about Kletskaya, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

Guns still flamed also in the Voronezh area of the Upper Don, and the Germans were said to have lost 800 dead in recent fighting for a community on the west bank.

While defenders of Central Caucasion highways fell back on Prokhladnenski battlefields, a see-saw fight raged for an important height south of Krasnodar, in the Western Caucasus. The Information Bureau said Russian troops had regained the height at dusk yesterday and entrenched.

German positions around Rzhev, however, were described as "very strong and heavily manned."

The commentator said there had been no further Germans gains toward the Caucasus oil fields since yesterday, but that the Black Sea port of Novorossisk is threatened by a German advance and is in great danger.

Shot in Wrist.

There was Pte. Bill Konkle of Hamilton, a good-looking clean-shaven youngster who came back from Dieppe with a bullet wound in his wrist.

He had a tough time across the Channel, but his first words were: "I'm glad I went. It was a great experience. I'm feeling fine now. My temperature's normal and I've been walking a bit. Now I'd like to go back again on a big do."

Konkle went ashore with the rest of R.H.L.I. on the stony beachfront of Dieppe itself at 5:20 on the morning of the attack and he didn't come off until six hours later. During all these hours, though explosives from every type of weapon were flying around him, he didn't get a scratch.

But he came home aboard a destroyer and German Focke-Wulf 190s strafed the deck on which he was helping bandage the wounds of another member of his regiment. The machine-gun bullets killed this wounded soldier and nipped Konkle's wrist.

Konkle has more reasons than this for despising the Germans whom, he said, "man for man are yellow."

The R.H.L.I. had many wounded in the early stages of their landing and they were grouped on the beach under a Red Cross flag.

Shot At Red Cross Flag

"The first thing the Germans did when they saw the flag was to machine-gun it," Konkle said. Then he told how the unit's padre who remained ashore with the men "got so mad he picked up a tommy-gun started firing back at the Jerries."

"It was the sort of thing that would make anyone mad," Konkle added.

Pte. Robert Papple of Brantford, Ont., wounded in the shoulder and hand, is another of the "Hamiltons" who longs for revenge.

"I'll be glad to get back there and get another crack at them," he said.

Papple was one of the many members of his regiment who spent the morning on the bullet and shell-swept Dieppe beach, unable to advance through the hail of German fire. He got his hand wound early in the fight and his shoulder wound shortly after he had re-embarked.

Being on the beach didn't stop Papple from getting into the fight. There were snipers in the buildings overlooking the waterfront and the Brantford man had at least a share of the one whose sniping ended early.

They Get One.

"I got a crack at one," he said. "But there were three or four of us firing at the same time and I can't say whether I got him myself. However, he fell off the edge of the building, and that's what counts."

Pte. Burnside of Hamilton, who got "just enough shrapnel in the shoulder to make it painful," figured he had been lucky. And maybe he was if you count his escape when a bullet pierced his steel helmet and just grazed his skull.

Burnside was one of a party which decided to "clean up" a pill box 75 yards from the beach which was causing a regiment trouble. He made it sound almost easy as he told how the men raced across the beach to the base of the pillbox, then fired at the Germans through the slits.

"We made it pretty hot for them," he said, "and they had to get out."

But there was nothing easy about the Dieppe raid. The story told by Pte. Andrew Ferguson of Hamilton vouched for that.

Early in the fight a bullet went through his shoulder and broke a bone—"I haven't yet found where," said Ferguson.

For the next four hours he lay on the beach, then crawled 100 yards to the waterfront. "I passed out twice during that time and then I found I had to swim to the boat. I don't mind saying it's pertty hard work swimming with one arm."

Cpl. John Montgomery of Beamsvile, Ont., wounded in the shoulder and the elbow, echoed the opinion of a number of other "Hamiltons" when he said "the Germans were prepared for us."

Montgomery, too, was wounded early in the fight, but along with scores of other members of the regiment found shelter behind a burned-out landing craft until the withdrawal was made under a smoke screen.

Two soldiers "fed up" with staying in bed were Ptes. Herb Shrubsall of Galt, Ont., and Ernie Valiquette of North Bay, Ont.

Don't Like Bed.

Shrubsall, wounded in the thigh, said the three weeks he expects to be in hospital "will drive me nuts." Valiquette, with one arm and his trunk and shoulders in a cast complained "I've never been able to stay in bed and I'm not enjoying this a bit." Valiquette got his first wounds early in the morning but kept fighting just the same. Shrubsall took cover behind a Bren gun carrier after he was wounded.

Then he saw a friend who had joined the Army with him get shot and tried to help him. He was giving him first-aid when "a bomb came down" and put him out of action for the rest of the raid.

Ptes. Stanley Dye and Bill Hamblett, both of Brantford, Ont., asked that full credit be given the Navy for the part it played.

"These sailors are the swellest guys any of us ever met," said Dye, premature grey at 34. "I came back on a destroyer, and though we were bombed time and again they never batted an eye. They gave us cigarettes and rum and made us as comfortable as they could."

Dye, who expects to be in hospital "a couple of months," got as far as the town of Dieppe itself and thinks he's "lucky to be alve."

Rolls Across Beach.

He too, thought the Germans "were laying for us." Dye was patching up the shoulder of another Hamilton man when he got hit and only got back to the waterfront by rolling across the beach. Then he lay for five hours in the shelter of a landing craft until time for re-embarkation.

Hamblett was wounded in the knee. He said he was "damn lucky to be back at all—they made it pretty hot for us."

This private reached the Casino itself—just in time to be showered with debris from the roof where a shell or bomb hit. Before he returned to the beach he helped to silence an anti-tank gun.

Despite fighting on shore which Hamblett described as "quite an initiation" he was not wounded until aboard a destroyer when a bullet from a Focke-Wulf hit him.

"These naval boys were really good," he said, telling of the treatment he received during the voyage home.

No Missionaries Kept Diaries With Japs About

TORONTO, August 28 — Canadian missionaries in Occupied China dared not keep diaries and were nervous about writing anything at all, since Japanese police are apt to walk into their homes at any time. The sight of a Japanese guard strolling casually upstairs was a common one, and Canadians found that they must be careful at all times about what they said, so said Dr. Gordon Struthers of Rosedale, who returned to Toronto yesterday with a party of fifteen missionaries of the United Church of Canada. Dr. Struthers was the only one who would discuss experiences in China. The fifteen missionaries were reluctant to comment on their life under Japanese domination for fear of reprisals against those left behind.

Dr. Struthers found out just how careful he needed to be when the Japanese closed the Cheeloo University Hospital, of which he was superintendent at Tsinan, Shantung, in Northern China.

After the hospital had been barred up, Dr. Struthers remarked to a Japanese guard that it was a pity his hospital had been closed, when hospitals in other parts of China were open. "How," asked the guard, "do you know they're open? Are you receiving mail?"

Dr. Struthers replied that he had merely heard so. The guard wanted to know where, when, and from whom the news had come. When Dr. Struthers said that he could not recall the details, he was watched by the guard for days; the Japs wanted to find out to whom he talked.

Knew About Canada.

After Pearl Harbor, guards armed with bayonets marched behind Dr. Strutchers whenever he moved between his home and th 180-bed hospital. The Japanese were well aware of what was happening to uation of Japanese from the west he found and knew about the evacuation o Japanese from the west coast.

Probably the knowledge that Japanese people were well treated in Canada explained the fact that the Canadians attached to the university at Tsinan, a city of 600,000 population, were not interned. They are Rev. Andrew Thomson, 33 Rose Park Drive; Mrs. D. G. Menzies, 18 Glencairn Avenue; Dr. Isabelle McTavish of Winnipeg; and the Rev. Donald Faris of Vancouver.

Immediately after Pearl Harbor the Japanese authorities closed down Dr. Struthers' clinics, which had been treating fifty out-patients a day, and no new cases were allowed to be taken into the wards, from which the last case was discharged in mid-January.

The Chinese Provincial and city Government sobtained Japanese consent to spend half a million local dollars on fitting up an institution of their own to replace the hospital service provided by Dr. Struthers' group. The Japanese allowed four of the women missionaires to work in this new hospital because "women are weak and harmless.' Dr. Isabelle McTavish of Toronto was one.

Thousands Still There.

Dr. Struthers estimated that sixty missionaires still remained in Tsinan, and that there must be thousands, both British and American, throughout Northern China. "This evacution did not take in any civilians from Pekin, Tientsin and Shanghai, but it did take in diplomats from all the Chinese areas, and a group from places where there were no Swiss representatives to take charge of affairs.

Experiences in China of the fifteen missionaries who returned with Dr. Struthers, were not all totally unpleasant. Some of them have been interned in camps, but others were allowed to live in their own homes and even to move about the city.

Mrs. D. G. Menzies, a missionary herself, and mother of three women missionaries, asked for a pass to go for a visit to one of her daughters, who lived two and one-half hours by train from Tsinan. "I got it, too," said Mrs. Menzies when she arrived in Toronto yesterday. "They said it was quite a reasonable request.

The Japanese were allowing only Americans to leave, and to the Japanese "Americans" meant all natives of North and South America. This meant a great deal of hardship and the splitting up of families. For instance, there was a couple Mrs. Menzies knew in Tsinan; the husband was a British subject and the wife was an American. The Japanese would let the wife go, but not the husband.

Today's list brought the unofficial count of casualties reported since the Canadian raid on Dieppe a week ago Wednesday to 729, of which 153 are dead, 445 wounded, 10 not diagnosed and 121 missing. The figures are subject to a margin of error for possible duplications. The department stopped reporting the missing a few days after the battle for security reasons. Names of the missing will be held up from publication for several weeks.

The total number of men reported dead and missing by the army since the war began now stands at 1,043.

Hamilton, represented in the Dieppe battle by the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, had 11 of its sons mentioned in today's list. Four on the list were from Toronto, five from Winnipeg and four from Montreal.

The list reported one captain, Ben Brackman of Regina, dangerously wounded, five lieutenants killed and one wounded. The rest of the men named were non-commissioned officers and privates.

Stocks of frozen chicken are practically depleted. The out of town movement has been normal. 105 boxes of geese, weighing 7,075 lbs. are going forward to Newfoundland early in the week.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, August 28—(AP). — Small mill and professional trade orders lifted wheat prices about ½ cent at times yesterday, with other grains, except corn, trying to follow. But the market made little headway toward recovery, due to apathy of would-be buyers whose interest has been chilled by prospects of new anti-inflation measures.

Flour business remained quiet, matching the slow movement of new wheat into commercial trade due to the fact that Government loans are more attractive than market prices.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ higher; corn ¼ off to ⅛ up; oats ¼ up; soybeans ¼ to 1⅛ higher; rye, unchanged.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG August 28—(CP).—Only a few trades were transacted in wheat in the early stages of today's session on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and the October wheat future remained at 90 cents a bushel. Chicago wheat was ⅛ higher.

Trading was dull in coarse grains with a few scattered trades made in the October positions of oats and rye which showed slight increases in price. Barley was neglected.

Two-Day Raid Gets 350 Of 352 Japs

Swoop Upon Makin Real Roundup, Snipers Up Palms

By WALTER B. CLAUSEN

PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 28 (AP)—A force of 350 Japs—virtually every defender — was wiped out and all seaplane installations methodically wrecked by United States Marines during the recent Makin Island raid, now disclosed by eyewitnesses to have been a two-day job of slaughter and destruction.

Contrasting with earlier reports of a hit-and-run raid, the participants, including Maj. James Roosevelt, son of the president, said the scrappy Marines even hunted for the few Jap stragglers still alive before withdrawing to ships.

And so stealthy was the landing during a moonless night on the northernmost island of the Jap-held Gilbert group, 1,500 miles northeast of the Solomons, that the Marines had been ashore for 20 minutes, deployed for battle, before the Japs discovered them.

"The morning of the second day, only eight Japanese were left on the island," related Lt.-Col. Evans F. Carlson of Plymouth, Conn., commander of the Marines.

"We wiped out all we could find and, after a checkup with the natives, found only two Japanese unaccounted for. I cannot disclose our casualties but will say the Japanese losses on land alone were more than 10 to 1 our losses, not counting the

Mail Arrives From Men At Hong Kong

OTTAWA, Aug. 28 (CP) —National Defense Headquarters announced last night that mail from the Far East and from prisoners of war in Hong Kong has reached Ottawa and will be airmailed to next of kin as soon as it has been examined by censorship authorities. Most of the mail is expected to be delivered by Saturday, or Monday at the latest.

The mail arrived on the Swedish diplomatic exchange liner Gripsholm. Post office authorities reported to defense headquarters that approximately 500 letters had been received from officers and men in the Canadian force at Hong Kong.

Lieutenant-Colonel F. W. Clarke, chairman of the committee charged with the care and welfare of all Canadian prisoners of war in enemy hands, stressed that next of kin who do not receive letters "should not regard this as indicating that their relatives at Hong Kong have been casualties."

Referring to a Japanese announcement last February that 1,689 Canadian prisoners of war had been taken during the fall of Hong Kong out of the total force of 1,985 officers and men, Colonel Clarke said some prisoners may have written letters not conforming to Japanese censorship regulations and that the letters may have been withheld for this reason.

Examination of the first few letters that have passed through censorship indicates that he Japanese have been most severe in their regulations regarding censorship of prisoner-of-war mail," he said.

It is also clear that each prisoner was only permitted to write only one letter."

Obituary

JOHN M. ALLEN.

The funeral of John M. Allen, who passed away Monday evening was held from the Bert Duffus Funeral Home on Thursday morning to the Church of the Sacred Heart, and in the presence of a large gathering of friends and neighbors Requiem Mass was offered by the pastor Rev. J. J. O'Brien who also delivered an eloquent address on the life and death of a soldier of the King and a soldier of Christ, and expressed his deep appreciation of the numbers of returned men who had fought side by side with the deceased during the many conflicts in which he had taken part, and were present at his funeral.

The many spiritual and floral tokens presented added further tribute to his passing as a mark of respect and sympathy for his only daughter. A number of the adult choir of which she has been a member, assisted at the service and rendered appropriate music and hymns for the occasion.

Interment was made in St. Peter's Cemetery, Rev. J. F. Houlihan conducting the graveside service.

The services were of a semi-military nature, and the pall-bearers were members of the Canadian Legion: Hurrell Dodds, P. J. Cooke, Oscar Hallihan T. H. Ryan, Fred Shurety and D. Miller.

Canadian Diplomat Back From Tokyo

Chief among the government officials to arrive in Canada from Japan and Japanese occupied territory was Mr. D'Arcy McGreer, Charge d'Affaires, Canadian Legation, Tokyo. The group of Canadians who were repatriated numbered 70 and was composed mainly of missionaries and government officials and their wives. They were brought to New York by the Swedish liner "Grisholm." Mr. McGreer is here shown with his cousin, Mr. A. H. McGreer, principal of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, and his wife, who were on hand to welcome him back to Canada.

Jap-Nazi Hookup Keeps Both Watching Other

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—(CP).—The alliance between Germany and Japan is a marriage of convenience and not a union of trust and confidence, according to impressions picked up by Canadians who reached Ottawa last night after returning from Japan on the diplomatic liner Gripsholm.

Individuals who did not wish to be quoted today gave newspaper reporters some of their experiences both before and after the outbreak of war between Japan and the British Commonwealth last December.

Asked if the Japanese and Germans had a thorough understanding one man said:

"They understand each other perfectly. They know that neither of them can trust the other around the corner."

Another traveller said the two Axis powers were suspicious of one another and stated German and Italians in Tokyo were more closely watched by the Japanese police than British and Americans prior to the outbreak of war. He said Gen. Eugene Ott, German ambassador to Japan, was much annoyed because German interests in Malaya were not properly respected after the Japanese invaded that territory.

Japan is not likely to run short of materials, these sources said. Japan's ability to carry on war indefinitely probably depends on the shipping situation. The Japanese have already lost many ships, but both the exact extent of the losses and the ability to build new ships were unknown.

The Canadians from the Orient considered that the Japanese people are so rigidly controlled and so much under the influence of emperor worship and patriotism that there is unlikely to be any crack in their morale.

Two Fires in Tokyo

From their own observation of the United States air raid on Japan these sources reported two fires, one which lasted about two hours and was apparently caused by about three bombs, and another which lasted three hours and was apparently caused by about five bombs.

"I think we were all caught off first base," one man said, speaking of the outbreak of war. The Canadians in Tokyo knew the situation was tense last November and December, were expecting war sooner or later, but did not anticipate either the nearness nor the character of the Japanese attack on the United States and Britain.

The underestimation of Japanese military strength by other nations, he thought, was due in part to the restrictions and rationing regulations imposed in Japan prior to the war. The Japanese Government was taking so many things away from the civilian population that other nations got the impression Japan was short of materials.

"The rationing was interpreted as a sign of weakness, whereas it was a sign of strength," he said.

The shock troops used by the Japanese in their attack on Hong Kong were reported to have been drawn from the Island of Kyushu where the people are less civilized than elsewhere in the Japanese Empire and so considered fiercer fighters.

Most of the Japanese soldiers are drawn from the rural peasants who, although under - nourished when they enter the army, quickly respond to careful medical attention and diet and develop into fine physical specimens.

The training of the Japanese soldier is strenuous. The troops regularly go on 12 and 15-hour marches and manoeuvres, to toughen them for combat. They are taught to deliver blood-curdling yells as they attack.

Unusual Shower, Port Hope Bride

PORT HOPE, Aug. 28—(ENS).—A delightful crystal shower was given Mrs. Frank Corbett (nee Jeanne Clark) whose marriage took place recently. The shower was held at the home of Miss Ruth Trott, 105 Dorsett street west, on Wednesday evening, with 30 present.

The room was prettily decorated with green and yellow watering cans, while in one corner was a miniature garden surrounded by a yellow lattice fence into which the bride was asked to plant crepe paper flowers which were made by each of the guests.

Three of the guests gave very appropriate readings. Mrs. Lawson read "Courting Days Were Never Like This"; Miss Netta Brownlee chose "Wives Are Funny People, But Husbands Are, Too"; and Miss Elsie Moon gave "The Little Bride."

Articles of clothing were then cut out from newspaper to represent the bride's first washing, which was strung on a miniature clothes line.

All around the room were hung small yellow and green watering cans which held topics for one minute speeches which each of the guests gave on topics referring to weddings.

In another corner of the room was a large yellow and green watering can from the spout of which hung cellophane drops containing fortunes for each guest with the bride's fortune telling her to look into the watering can where she found a beautiful arrangement of a service of cornflower pattern crystal and a large floral centre cowl in the same pattern.

After this very interesting evening, lunch was served and Mrs. Corbett thanked her friends in a very fitting manner.

The Better 'Ole

A war correspondent who is covering the scrap in North Africa sits at his "desk" in a slit trench in the desert, batting out his "piece." There is no city editor to bawl at him here, giving him verminous assignments, there is no clatter of teletypes to disturb him and no one wants to borrow a buck until payday. Life would be just grand if it weren't for the shells, dive bombers and strafing planes —not to mention the heat in the daytime, the cold at night and the water famine all the time.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Free and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon McCulloch arranged the affair and the evening was spent in dancing, while at midnight a dainty lunch was served. Following this Mr. and Mrs. Macoun were called to front of the room to be presented with a number of lovely gifts. Both joined in expressing their appreciation and voicing thanks to the gathering.

5 Of 41 Rescued 15 Days Foodless

A NEW ENGLAND PORT, August 27 — (AP). — After drifting 15 days without food or water, five survivors of a crew of 41 from a torpedoed British merchantman have been landed here.

Four others died shortly before a United States coastguard ship picked up four of them from a raft and a fifth from a water-filled lifeboat 35 miles away.

All the rescued suffered exposure and were near delirium but one—described by the Navy as a "tough old rooster"—who insisted on walking to the ambulance when brought ashore.

The men said their small vessel had been badly crippled the day before the attack by a collision with another vessel in fog, and they said the ship sank in about three minutes after the torpedo struck shortly before noon.

They said they believed most of the men were trapped below decks and went down with the vessel. No one saw the submarine.

Councils And School Boards

Once again the idea of having municipal councils name at least one member of the council or a person appointed by the council to school boards and boards of education has been aired and this time no action was taken by the elected representatives' section of the Ontario Municipal Association. Why no action was taken by men who for the most part are members of councils has not been stated, for councils in the past have been clamoring for representation on these boards, unless it be that there may be some change coming in the not too distant future for it is known that several of Ontario's leaders at Queen's Park favor this idea.

Under the present set up school boards and boards of education are elected by the people and are solely responsible to the people. They draw up their own estimates and send these on as demands to the council who must pay them to the boards whether they are successful in collecting all the taxes or not.

On the whole the present system has worked satisfactorily. True school boards have been charged with extravagance but today there is no municipal-elected body that is so under the thumb of the department and its officials in Queen's Park than these bodies. Teachers' salaries alone are the business of the board but here again parents demand good teachers for their children and if there is any stability to be had and good teachers obtained the salaries must be remunerative. A poorer class of teachers could be secured on lower salaries but this only gives lower educational standards and children do not get the grounding that is ever more becoming necessary in this land.

The Income Tax

Employers and employees in every business organization are filling out this week forms in preparation for the collection of the income tax of the current budget. Employees are completing forms prepared by the Finance Department indicating the number of their dependents, the annual amount of life insurance premiums and the payments they make on mortgages or sales agreements. With this information the office management will compute the amount of income tax of each employee for which regular deductions will be made from the pay envelope, the amount thus collected being forwarded promptly to the Government.

Collection at this source is desirable in order that the government may get the money at the earliest possible moment. It is desirable from the taxpayers' viewpoint. If left to himself he is apt to postpone provisions for the payment which must ultimately be made. He is then faced with the necessity of meeting an obligation out of a few months' pay instead of meeting it by compulsory instalments out of a whole years' pay.

The new budget seems at a glance to be an intricate one. But it is not too bad, after all. And once its far-reaching purposes are understood there should be little trouble with it—save, of course, the paying of it, since it is by long odds the heaviest tax Canadians have been called upon to meet. The principal of the budget is absolutely sound, that of paying so far as possible the enormous war costs out of taxation. The Finance Minister's proposal calls for a yield in the current fiscal year of $2,000,000,000 with another $1,500,000,000 will have to be provided by domestic loans. It is a gigantic load for Canada but it must be carried.

There is one injustice in the tax ruling which ought to be corrected. Where a property stands in the name of the wife of the taxpayer the privilege of deducting the principal payments on the mortgage is not allowed. It is a common practice for a husband to register the home in his wifes' name so that in the event of accident or death she will continue to have a roof over her head. While the property legally speaking may have passed to his wife it remains their joint home and the husband continued to make the principal payments on the mortgage if there is one. These principal payments are savings made by him just as much as they would be if the home were registered in his name.

Completing Highway 28

The announcement that Highway 28 will be completed to Bancroft and thus connecting Peterborough with the vast stretch of highways in the north country will be received with genuine approval here. It was feared for a time that the six miles of winding undeveloped road between the Haliburton boundary and Paudash Lake would go uncompleted thus making absolutely useless splendid highways on either side. However, the announcement puts an end to these fears.

The machinery is already on the ground and the work will soon be underway. The highway was originally begun from Peterborough to Apsley during the depression as a work project but the remaining stretch was never completed, thus nullifying the usefulness of the work done on the rest of the highway.

Its completion will open up a vast new trading area to Peterborough and also a more accessible and shorter route to Algonquin Park.

Let Us Be Realists

While we in Canada today are proud of the gallant part our boys played at Dieppe and well we should be, there is a great need for realism and facing of facts instead of thinking that as a result of this raid the United Nations are already in the winning position. There have been far too many loose statements made by military men and others far from the scene of the raid and these have to a large extent given many Canadians a very false impression.

For instance we have Lt.-General Kenneth Stuart, chief of the Canadian General Staff, as saying:

> "We walked into the Boche parlor through the front door at a time we chose and we left by the same front door when we wanted to leave. We were able to test the Boche defences under actual combat conditions, kill Huns and destroy what we could."

No one who has read the stories of that battle as told by trained eye-witnesses can doubt the gallantry of our troops. They fought as we expected they would. But in the light of the facts which have come out of this raid we can hardly join with the Chief of Staff in his enthusiasm and airy-talk about "walking into the Boche's front door at a time we chose" and "leaving when we wanted to leave."

However the results of the raid are not taken in the same light by British military men, for this is what Field-Marshal Lord Milne, writing in the London Sunday Chronicle, says:

> "Dieppe showed what a serious operation a full scale landing or series of landings with the intention of invasion would be."

This gallant raid by Canadians is a practical answer to those masses of ill-informed people who have clamored for a "second front."

The military correspondent of the London Observer says:

> "The raid undoubtedly succeeded—in uncovering German tactical defence against a landing. The strategy of their defence against an invasion is something quite different and we ought therefore to be very chary in drawing too hasty conclusions from this raid."

The raid on Dieppe may prove to be a distinctly Canadian contribution to the technique of modern warfare and after a study from all angles it may point the way to a break in the present deadlock in the west just as the trench raids, also invented by the Canadians, proved a means of ending a deadlock in the First Great War. No doubt the operation was necessary but that is different from the talk about this attack succeeding in its objective through the destroying of an ammunition dump, and knocking out a battery of guns and a radio station. It is certainly different from the remarks of "walking into the Boche's parlor through the front door."

We have been fed on too many sugar-coated stories by our leaders. We have been told that "time is on our side." How often have we all heard that. Let us get away from all this and put an end to such things and face the truth as it was given out the other day by the United States War Information Board's declaration:

> "As for time it will never be on our side till we use it better than the enemy."

United States Attorney - General Biddle said to the American Bar Association meeting this week:

> "Make no mistake: The legions of the enemy still march as conquerors—in Russia, on the Mediterranean, in Asia. The hour is dark. Time presses and still they march. We have made our excuses, said we were unprepared, said the democracies move slowly. Do democracies move slowly in their death?"

Let those in high posts give us the truth and stop this talking and mixing of words which only blur the true picture and breed apathy.

Farming News and Views

By HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

THE problem that is worrying some farmers at the present time is whether or not it will pay to put in cattle to feed, during next winter, at present prices. A farmer who has a good supply of cattle feed on hand, and can get a further supply at going prices should not hesitate as to what to do. By all means put the cattle in. But what about the profits? Let that come later. We are going to need all the beef obtainable as our armed force grows, and from Canada and the United States large quantities of beef must be shipped overseas as both the Canadian and American armies grow in numbers across the water. It is the business of beef producing farmers to stick to their job. The farmer who fails or flunks in any part of his duty in this war will not bring much credit upon himself.

The matter of beef prices can be settled as we proceed, but put the cattle in to feed and you will then have some reason to put up a fight for what is right in prices later. Plan to feed your limit of cattle, they will be needed, and if you are to keep the fertility of your farm up to par, or improve it, you must feed the bulk of your crops at home.

If this war proves as difficult to win as it looks to those standing by, we will have plenty of changes in control, long before it ends, and some of these changes may be quite drastic regarding the marketing of many farm products.

At the time of writing I can find nobody, who knows or understands the livestock trade, who favors the present system of bonusing the cattle market instead of freeing it. We have enough taxes to pay now, and have more in prospect as the war proceeds, without asking the taxpayers to bonus butter and beef, two articles of food, for which the people who are drawing increased wages, would be both able and willing to pay. What is going to happen when the quota is filled? I wonder?

In spite of all this let the farmer feed beef, as he has been doing, now that the war demand is growing steadily greater, and he will not have failed his country in its hour of peril, and if the market should fail, a showdown should be demanded, and it will come.

I GET good reports about High School boys who have gone out to work on farms. They have taken their jobs seriously and when harvest is over they will find that what they have learned will have paid them for their efforts, so they are gaining experience as well as making a little money. I know of some business men who spent a full week of their holidays assisting in harvesting and threshing, enjoyed it and were quite useful. There was the odd one who spent half a day and got pictures taken; I wonder if they thought the advertising was worth it.

If this cursed war lasts over another harvest, and we know how likely it is to do that, then next year these school boys will be able to give very valuable assistance on farms. They are now learning why and how things should be done on a farm. They will be a year older, abler for their work and I am certain many farmers will say to them, when this harvest ends, don't forget us next year, when we will doubtless need you more.

Planning for next year must be done now. Help was difficult to get this year. It will be more difficult to get next and we must keep up the supply of food and maintain our farm operations no matter what the cost. Wind up this year's farm business on the basis of better crops and improved and increased livestock for 1943.

AND now comes a complaint about some farms and villages in Scotland, where it is said, neither sirens nor bombs have been heard since the war began. The complaint is that it is difficult to generate a sense of war urgency among the people in these localities. These Scots will be ready to do their duty, as the Highlands have always furnished a fair supply of fighting men. Of course, there is always someone who, as Kipling said in the South African War, "Is killing Kruger with his mouth" wants to shout that no one but he is really fighting the enemy. The wholesale denouncer of all the authorities in charge of the war is usually not very dangerous to our enemies.

IN breaking sod in England farmers always endeavor to have the fields grazed as closely as possible before using the plow. Here we often prefer to plow some clover in when breaking. There is no doubt that if beasts enough are on the fields to eat them bare that a good deal of manure is scattered over the land and this is much better than plowing in a green crop.

The main object of the English farmer, however, is to turn the land over and immediately pack it. He consequently does not want any deep covering of grass turned under as it would interfere with the firmness of the packing. In spite of the liberal rainfall in England they find it very important to firm their cultivated fields so the particles of soil are packed closely enough for capillary attraction to furnish a continuous supply of moisture to the rootlets of the growing plants. You will find that in such ways as these good farming operates so as to avail itself of all the principles, scientific and mechanical, by which improvements may be made in soil production.

Unconsidered Trifles

The five-year-old evacuee was given an egg for breakfast on his first morning on the farm. He took some in his spoon, sniffed at it several times, looked up in surprise, and exclaimed: "Coo, what a funny egg; it don't smell."

"Nature," explained the lecturer, "always tries to make compensation. For instance, if a man loses an eye, the sight of the other becomes stronger, and if he goes deaf in one ear the hearing of the other becomes acuter, and so on."

"Sure!" said Pat, to his neighbor, "an oi believe he's right, for oi've noticed that when a man has a short leg the other is always longer."

A parson, diminutive in size, and with head covered with hair of the most fiery hue, officiated one Sunday for a friend in a remote colliery village.

The old-fashioned pulpit had a high desk, over which the parson's red head was hardly visible.

This was too much for a burley collier who was seated immediately under the pulpit, who, when he heard the text, "I am the Light of the World," exclaimed aloud to the clerk: "Push him up higher, mate; don't let him burn in his socket."

Lid Due to Blow Off in Egypt

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

A NEW explosion appears imminent in the Western Desert, where Rommel's African Corps has been formidably strengthened. The Nazi commander has a striking force possibly even twice as strong as the army that swept half across Libya and 250 miles into Egypt.

Whether the foe has been able by feverish efforts during the two-month lull to gain actual numerical superiority over the defenders of the Nile cannot be known for the moment. The extent of British and American reinforcements has not been disclosed.

But the new phase of the struggle involving the fate of the Middle East and the war's duration clearly will be on a larger scale than ever before.

Rommel captured Tobruk and drove to his position imperilling Alexandria with a force which seems to have consisted of two Nazi and two Italian divisions. Prime Mnister Churchill estimated afterward that the entire enemy army numbered about 90,000, of whom 50,000 were Germans.

Despite the air raids on Axis shipping and enemy North African ports, the best available estimates are that Rommel's original force has been swelled by at least half, and may be doubled. Two Nazi armored and two infantry divisions, along with two or more Italian divisions, are reported to be keyed for an attempted punch through the narrow El Alamein line in a supreme effort to reach the Alexandria naval base seventy-five miles eastward.

Reinforced British and American squadrons are believed, however, to retain the aerial superiority which failed to turn the tide in June. In tanks the new commander, General Sir Harold Alexander, may match the foe.

This would account for Mr. Churchill's restrained optimism and the quietly confident tone of Cairo despatches. While Alexander's army braces for a renewed Axis offensive in the present period of the full desert moon, the feeling has been evident that if Rommel failed to attack now the British probably would in early September.

On the eve of the new crisis, Rommel's threat needs no stressing, but the Allies can find some bright spots in the picture.

Negatively, there is a practical military limit to the enemy forces which can be supplied after being transported to North Africa under protection of an Axis air umbrella which is beyond the present reach of R.A.F. fighter planes. Some British experts have figured the limit to be about the reported existing size of Rommel's army.

Rommel's triumph stemmed from the June 13 artillery trap which almost wiped out the main British armored force of 300 tanks. A coup of that sort obviously is hard to repeat.

British-American air superiority promises to be more effective as visibility improves. The enemy struck in early summer when R.A.F. pilots complained they could see neither the ground nor the horizon from 20,000 feet, and air operating conditions of all kinds were hampered.

In the background now is also the heartening possibility, which hitherto has been virtually non-existent, of a United Nations diversion attack elsewhere in the Mediterranean. The Italians are reported uneasy that an Allied naval concentration rumored to be at Gibraltar and in West African ports may be destined for a thrust at French Tunisia in Rommel's rear.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON, Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(CP)—Illustrating German domination of Italy is this true story:

A man who since escaped from Italy and is now in Washington, saw a tiny black mark on Italian oranges in store windows. He finally bought one to see what it was and found it was the mark of a syringe used by the Germans to extract the juice which they shipped to the Reich. They obligingly left the pulp for their dear Italian partners.

He says this is typical of the economic looting of Italy which the Italians are powerless to stop. Germans control every phase of Italian life and Mussolini is simply a small-town gauleiter, stripped of all power and prestige. The Germans have occupied Italy just as they occupied Norway, the Low Countries, Poland and France and, with typical Teutonic thoroughness, they are shipping to the Reich everything of value in war, particularly food. As for the Italians, they can have what's left.

When the Democratic party convention in New York chose John J. Bennett as candidate for Governor and turned down Senator James Mead, it was a stinging defeat for President Roosevelt, Mead's backer, in his own state. It was not a repudiation of his war leadership so much as a rebuff to his political judgment and it threw the Governor's contest into an open race when the American Labor party rejected Bennett and nominated their own man, Dean Alfange. The Republicans followed with Thomas E. Dewey, the old rackets buster.

Anything can happen between now and November but from this distance it appears the Republicans have their best opportunity of putting their candidate in power in Albany since 1922.

The word has gone out from high places that the word "inflation" is taboo and must be deleted from all official news releases in Washwhereas everybody knows about rising costs of living" substituted for it.

The rule may be contrary to all principles of semantics but it springs from the popular belief that few people know what inflation means whereas everybody knows about rising costs of living. Purists, however, will insist the two are not always synonymous—but what difference does that make when the bureaucrats decide there is no inflation, it's only that living costs are going up.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, ran foul of censorship regulations last week when she gave weather information in her syndicated column "My Day." Reprimanded, she has promised to abide by the rules.'

For 350 weeks, nearly seven years, Mrs. Roosevelt has been turning out a daily column of 700 words that runs in hundreds of American newspapers. During that time she has dictated about 1,500,000 words to her secretary who takes it down on a typewriter. Then she edits it before it is retyped and sent to the syndicate. It is written in trains, on planes, in cars or in the White House—wherever Mrs. Roosevelt happens to be. And Mrs. Roosevelt certainly gets around.

The column is "must" reading for Washington correspondents because every once in a while it discloses trends in White House thinking. Mrs. Roosevelt turns her pay cheque over to charity.

American military commentators have been playing up the daylight raids on German-held targets in Europe by Flying Fortresses based in Britain. Their successful attacks on Rouen, Amiens, Abbeyville and other centres in occupied France have been taken as vindication of the big planes which have been criticized—in a friendly sort of a way—in some British circles as being under armed and carrying too light a bomb-load compared to some British bombers. So far, the Flying Fortresses seem to be winning the argument.

It was a surprise to most people in Washington that Donald M. Nelson, mild and gentle-voiced chairman of the War Production Board, could get tough. But tough he is, good and tough.

At a recent press conference the former Chicago mail order store executive pounded a desk and even did a little shouting to emphasize his determination to be boss of raw materials, priorities and wartime industry in general. Nobody in Washington had ever seen him act like that before.

But many observers here incline to the view that desk-pounding and shouting alone will not win for Nelson in his fight against military control of wartime industry. He has delegated too much power to the army, navy and Maritime commission in the past to get it all back now. And meanwhile, the American war effort is being stifled by divided authority and competition from too many purchasing and control agencies.

It was brought home to the American people this week that President Roosevelt has four sons on active service...There's a big German trek on to Norway to escape Allied bombing raids on the Reich. There is more German than Norwegian spoken in the downtown sections of Oslo during the evening...The United States now is spending 31 per cent. of its national income on the war. This annual rate is more than double that rate for the last quarter of 1941 and is still on the rise.

A Bible Message For Today

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord Our Righteousness. — Jer. xxiii, 5, 6.

The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world....

And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.—John 1, 29, 32-34.

General Alexander

General Alexander is a soldier's soldier. It was not the old school tie but his own aggressiveness that advanced him in the army. Like Foch, his motto is "l'attaque, toujours l'attaque." Thirty times in the First World War he led his men over the top. In this war, though he had only weak forces and scant equipment, he held off the Japanese in Burma until the monsoons made it impossible for them to invade India. Wavell is said to regard him as the most promising of Britain's young fighting generals. In Egypt he will have a chance to prove it.—New York Times.

Right of Election

An election, even if it be only for a Provincial Legislature, is disturbing and distracting, and it necessarily diverts thought and effort from more vital matters. Nevertheless, it would be dangerous to use this as an argument against all elections. That could be made a subterfuge for perpetuating Governments in office, and that would be worse for the country than the upheaval that accompanies a political campaign. Much as we desire to keep our eyes on the main issues, we must constantly guard against the war becoming an excuse for removing from the people the essential control of their institutions, and this cannot be retained under a system by which the vote is summarily taken from them.—Windsor Daily Star.

South African Losses At Tobruk Officially Listed At 10,000 Men

CAPE TOWN, August 28—(CP).—Total South African casualties at the recent loss of Tobruk have been listed officially as 10,000, the majority being classified as "missing" or "missing believed prisoners of war." The second and final casualty list containing 5,000 names was published last week.

Transportation officials from the Union arrived in London recently to confer with various authorities. F. C. Sturrock, Minister of Railways and Harbors, was accompanied by C. J. Hamilton, Port Director of Cape Town. Mr. Sturrock declared, "My business is more effective prosecution of the war by the Government and people of South Africa. I have a variety of matters to discuss with members of the British Government." He will also consult with John Martin, head of the South African Supply Mission in North America.

British Bravery.

Major Piet Vanderbyl, South African minister responsible for post-war planning, said in Johannesburg that the British Government is too inclined to give credit to the Allied soldiers and maintain reserve about achievements of British soldiers. He gave the lie to the Nazi suggestion that Britain was prepared to sacrifice her friends on the battlefield, and paid striking tribute to the gallantry of British soldiers whom he said had suffered heavier casualties and made greater sacrifices than any of the Allies in the same battle area.

The Union Government food control scheme has been claimed officially to be an invaluable contribution to the Union's war effort. After three months of operation the effect of the scheme is already apparent in the stabilization of prices, the storage of perishables in bulk, and the supplying of convoys. Ships chandlers are cooperating and the financial side of the scheme is already operating successfully.

Takes New Shares.

The Government will take up all new "Iscor" shares to the value of £6,500,000 ($29,055,000) when the capital of the Government's vast war equipment project is increased. Parliament last session passed an Act enabling the corporation to increase its capital by that amount to £12000.000 ($53,640,000). Additional capital required for expansion is already in hand, and provision for the purchase of the new shares will be made in next year's budget.

Within a few minutes of the opening of the new Port Elizabeth loan heavy oversubscription resulted in the lists being closed. The loan was for £1,000,000 ($4,470,000) interest to be paid at a rate of 3¾ per cent.

About 1,000 Italian war prisoners now are working for Union Government departments, companies, and individuals under the terms arranged by South African military authorities under the Geneva convention. Ability as farmers, artisans and builders makes their services of great value, and the prisoners themselves are enthusiastic about arrangements.

Dr. T. W. B. Osborn of the University of the Witwatersrand has been invited to Geneva by the International Red Cross to confer on post-war feeding of Europe's starving population. Professor Osborn will also ascertain the part able to be played in this undertaking by the South African Red Cross and the Union as a whole.

Dr. F. V. Mashado, Portuguese Minister of Colonies, will visit the Union of South Africa, this week prior to returning to Portugal from Lourenco Marques, Mozambique.

Three Years of War Sees Changes

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, August 28 — (CP). — Canada closes the third year of war with a re-organized and enlarged Cabinet but the same Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

Nine of the 18 men who meet in Cabinet Council are new at the table since the nation entered the war although one of the newcomers, Defence Minister Hon. J. L. Ralston, had previous Cabinet service.

Creation of new departments resignations and death accounted for the introduction of new men to the Cabinet, and there were numerous internal shifts. The changes were more numerous than in the first three years of the First Great War when six new men were brought into a Cabinet of 18. It was shortly after the three-year mark that Sir Robert Borden formed his Union Government. This involved many changes in the provision of Cabinet seats for Liberals.

Five of Mr. King's nine new war ministers were chosen from Parliament, and for four he went outside Parliament. One, Hon. Angus Macdonald Navy Minister, was Premier of Nova Scotia; another Hon. Humphrey Mitchell Minister of Labor, was in the Civil Service; and two others, Col. Ralston and Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Minister of Justice, were practising lawyers.

The additions from Parliament were Senator J. H. King of British Columbia, who was appointed Minister without portfolio and Government Leader in the Senate; Hon. James MacKinnon who became the Minister of Trade and Commerce in May, 1940; Hon. W. P. Mulock appointed Postmaster-General in July, 1940; Hon. Colin Gibson became Minister of National Revenue at the same time; and Hon. J. T. Thorson was appointed Minister of National War Services in June, 1940.

Removed by Death.

Death removed three ministers in the three-year period. Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe's death left the Justice portfolio vacant and Mr. St. Laurent was appointed to succeed him. Rt. Hon. Raoul Dandurand died while serving as Minister without portfolio and Senate Leader. Hon. Norman Rogers was killed in an airplane crash while serving as Minister of National Defence and was succeeded by Col. Ralston.

The only resignation due to disagreement on policy was that of Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Public Works and Transport, this year on the question of conscription. Mr. Cardin's place has not yet been filled.

Ill-health brought the resignation of Hon. Charles Dunning as Minister of Finance just about the time war started and it was then that Col. Ralston was called into the Cabinet. He assumed that portfolio first. Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce at the outbreak of war was appointed to the Senate and his resignation led to Mr. MacKinnon's appointment.

Four new departments were created: Naval Services headed by Mr. Macdonald; Air headed by Hon. C. G. Power, who was Minister of Pensions and National Health when war broke out and later served as Postmaster-General; National War Services headed now by Hon. J. T. Thorson; and Munitions and Supply, headed by Hon. C. D. Howe, who was Minister of Transport when the war began.

State Secretary Norman McLarty was Postmaster-General in 1939, Minister of Labor before appointment to his present post. Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley was Minister of National Revenue and took over his present post in July, 1940. Pensions Minister Mackenzie was Minister of National Defence but a few days after war was declared was transferred to his present post, while Mr. Rogers shifted from Labor to National Defence.

Resources Minister T. A. Crerar has had no change in portfolio since war started. Fisheries Minster J. E. Michaud has the added duties of Acting Minister of Public Works. Agriculture Minister J. G. Gardiner is also in the same post, but he was Minister of War Services for a year.

Says Buying Cost Index Not Right

WINNIPEG, August 28—(CP). — protest against application of the cost-of-living bonus and a claim that the index compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics was "inaccurate" were made here at the 58th annual convention of the Trades and Lobar Congress of Canada.

Two resolutions were endorsed yesterday concerning the bonus. One, submitted by the Vancouver Civic Employees' Federal Union, requests the Dominion Government to amend various orders in council which make it compulsory on most employers to pay their employees a cost of living bonus, "so as to bring all employees, [illegible] provisions in regard to a cost of living bonus."

The other resolution, submitted by the Calgary Trades and Labor Council, urged the Congress to "impress upon the Dominion Government the necessity of bringing all cost of living figures up to date" and that "in future the Dominion Government appoint labor representatives to also supply reports monthly on cost of living throughout the Dominion."

J. W. Bruce of Toronto, General Organizer of the Plumbers and Steamfitters Union said that in Halifax, Fort William and Prince Rupert, B. C., all war production centres, the cost of living was much higher than the general Canadian average. He said that because a large number of rural communities had been included in the index, no national index would give a fair picture of the cost in such areas.

British Plants Outproducing U.S.

LONDON, August 28. —(CP) — Oliver Lyttelton, Minister of Production, asked the people of the United States Thursday to look upon the United Kingdom as a partner "whose energy and work in the field of production are at least equal to yours —and I could hardly think of a higher form of praise."

Inaugurating a new series of broadcasts in BBC's North American Service, Lyttelton said that, making allowances for the difference in population, the United Kingdom in the first quarter of this year produced a little less than two and one-quarter times as much as the United States and twice the weight in aircraft.

In the second quarter on the same basis, the United Kingdom produced twice the weight in combat aircraft and one and one-half times as much munitions, he said, but the comparison for the present quarter would be less favorable to the United Kingdom, "and that is a great source of satisfaction to us."

Lyttelton disclosed that when the United States first was threatened with air attacks, Britain rushed planes, ack-ack guns and barrage balloons across the Atlantic to reinforce America's defences. Submarine chasers also dispatched from British flotillas to help in the battle against U-boats off the Atlantic coast and in the Caribbean, he said.

First Breadwoman

STRATFORD, Ont., Aug. 28.—(CP)—The honor of being the first female bread salesman in Stratford goes to Miss Dorothy MacTavish, who started to work yesterday.

RESTRICT UMBRELLAS

LONDON—(CP). — Manufacture of umbrellas, including their repair, reconditioning or recovering, has been prohibited except under board of trade order.

Bring Duke Home In RAF Ambulance

LONDON, August 28 —(CP) —A simple R. A. F. ambulance in drab war paint bore the body of the Duke of Kent today to Windsor.

Crowds in London's busy Euston station stood silent and bareheaded as the coffin of the Duke, draped with his personal standard and surmounted by a single wreath of red lilies, was removed from the baggage car of an express train.

Aboard the same train were the three members of the Duke's entourage who died with him Tuesday in a flying boat crash in Scotland— his secretary, Lieut. John Lowther, his equerry, Pilot Officer Michael Strutt, and his valet, Leading Aircraftman Hales.

Two Three-Yolkers

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Aug. 28—(AP) —Waukegan handlers for a local produce firm within one hour found two eggs each with three yolks. Richard Kessel, head of the Badger Produce Company, said "in our 25 years in business we've handled more than 4,000,000 dozen eggs and never before found an egg with more than two yolks."

Public Schools Open Sept. 8

It's back to school for hundreds of boys and girls in the public and separate schools of the district on Tuesday, September 8, but the high school students of all secondary schools will not return to their studies until September 22.

This ruling regarding high school students forbids any Board of Education from opening the school prior to September 21, because of the shortage of help to harvest grain crops, fruit crops and to aid in canneries, cheese factories or creameries.

In a letter received by J. E. Huggins, secretary of the Peterborough Board of Education today, J. P. Cowles, deputy Minister of Education, points out that should there be only a limited demand for high school students in this district, the surplus will be gladly taken up elsewhere. He advises that the high school heads get in touch with Mr. Alex Maclaren, director of the Farm Service Force, Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, and this man will be glad to give the Board information regarding the urgent need for assistance in other areas.

Messroom Chatter From Britain

LOUIS HUNTER.

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 28. —(CP).—An R.A.F. Stirling with Flt. Sgt. A. A. Bishop of Kentville, N.S., at the controls destroyed a Focke-Wulf 190, Germany's newest fighter, and damaged an ME109E which attacked the big, four-engine bomber near Dusseldorf. The Stirling was unmarked.

The Stirling crew sighted a Wellington bomber coned by searchlights and fighting off two enemy attackers. A blue searchlight detached itself and caught the Stirling and an FW190 diverted its attention from the wimpy to the bigger British machine.

This suited Sgt.-Gnr. S Bernard of Toronto just fine. He opened fire at 300 yards with a long burst and the enemy returned it. At 100 yards, the mid-upper gunner, Sgt. J. Hart of the R.A.F., joined in and both were firing when the fuselage of the 190 burst into flames and the machine crashed.

There are several Canadians with the squadron. Air gunners include PO. W. E. King of Alton, Ont., and W. H. Whiting of Sarnia, Ont., and Sgt. H. E. Nesbitt of Cache Bay, Ont., is a bomb aimer.

No Freight Help On West Feeders

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Aug. 27 —(CP).—Federal aid will not be given Ontario cattlemen in bringing Western feeder cattle east, Stewart Brown, chairman of the Ontario cattle feeders' committee, announced here today.

He said he had received a communication from J. C. Taggart, chairman of the Wartime Food Corporation, which said the organization would give no aid in connection with providing free freight from Western points to Ontario centres.

"We feel that the price ceiling at the present time will guarantee the farmer a profit," Mr. Taggart's message read.

Cattlemen met recently with Mr. Taggart at London, Ont., requesting a grant of $1 a hundredweight be given by the Government to help cover transportation costs of cattle brought from Western Canada to Ontario for winter feeding.

LINDSAY AND PETERBORO HARNESS HORSES WIN AT KINGSTON FAIR

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Westclox, after making history in Toronto Wednesday by being the first Peterborough girls' team to win over the Toronto representatives, in the Queen City have earned a real crowd for the second game of the series which will be played at Riverside Park tomorrow, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. If the Big Bens emerge victorious from this series, and they have a decided edge by reason of their win in Toronto, they will be faced with expensive trips in the remainder of the provincial playdown schedule and funds will be needed. A big gate tomorrow would therefore be decidedly welcome and the Westclox girls merit just that on the strength of their season's record and their good showing in Toronto Wednesday. York Ladies who are their opponents in tomorrow's battle have a strong club. They claim they were off color when they lost to the Westclockers and that they will be a different outfit in the second battle. However Pat Hayden's team are confident of the outcome. They expect to wind up the series with a second win tomorrow. Marg Watson who baffled York Ladies in the first game will be sent right back at them. Isobel Bullock will do the catching and the infield will be Eunice Armstrong at first base, V. McLean at second, V. Patterson at shortstop and Marg Hawthorne at third. Aggie Anderson will play centre field, flanked by Barbara Rome in left and Doris Walker in right while the reserves will be A. Patterson and Audrey Armstrong.

Rained out last night, St. Peter's and East City Cubs will meet tonight at Riverside Park at 6.45 o'clock in the third game of the Catholic League playoffs for the Sullivan Trophy. It should be a honey of a ball game. At present the series which is a best three-of-five affair is all tied up. The Cubs walloped the Saints 19 to 7 in the first game and St. Peter's came back to take the second tilt 10 to 9. The outfit that wins tonight will have a distinct edge on the series so that both clubs will go all out to grab off this all-important tussle. Last season Cubs defeated the Saints in the playoffs and took the championship and St. Peter's are hopeful that the results will be reversed on this occasion. The Catholic League clubs have been playing god ball all season and with so much hinging on the result are expected to produce their best effort of the campaign in tonight's battle. Gordon will likely toss them in for the Saints while the East City aggregation are likely to call upon Hayes to undertake the task of stopping the league leaders.

It should be quite a battle at Oshawa tomorrow when Plazas, Peterborough City League champions will clash with Oshawa Colts in the first game of a best two-of-three Ontario intermediate A playdown series. The game is called for 3 o'clock at Alexandra Park and a number of Peterborough fans will make the trip to the Motor City to see the tangle. The Colts cleaned up the Oshawa loop in three straight games in the final series with Oshawa Laundry who spilled the local Chesterfields out of the Ontario playdowns last year. They have been playing fast ball all season behind classy pitching from Dean McLaughlin and Preem Whitely, with the infield of Bidgood, Jubenville, Dalton and Hall flashing all kinds of sensational stuff on the defensive. However, the Plazas who can do some fast fielding themselves and who have all kinds of power at the plate are confident that they can furnish lots of opposition for the classy Colts. With six left-handed batters in their lineup Plazas are nothing in the way of setups for right-handed twirlers and Messrs. McLaughlin and Whitely may find the hockey squad decidedly tough. Tomorrow's game should be a thriller. Incidentally Don Crowe will be down from Toronto to take over his second base patrol as usual and that is good news for Plazas who have had a lot of help from the same Crowe all season.

As Seen In Ireland

This column is indebted to a Peterborough boy overseas for a good laugh. LAC. Joe Hickey of the Royal Canadian Air Force writes from Belfast, Ireland as follows: As a reader of your column and a follower of sports in general and being from that fair city on the banks of the Otonabee I thought you would get a big kick out of this writeup of an American ball game in a Belfast paper. I happened to be in Belfast at the time with another Peterborough chap LAC. "Bill" Collins, and we took the game in. It was certainly a treat to see the Yanks toss the old ball around, especially so far from home." The clipping sent by the Peterborough airman is certainly entertaining.

Here is some of it to show the manner in which the Irish sport writer saw baseball: "The Governor and the Duchess of Abercorr were present at Ravenhill Grounds, Belfast, on Saturday, for the second big baseball match. An enthusiastic crowd of some thousons saw the Californian Eagles beat the New York Lions by nine runs to six, by grand hitting off the Lion's first and second pitchers, Lieut. H. W. Martin and Sergt. R. H. Hensley. A Lions' batter, however, provided the thrill of the afternoon. Krulach, one of their ace bats, hit a home run to the farthest corner of the field, and while the fielders all dashed into position to "relay" the ball in a series of volleying throws back [illegible] round the bases like a whirlwind, and a man on second base also ran home to credit the hit with two runs. Spectators then got an idea how American crowds can roar. There was a considerable company of American troops in the stand and ground, and their roars of glee mingled with the high-pitched calls of the opposition, and the shouts and thunderous clapping of the Ulster spectators turned Ravenhill for a minute or so into a Yankee stadium. How these American boys got keyed up! From mere baseball the match suddenly became the "ballgame" in earnest."

More Athletes Leaving

The Royal Canadian Air Force is getting two more promising young Peterborough athletes in the person of Bob Parnell and Russ Scriver who have been playing in the outfield for the Royals City League team this season and who report to the R.C.A.F. in Toronto on Monday. The two boys, both Westclox employees, were the recipient of gifts from their fellow-workers at the Armour Hill plant yesterday. Both have been prominent in local sport circles, particularly as members of the Peterborough junior hockey club. Parnell played several games with the local senior B team last winter. Russ Scriver shone in rugby too, as a member of the Collegiate Institute football squad and he was a triple threat man with that outfit two seasons ago. In joining the Air Force the two are following closely on the trail of another former junior O.H.A. player, Jack Morrison of Lakefield, who played goal for the Petes during the season before last. He is already in training. Another former junior player, Julian Wade, reported to the R.C.N.V.R., several weeks ago.

Leaders in both the big leagues breathed a little easier last night for the hot second place clubs in both organizations were cooled off a little by defeat. In the National loop Brooklyn Dodgers managed to salvage one game out of the four-game series with the Cards by defeating St. Louis yesterday 4 to 1. Curt Davis, pitching careful, cagey ball kept eight Cardinal hits well scattered. Max Lanier who won the opening game of the series was sent back at the Bums but this time the smart little southpaw failed to deliver and Brooklyn climbed over him with five consecutive hits in the fifth frame to take the verdict. With 30 games to go the Dodgers have a lead of 5½ games. New York Yanks didn't play but their opposition did and lost so that the New Yorkers gained half a game without moving a wheel. It was the Boston Red Sox first defeat in ten games and the first loss sustained by Tex Hughson in twelve starts. Cleveland scoring two runs in the final frame to win the tussle 4 to 2. Ted Williams gave Hughson a good start by pickling one of Jim Bagby's Sunday pitches for his 27th homer of the season in the first inning but after that good start the Red Sox did little on the attack. It was the Cleveland ace's 15th win of the campaign.

Iola Grattan Wins 2:16 Class In Three Heats At Fall Fair

KINGSTON, August 28 — When Danny Barsac, driven by the veteran G. Hammond of Nimga, Manitoba, crashed into the infield fence prevented what might have been two sweep wins in the opening session of the Kingston Fair three-day harness meet. Iola Grattan, owned and driven by E. Switzer of Penetang, won three straight in the 2:16 class and the Western Canada visitor had won two in succession in the 2:24 class when it got off balance in the third heat and the sulky struck the fence, throwing the driver. The horse escaped injury but the driver got a slight arm bruise and the buggy was broken.

The opening of the annual fair races provided some interesting racing with a dead heat for second place featuring the 2:16 class when Widower Grattan, driven by H. Payne of Bloomfield, and Adam Poe, driven by D. Dowson, Port Perry, stepped under the wire together in the second heat.

Sted Craig, the skilled Kingston horseman, drove Van Bars, a grey horse, for W. L. Ireland of Smiths Falls and got a pair of seconds. Princess Henley, owned by McKane and Hutchison scored a heat win for Kingston when Burns McKane drove her to the front in the last heat of the 2:24 class. The heat was delayed by a difficulty in getting the horses started in order.

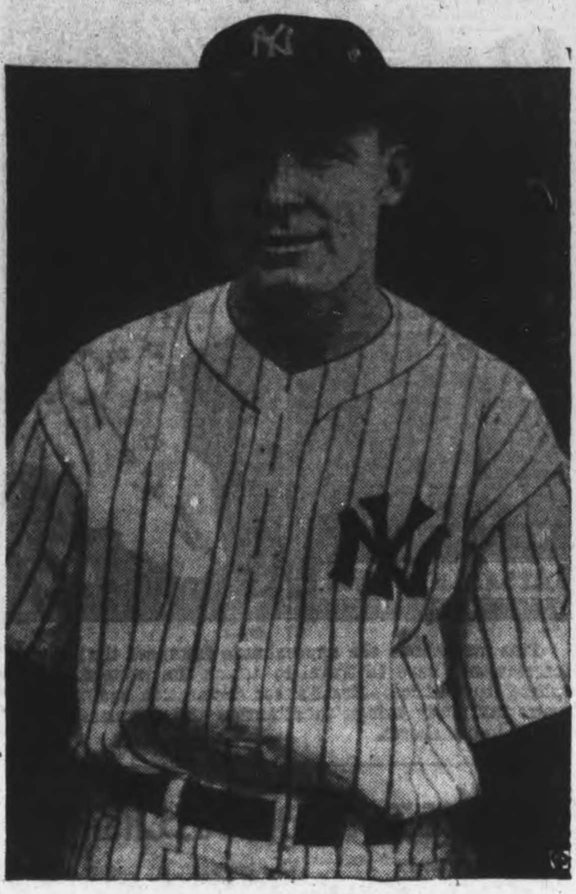
Headed For 20-Victory Season



SPUD CHANDLER

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sprots Editor

Ace of the New York Yankee mound staff, Spurgeon Ferdinand Chandler, the Georgia "Yankee," finally is winning a long fight to make good in the big leagues.

When Chandler graduated from the University of Georgia in 1932 with a bachelor of science degree, he began a career of baseball which has taken him from coast to coast in minor league play, has been filled with injuries and black days and finally, today finds him perched on the top rung on the ladder of pitching success.

Chandler, known as "Spud" to his baseball friends, already has won 14 games against only four losses and is a fair bet to cop 20 decisions, goal of all pitchers.

Toughest break Chandler faced was in 1939, when he broke his ankle and had to stay out of baseball most of the season. In 1940 he favored the ankle, and as a result could win but eight games. Last year he pitched good ball but couldn't win a game until July.

This season Chandler really has clicked. He has helped keep the Yanks far out in front of the pack by his steady twirling.

Athletic Star

A football and track star at Georgia, Chandler broke into pro baseball the same year he graduated from college. His first job was with Springfield of the Eastern League. In eight appearances on the mound he won four games.

The next year he went to Binghamton of the New York-Pennsylvania League. Following this he spent time with Newark, Syracuse, Minneapolis, Oakland and Portland before coming back east for a trial with the Yankees. He needed more seasoning and he went to Newark, where he won 14 games in 1937.

Chandler's best year to date was in 1938, when he won 14 games against five losses.

Chandler is 33 years old. He is a right-handed pitcher, standing six feet tall and weighing 180 pounds. He pitched one game of the 1941 world series and lost it to the Dodgers.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Out of respect and in memory of the late J. H. Sedgewick, all actvities at our club, for today, have been cancelled. The flag at the club house will remain at half-mast until tomorrow.

It is quite likely that bowlers and many curlers will attend the service at St. Paul's Church, this evening, to pay their last respects to their friend.

Rain came on about 6 o'clock last evening and that settled the nights bowling.

Our ladies, playing in the Globe doubles yesterday, are back home again. Each pair won one game and lost the second. They report a grand time. Unfortunately rain came during the dying moments of the second round, forcing a postponement until this morning. And at that the weather does not look any too promising. There is one thing about this elimination system, that when you are "eliminated" you know exactly where you are at.

The games committee met last evening and have decided to hold a mixed tournament here on Labor Day. Choose your own rink. Play to commence at 1.45 p.m. Three 12 end games to be played in the good old fashioned 2-1-0 system. The fee is $2.00 per rink.

The usual week-end mixed tournament will be held to-morrow evening at 7.30 p.m.

California Ace Is In Spotlight In National Tennis Championships

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—(AP).—The national tennis championships have been going on only one day at Forest Hills, but it already is obvious that California is not going to let the war interfere with its normal production of outstanding young stars.

The latest from out that way is George Richards, a left-handed, 19-year-old from Montebello, a suburb of Los Angeles.

Already Richards has won the distinction of being the first native player ever to be seeded on his first appearance in the national championships.

In his opening match yesterday Richards swarmed all over one of the east's best junior players, Irvin Dorfman of New York, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Another west coast youngster who created a fine impression in his first appearance was James Brink, a lanky 17-year-old from Seattle. The kid carried no less a campaigner than Sidney Wood to five sets before he capitulated 5-7, 7-5, 6-0, 3-6, 6-0.

The west coast, of course, already had the two tournament favorites, Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Cal., and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills. They won their opening matches as scheduled, in straight sets. Miss Brough looked magnificent as she swept through Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, 6-0, 6-2, and Schroeder surmounted a strained tendon in his racket wrist to pummel Lieut Russell Bobbitt 7-5, 6-2, 8-6.

There were no upsets at all yesterday, and none was anticipated in the remainder of the first round matches scheduled today.

1 Canuck In 90's At Trapshoot

VANDALIO, O., Aug. 28—(AP)—The Amateur Trapshooting Association's "noble experiment" of boosting the $10,000 grand American handicap from 100 to 200 targets appeared futile yesterday as the "Unknowns" took charge just as they have for the last 42 years.

The change, first in the history of the classic, was made to give the star shooters, handicapped far back, a chance to win over novices who shoot from nearer the traps and who might enjoy a "hot" day.

Last night 185 of the field of 935 were still waiting to shoot, but two "unknowns" were right out front from the first half of the program, to be completed today.

Heading the list were Everett Addy, a 48-year-old sheet metal worker from Springfield, O., and A. H. Ammann, 60-year-old veteran from Peotone, Ill. The two cracked 97 of 100, Addy from 19 yards and Ammann from 22.

Back of them in the two-day chase for the biggest crown in the clay target game were nine shooters with scores of 96.

Scores of Canadian shooters were: Harry Kretschmann, Hamilton, Ont, 23 yards, 94; Dr. D. H. Stewart, Hamilton, 22 yards, 87; R. Coleman, Normanhurst, Ont., 21 yards, 89; N. J. White, Hamilton, 19 yards, 82.

Rudy Etchen, 19-year-old Kansas City star, won the national doubles title with 94 of 100, and Clyde Mitchell of Bridgeport, Conn., repeated for the professional laurels with the same count.

BASEBALL TURNS WORLD SERIES INTO BENEFIT FOR FIRST TIME

Robinson Hangs Up Another KO, Motisi In First

CHICAGO, Aug. 28—(AP).—Ray (Sugar) Robinson of New York chalked up his 124th successive ring victory last night by knocking out rugged Tony Motisi of Chicago in the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout in Comiskey Park.

The undefeated young Negro dropped Motisi heavily with a short left hook to the point of the chin. He sagged into the ropes and then fell onto his knees. As the count was being tolled over him he attempted to regain his feet, but his knees buckled and he fell on all fours and then flat on the canvas-covered ring. The bout was over in 2:41.

Robinson started the squatty Chicagoan on his way with a smashing right to the chin an instant before he clipped him with the left.

The New York Negro opened up slowly and cautiously and, after taking a couple of wild swings, landed three hard left hooks to the head and then ripped a right and left to the jaw a second later. Motisi kept plowing in without fear, but he was unable to land successfully. Robinson was a past master in blocking the Chicagoan's blow.

Robinson weighed 144 pounds to 147 for Motisi. It was Robinson's second knockout victory in less than a week, having flattened Reuben Shanks in New York in a quick two-round knockout.

The battle was fought under wretched conditions. The canvas covering of the ring was so badly soaked that the boxers had difficulty retaining their footing.

The total attendance was 7,889, with gross receipts $17,738.

Corporal Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, sat in a ringside seat to watch the undefeated Harlem Negro register this 35th victory as a professional. Previously he had won 89 bouts in amateur competition.

Inspired Wings Flatten Bisons

By The Associated Press

It will probably will take Manager Al Vincent and his Buffalo Bisons some time to forget the activities they witnessed at Red Wing stadium in Rochester last night.

Before the International League game, a troop of soldiers staged a sham battle which evidently inspired the Wings, for they took up where the soldiers left off and walloped the Bisons, 10-0.

Bill Beckman administered the whitewash as he limited the Bisons to five hits, while his mates pounded the offerings of four Buffalo twirlers for 11 blows. Roy Pfleger led the bombardment with a triple, double and single in five trips to the plate, driving in four runs.

Toronto Maple Leafs rose to the .500 mark in games won and lost as they defeated Montreal Royals, 2-1, behind the five-hit tossing of big Jack Hallett.

It was a scoreless tie until the seventh when the Royals took a one-run lead, only to have the Leafs come back with two tallies in their half. Jim Russell opened the Toronto seventh with a triple and scored when Lee Handley singled. Handley went to second on an infield out and tallied while Steve Nagy took his time in tossing out Burgess Whitehead.

With the rest of the league idle, there were no changes in the standings.

Dodgers Revive Take Cards 4-1 After 3 Losses

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The world series is beginning to look safe again for Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees.

What little excitement had been breathed into the two major league pennant races in recent days apparently was expelled yesterday as Brooklyn bounced out of their lethargy and quelled St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 and the onrush of Boston Red Sox was checked by Cleveland Indians 4-2.

The Dodgers had the cocksureness taken out of them at St. Louis as the Redbirds took the first three tussles, but the net result of the struggle in Sportsman's Park was to send the Dodgers into the last month of the season with a 5½ game lead and the knowledge that they would need to stay awake to keep it.

The Cardinals came back last night with Max Lanier in the fourth game of the series with just two days rest since he had held Brooklyn to four hits Monday night. The stock southpaw wasn't up to the job of subduing the aroused Dodgers, however, and was shelled for five successive singles for three runs in the fourth. Then another lefthander, Ernie White, came in and was pelted for an additional single and Brooklyn's final run before getting his house in order.

It was the veteran Curt Davis, once a Cardinal, who directed the Dodgers revival. In gaining his 14th triumph of the season he held the Redbirds to eight scattered hits and himself knocked in two of Brooklyn's runs with a single.

A crowd of 18,665 saw the game, bringing the attendance for the series to more than 91,000.

Hughson Stopped Too

The Red Sox' string of nine consecutive victories not only was broken in the only American League game, but Cecil (Tex) Hughson's skein of 11 straight pitching triumphs also was snapped as Jim Bagby of the Indians hurled a five-hitter, one of the blows being Ted Williams' 27th home run in the first inning.

A better pitching battle than this, though, was given a small gathering of fans at Cincinnati where New York Giants beat the Reds 2-0 by bunching five hits in the 11th inning after Harry Feldman and Ray Starr had labored through 10 scoreless innings.

Hank Gornicki provided a one-man show at Pittsburg by pitching two-hit ball and hitting a two-run homer to lead the Pittsburg Pirates to a 5-0 victory over the Boston Braves. Elbie Fletcher also homered.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(AP)—While the fans aren't breaking down the gates to see the United States tennis championships, somebody must think the game is important ...Manufacturers report that they can't get rubber for golf balls, hand balls, etc., but there still is a trickle coming in for tennis balls...Incidentally, they're the one kind of balls that can't be reclaimed... Charlie Gillham, who came all the way from Juneau to the Grand National trapshoot, says there will be very little big game hunting in Alaska this year. What does he call Jap destroyers?

Abe Barron, Centreville (Ia.) Daily Iowegian: "With all the trouble between Leo Durocher and the eastern sports writers, you'd think one of the scribes would write the Dodger bossman and his darlings into a stage play entitled 'Arsenic and Old Lysol'."

The latest story hereabouts is that Leo Durocher may return to the active list so as to be eligible for world series play in case he's needed.

LAST LAUGH

When Comedians Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson invited the fight mob to a party for their scrapper, Cleo Shans, the other day, one of their gags was to serve the meal without any cutlery...It fell flat when several beachcombers, eating as usual, didn't notice the difference until the knives and forks arrived with the coffee.

Sport Snapshots Across Canada

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, August 28—(CP).—It is hard to figure out why the Eastern Rugby Football Union folded, despite the various official reasons.

If the Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto Balmy Beach football bosses would come right out and say they think football should retrench in wartime, all would be clear. But this vacillation from policy to policy, sober declarations that football will carry on for the good of public morale, then an abrupt decision to quit, is puzzling.

It leaves Harold Bailey's Ontario Rugby Football Union and Joe Ryan's Winnipeg City League to keep big time football before the public. The O.R.F.U. has three clubs lined up—Hamilton, Kitchener, and Toronto Oakwoods. It probably will have five before the season starts. For instance, if Balmy Beach really want to play football this season it undoubtedly could get back in the O.R.F.U., which the club left a couple of seasons ago for the more-publicized Eastern Union.

There's room for a couple of enterprising clubs in the O.R.F.U. Harold Bailey isn't talking much about the future, probably because he has something cooking that would be spoiled by premature publicity. But yesterday he told me: "We are ready to operate."

In those five words, he gave expression to the inequality of the Canadian football situation. His league hasn't made important money for years, but it is sticking in there, overcoming the "obstacles" which forced all half-hearted operatives from the game. The clubs which have dropped are big-name clubs which made something more than glory from football in good years. But they were first to retreat when it becomes apparent that perhaps only glory is left.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers, which made money with the best of them in football's golden years, will put some back this season. The public won't be allowed to forget football, switch allegiance to other sports, because Bailey and Ryan won't let football die. After the war, when the woods are full of players and fans again, the clubs who folded after making most out of the game will be back in again, reaping horvest from seed they refused to nurture.

There is one other angle to consider. What about the R.C.A.F. sports program Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher was appointed to direct? He has said there will be Air Force hockey entries, so probably there will be Air Force football teams, too. There may be something important break on this within a few days, perhaps in connection with the unofficial talk that senior leagues in Ottawa and Montreal districts will be formed to fill the gap.

To believe the possibility that city leagues will operate in Ottawa and Montreal is the most charitable view to take. They could choose all-star teams, or name league champions, to compete in Eastern playdowns and meet the West for the Canadian title.

But if all this is so, it should have been sung as a duet with the E.R.F.U. swan song yesterday. That leaves only the uncharitable view—to believe the statement that their only reason for quitting is their belief a three-team league wouldn't be a success. Wouldn't be a success for whom? Football paid well enough in the good years that these clubs could afford to put a little back when times are grim. Bailey and Ryan have shown that it doesn't take much cash—just a little courage and energy.

$357,544 Kitty Or Bigger For War Chests

CHICAGO, Auf. 28—(AP).—Baseball's offer to share $357,544 to $679,006 of its world series kitty was extended today to two organizations—the U.S.O. and the Red Cross—and needed only their formal acceptance and subsequent approval by government authorities to go into effect this fall.

K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, said that to his knowledge the world series never before has been conducted as a benefit.

After conferring yesterday with Presidents Will Harridge of the American League and Ford Frick of the National League, Landis revealed the plan and said the two intended beneficiaries had not been consulted beforehand.

In Washington Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross declined to comment pending formal word of the offer from Landis.

In New York Paul Badger, administrative vice-president of the U.S.O., declared his organization was "extremely grateful at this gesture and will be glad to participate in the world series receipts."

Landis drew up 1942 series estimates based on late fall's classic between the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers, which teams appeared headed for an encore meeting this year, and allowing for the fact the first two games will be in the National League champion's home park, came up with these statistics:

All To Be Turned Over.

The $100,000 for radio rights, previously shared by players and "baseball"—including the commissioner's office, the two leagues and the two participating clubs, all would be turned over to the U.S.O. and Red Cross.

Of the $160,731 gate receipts from each of the first two games, approximately $81,972 each day would go into the players' pool and $78,748 to baseball.

Of the $262,800 receipts from games 3 and 4 in the larger Yank's Stadium, approximately $128,722 would go each day into the U.S.O.-Red Cross pool and $134,028 into the players' kitty, "baseball" getting nothing.

If the series ended in four games, the two organizations would net $357,544, the players would divide $432,000 and baseball would get a mere $157,496.

If the series should end in five games, all receipts from the fifth contest—at Yankee Stadium and amounting again to $262,800—would go to baseball, boosting its total to $420,296.

Receipts of games 6 and 7, in the National League park, would go entirely to the service groups. Should the series run the seventh-game limit, the final reckoning would be: U.S.O.-Red Cross $679,006; players' share $432,000; baseball's share $420,296.

Landis said world series for the last 20 years have averaged 5.71 games each and he predicted the 1942 series would go six games.

Army, Air Teams Would Enter Quebec League

MONTREAL, Aug. 27.—(CP)—Applications from the Royal Canadian Air Force and Military District No. 4 have been sent to the Quebec Senior Hockey League, it was learned last night.

George M. Slater, president of the Q.S.H.L. said the league had not received the applications as yet.

Among professional hockey players now stationed in the Montreal military district are Claude Bourque, Buddy Hellyer, Johnny Quilty and Eddie Wiseman.

Although nothing has yet been said of a coach for the Air Force team, observers see significance in the fact that Don Penniston, who coached Quebec Aces last winter, now is awaiting word of his application for a post of physical instructor in the R.C.A.F.

Total cattle receipts for the week of 2,838 head represented a considerably smaller run than that of the week before. Packers and local butchers got only small lots of mixed quality cattle. The bulk of the light supply of cattle was purchased by farmers to go back on pasture.

In cattle trade butcher steers sold at $9 to $10.90 with heifers at $8.50 to $10.40. Butcher cows sold at $6 to $8.75 with canners from $4 to $5.50. Bulls were $7.50 to $8.75. Fed yearlings sold at $10 to $12 cwt. Good stockers and feeders were taken at $10 to $10.60 with stock calves up to $11.25. Plainer stockers sold at $7.75 to $8.50. Milkers and springers were steady at $75 to $125 each according to quality.

Calves were active and stronger at $15 to $15.75 for choice vealers with a few tops at $16. Common vealers sold downward to $9. Bulk of veal calves sales was between $13 and $15.50. Grass calves sold at $8 to $9 cwt.

Hogs held steady on a light run at $16 dressed with sows at $12.75.

Lambs also had a light run and the price was steady at $11.75 for good ewes and wethers and at $10.75 for bucks. Two cars of fat western lambs were included. Sheep sold at $4 to $8 cwt according to quality with good breeding eyes at $8.50 cwt.

150 Japs lost at sea or in planes."

Snipers Miss Roosevelt.

Other episodes gleaned from the eye witnesses accounts:

Jap snipers strapped to coconut trees, fired at Maj. Roosevelt but missed. "I fired two shots at snipers," was all the eldest son of the President would say concerning his personal activity.

The island's 1,700 natives gladly worked with the invaders and their King gave his sarong to Capt. James Davis of Evanston, Ill., who lost his pants in action.

By the second day, "there were dead Japs behind most every coconut tree," said Col. Carlson.

"On the battlefield, I picked up a sword and pistol of the Japanese Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant and turned it over to Commander (John M.) Haines (of Coronado), Calif.,) who presented it to Admiral Nimitz (Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet.)"

A Jap bomber was caught by marines while attempting to flee the battle scene but the invaders shot away two of its engines and from 100 feet up it crashed, killing all aboard.

Maj. Roosevelt summed up what he thought of the rading force this way: "I don't think there is a finer group of men in the world."

strait suggesting to some a sea battle in the region of the entrance to the North Sea.

Similar cannonading was heard at Varberg, on the west coast of Sweden. Swedish reports said it appeared to come from warships embattled somewhere in the narrow waters of the Kattegat through which German vessels would have to pass between the North Sea and their home bases.

Nazi radio dispatches said British raiders smashed overnight at west, central and northeast Germany, conceding damage in several localities, but did not mention specific targets.

Some Russians Too?

Although the raiders were described as British, the wide sweep of the attacks suggested that the suddenly-renewed Russian air offensive against Germany might have accounted again for the pounding of the Nazis' eastern cities.

With daylight came the R.A.F. fighters again, keeping up a drum-beat of explosions which watchers on the English south coast said had rolled back from the French shore during the moonlit night. One deafening explosion, they said, indicated that an ammunition dump had been hit.

During almost every hour of day and night now, the great bombers and fighters fleets of the Allied nations are unloading over Nazi targets which stretch from the Atlantic coast of occupied France to the easternmost regions of Germany itself, including Berlin.

The arcs of air assault cut over Germany by the British, Canadian and American Allies from the west and Russians from the east overlap and the Germans—once relatively impregnable to bombings far within their borders because of the remoteness of United Nations' bases —now cannot tell where or from what direction the lightning of air attack will strike.

New Raid Signals

(An indication that the Germans already are feeling the pinch of interrupted and diminished production was given by a Berlin broadcast announcing a new air-raid alarm signal starting today. Henceforth, traffic will stop and workmen will leave their jobs only when a serious raid is apparent. Otherwise, only a general alert will be sounded.)

The mere record of the two-sided air front against Germany in the 24-hour period preceding the night forays indicates the extent and effectiveness of the Allies' air weapon, sharpened by the greater flying range, speed, bomb-bearing capacity, accuracy and toughness of the bombers. Here it is:

The American Flying Fortresses, escorted by two squadrons of R.C.A.F. fighters and other squadrons of R.A.F. Spitfires—an afternoon bombardment of shipyards at Rotterdam, in occupied Holland, where direct hits were scored in the centre of the target and on two docked ships.

This was the seventh foray by Flying Fortresses and escorting fighters and a joint R.A.F.-U.S. headquarters announcement said all planes returned home. The Rotterdam flight, a round trip of more than 3,000 miles, was described as one of the longest operational flights ever made by the single-engined fighters on escort duty.

By the Russian Air Force—raids on the Nazi capital and at least seven other centres in Eastern Germany where some industries had been shifted from the Ruhr Valley and Rhineland for security from British bombs.

Fire On Berlin.

The Russians said their planes rained fire on Berlin, particularly the suburb of Treptow; Danzig, Koenigsberg, Tilsit, Stettin, Stargard, Fuerstenwalde and Schneide Wednesday night. All their planes returned, they said.

By the R.A.F.—Hurricane bombers, escorted by Spitfire fighters, attacked shipping in the harbor of battle-marked Dieppe where the Canadian army men fought so heroically last week. The bombers shot up four ships which appeared to be anchored in Dieppe. Three ships of 1,500 tons each were seriously damaged and a smaller vessel also was hit.

The escorting planes raked and damaged the ships with machine-gun and cannon fire.

Other fighter planes hit the German fighter plane base at Abbeville.

German counter-blows, meanwhile continued on a minor scale. A small number of casualties and some damage was reported in a German bombing yesterday of a southeast coast town. A few hostile raiders penetrated to northern England last night, but the British said damage and casualties again were slight.

Although their first actions on Canadian soil after their arrival in Montreal varied somewhat, the one finding most enjoyment in an ice cream cone, the other rushing to the nearest telegraph office to send a wire to a friend, both little Adrienne Lois Poy and Phyllis Argall (at RIGHT) ended identical trips from the Far East. They were members of a party of 70 repatriated Canadians from Japan or Japanese-occupied territory. Miss Argall, Manitoba-born journalist, told a story of cruel treatment at the hands of the Japanese, including 18 months' imprisonment with hard labor. Wide-eyed little Miss Poy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Poy. He was the Australian-born Chinese secretary of the Canadian Legation in Hong Kong. His young son also came to Canada with the group composed mostly of government officials and missionaries, which landed at an American port from the Swedish liner the "Grisholm."

An Invasion Ruse

While modern naval warfare might result in turning a withdrawal into another large-scale invasion attempt in a matter of days or even hours, the enemy's disappearance was regarded generally as a victory for U.S. Marines and American naval and air forces.

The New Guinea battle cost the Japanese eight zero planes over Milne Bay and four more at Buna, Allied headquarters said. Two others were believed destroyed at Buna and three damaged. A single Allied fighter was lost.

While the navy earlier announced at least 13 Japanese warships damaged in the Solomons encounter, a New Zealand correspondent of Reuters News Agency reported that "Japanese wounds in the week's affray, severe and annoying as they are to the enemy, do not probably touch the main strength of the Japanese naval force."

Tweed Soldier In Dieppe Raid

TWEED, Aug. 28—(ENS).—Cpl. Clancy Carleton, son of Mrs. Charles Carleton, cabled that he returned from the successful raid. He is a member of the Essex Light Infantry.

David McCoy of Cloyne and his 16-year-old son narrowly escaped death when their automobile stalled on the Canadian National Railway tracks and was struck by an eastern train seconds later, after they had jumped clear of the vehicle. The car, which was owned and driven by Mr. McCoy, was so badly damaged that its only value was as scrap metal and salvaged parts.

Ross Fetterley continued his weekly success by landing a 22-pound muskie this week. He is averaging one to two of the species per week, still attempting to hook the elusive 50-pounder.

Joe Emerson, a veteran of the village fishing circle, landed a 15-pound muskie on Wednesday.

No Firms Making Big Profits States Ilsley

OTTAWA, August 28. —(CP) — Hon. Mr. Ilsley said yesterday persons in the high income brackets were "hit hard" and that Canada has "one of the most steeply graduated systems of taxation in the world."

Regarding suggestion in some quarters that Corporations are making a big profit out of war the Finance Minister said contracts are not yielding big profits in most cases. The excess profits tax had been raised from 75 to 100 per cent.

He described corporation taxes as "pretty severe." Seven per cent of pre-war profits is all that remains "when the Government gets through with them," Mr. Ilsley said of corporation profits.

The Finance Minister warned that saving and lending savings to the Government is becoming increasingly important. Most of the money to continue the greatest possible prosecution of the war would have to come from the voluntary lending of the people, he said.

Stressing the need for instituting compulsory savings, the Minister caid; "unfortunately some people won't save and lend to the Government to help fight the war."

He said many workers were earning good wages and had no commitments which placed a burden on them. It was felt unfair to the great numbers regularly lending their savings to the Government that others Should not be assiting, and the new method will bring that proportion into a compulsory scheme.

At the conclusion of his address, four questions, submitted by Labor representatives, were answered by Mr. Ilsley. They were:

"The budget says we get the savings part of our taxes back after the war. Do we get a bond or certificate to hold in the meantime?"

Mr. Ilsley said a receipt or certificate will be issued which will be a proper security."

'Do employers get paid for deducting taxes from wages and when does he hand my money over to the Government?"

The Finance Minister replied that "no employer gets paid." The employers are doing the task as a "patriotic duty." The money must be paid one week after the employer receives it.

"What about the deductions that have already been made from pay for National Defnece Tax?"

Mr. Ilsley made a brief explanation of the system for such allowance and advised study of the schedule already issued to get a definite understanding of each individual case.

"Are the big companies and the rich man paying their share of taxes?"

"The answer is yes," Mr. Ilsley said.

Canadian Pilot Gains D.F.C.

Flying Officer John Rutherford Sterne (Can. J. 5831), Royal Canadian Air Force, No. 174 Squadron, awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. He has "displayed a fine fighting spirit, which, combined with his complete disregard of danger, has won the confidence and admiration of his fellow pilots," and secured notable successes in night bombing attacks on enemy shipping. In one period of three nights, when operating alone against shipping, he destroyed a 4,000-ton ship which was heavily defended by some 12 escort vessels, and damaged several armed ships with machine-gun fire. He also assisted in the destruction of a 1,200-ton enemy coaster in daylight.

War Needs Reduces Meat Supply

City's Meat Box Full Today— But—Next Week!

Make the most of the meat you buy tomorrow folks because the outlook for the next month or more is almost bare of steaks and chops.

Probabilities may be reduced to the laconic phrase,—feast and famine.

The Examiner peeked into the frosty refrigerators of A. & P., Buehler's and F. and G. this morning, and on the basis of ocular evidence can promise present supplies which should see Peterborough through to Saturday night. So the "scroungers" will not have to get up early tomorrow morning and rush to the meat shops to be there before the doors open.

So much for the week-end, but for a week hence, the Examiner can say only this,—that civilians will get the leavings after the military camps are supplied; and you may be able to get more meat in a can of broth or mulligatawney than you'll be able to buy over the counter.

By the way,—did you every try cabbage soup? It is frequently mentioned in food reports from those occupied countries—Poland, Czechoslovakia and elsewhere.

Enquiries about the condition of meat supply for the next month fail to turn up a brief and clear statement of what you may expect.

Soldiers Served First

One fact may be stamped with certainty. You haven't a chance to get any meat until the men in uniform get theirs. And perhaps you know that your Government has also undertaken to supply the American troops in Newfoundland and Alaska.

The men in military training and on home service are consuming 10,000 cattle a week; half the number going to market. The folks at home will have to fend against their worries of wartime on a diet that for a time is going to be short of proteins as obtained from roasts and steaks and stews.

One bit of information gleaned in this meat enquiry was to the effect that of the recent quarterly quota of cattle for the United States, maximum of 51,000 head, Uncle Sam got 20,000. Figuratively, Donald Gordon, chief of Canada's Wartime Prices and Trade Board, reached a powerful hand toward the border and rounded up the remaining 31,000 head, retaining them for home needs.

Trickle To Market

Another incidental item of news this week was the report that only 100 head of cattle passed through the Toronto stock yards last Monday, and yesterday there were 17, an all-time low.

The regulatory officials at Ottawa simply tell the meat trade to turn off the flow of meat to the retail stores up and down the country, and John Civilian is going to go short of meat for the next month or six weeks; posibly longer than that. Furthermore, the W.P. and T. Board clipped two cents a pound off the price of meat in the primary market, a seasonal factor based on the condition of cheap natural feed for grazing cattle until pasturage is seared by frosts.

These are only a few glimpses of the present market which is more involved and complicated than it may seem on the surface.

Lots of Cattle

The herds of cattle in Canada, and even around the Trent area of Ontario, are perhaps as numerous as they have ever been; but they are not ready for market. In fact, there may be a big increase in potential meat supply; but these cattle are on grass. Every day they are putting on weight. Farmers are probably going to follow the course of holding them as long as possible, even beyond the grazing period. They may find adequate stabling accommodation for them, and keep them out of the market until the end of the year or on into January

Hay is plentiful, and the seasonal price of beef is bound to be higher during the winter period; and the cattle be thoroughly 'fitted' for the market.

A Toronto report said today that the meat shortage has been caused by Wartime Food Corporation went off the market last week as soon as the export quota to the United States was filed. The W.F.C. pays approximately two cents a pound higher than that allowed packing companies under the price ceiling, and the government absorbs the loss.

Incidentally, R. H. Graham, formerly of Lakefield, is the administrator of the Wartime Food Corporation. He was borrowed by the Federal Government from the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and from all accounts he has undertaken a heavy assignment.

Motor Dealers Not Asking For Adjustments

Proprietors of properties used locally in the automotive business have not considered appealing to the Court of Revision for assessment adjustments in consequence of the severe encroachments of the war upon their affairs.

"We haven't even thought of it," said several men who are engaged in motor sales and garage work.

While Peterborough motor dealers and garage owners may have concluded not to bother about the assessment question, their industry in Windsor has already presented appeals for reduced property and business assessments. Apparently they have not all gone in a body to present their case to the court, but so many of them have asked for consideration that the municipal tax rate may have to be increased to compensate for a substantial decline in assessment next year.

The chairman, J. D. Branch, of the Windsor Court of Revision, said at a recent meeting "that the present situation became unfair in the aggregate of taxation for the city because large plants in the name of the Crown were not liable for taxation, and Government housing was producing a revenue for the municipality which was not comparable with privately owned buildings."

One of the garage firms reported an 83⅓ per cent. reduction in volume of business during the year; another said their business had shrunk 66 2-3 per cent. It was pointed out that some of the garage buildings were designed and built for just one purpose and were assessable by the amount by which they increased the value of the ground on which they were erected.

Carnival Draw Nets $116 For War Victims

Some time ago Mrs. P. W. Hagerman, of 555 Water street, who is 82 years of age, made and donated a beautiful afghan to the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, and then by her own efforts sold $19.20 worth of tickets for a draw on it at 10 cents each or three for 25 cents, which is quite an achievement for one of her age.

The Range Pals, who are a group of very active young people in the district immediately surrounding the city, then undertook to sponsor the sale of further tickets, and they added a further $25.90, which made a total of $45.10, which was realized on the afghan for the fund.

On Friday, August 21, the Range Pals held a carnival at the farm grounds of Arthur Sayer adjoining the Rifle Range on R. R. No. 7, Peterborough, and at this gathering the draw was made for the afghan by Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., which resulted in Miss Dorothy Price of R. R. 7, Peterborough, being the winner.

This same group has on a number of occasions been represented in the lists of receipts for the fund with substantial amounts as a result of their activities, and last year their annual carnival produced over $40.00 for this fund.

Setting out with the objective of surpassing their previous record, how well they organized with this in view is evidenced by the $71.73 appearing in their name today as a result of this, their latest effort from the carnival itself, making in all a total of $116.83 to come to the fund as a result of the combined efforts of the carnival and the draw.

Many varied attractions were offered at the carnival itself, among which was a bingo, fish pond, sale of home needlework, moving pictures kindly given and presented in person by Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., the whole winding up with a dance on a platform specially erected for the occasion, with music given by the Coldsprings Mountaineers orchestra.

The fund now requires less than $40.00 to complete the 19th donation, which will bring the total then sent up to the fine sum of £10,100.

Market Stall

Two girls, Dorothy Bagnall and Mina Campbell, have been busy all week gathering donations to hold a sale for the fund at the farmers' market this Saturday, and will appreciate your patronage very much.

It has been suggested that for future events of a like nature at the market stall made available to the fund by the City Council, farmers might like to leave a donation in the nature of produce of any suitable kind to help along the fund, and the fund management would be glad to facilitate this by having responsible young people there to take charge of the sales, and keep a record of those so giving a helping hand for the victims of air raids over Britain.

Wartime Board To Open Ration Office

A new rationing division for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is to be opened shortly in Peterborough, Bill Foley announced today The new office will be opened at 142 Hunter street in the near future. just as soon as the premises can be made ready for the new occupants.

This will mean much better and quicker service for the people of Peterborough and district, and there will be at least five employees in the new office. Since this is the only rationing division btween Toronto and Brockville, it is expected that this office will have a fairly wide territory to cover and places like Oshawa and Midland may possibly be included under the jurisdiction of the Peterborough area.

This new office is considered quite an advantage for the city because the rationing offices are widely scattered across the Dominion, and if there is no division in the district it takes twice as long for adjustments and other necessary functions, because the rationing is a full-time job in itself without all the other things that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is responsible for. More information about the work that this office will be carrying on will be released shortly.

Baby Gorillas Need Care Given Children

There are many fields of endeavor open to women, but few would care to choose the job that Mrs. Gertrude Lintz has been doing for some time, that of raising gorillas. Mrs. Lintz raised the notorious Gargantua and she is regarded as one of the most prominent authorities in her line.

Her biggest worry at the present moment, she told New York reporters, is the breakdown, caused by the war, of the administration of the gorilla preserves in French Equatorial Africa and the Belgian Congo, where the last remaining gorillas live. Mrs. Lintz said that traders and hunters with an eye on profit and not on science have been taking advantage of the easing of the embargo and have taken infant gorillas. In her opinion, the result has been tragic for man as well as ape.

She explained that because so few people know how a baby gorilla should be reared, they die off like flies in the hands of ruthless traders. Gorillas need to be treated like humans. They are like very young children and are subject to all the childish ailments including measles, mumps, and chicken pox, and Mrs. Lintz, strongly supported by her doctor husband, claims that when ill, these animals should be treated by medical doctors and not by veterinarians.

"Baby gorillas, surprisingly cry real tears and have the same fears and nervous reactions as children. They are frightened of thunder and the unknown just as humans are."

While this woman's activities are confined simply to the gorilla raising, her ideas are very similar to those of Osa Johnson, who for so many years accompanied her husband on all his African treks. Mrs. Johnson dealt with every type of animal they encountered, and made pets and friends of nearly all, and she believed in treating them as she would her human friends, with surprisingly good results.

It all sounds very glamorous and enchanting to read of the interesting adventures of two women like this, but it is not all a bed of roses, and most women will be glad to stick at more routine and less dangerous affairs.

Earl Harewood Opposes Son's Fiancee

LONDON, August 28 — (CP). — The tabloid Daily Mirror carried in its first edition to-day a long story reporting that the Hon. Gerald Lascelles 18-year-old nephew of the King, had become engaged to June Morris, described as a slim, dark-eyed Jewess, also 18 of Leeds.

The story was dropped completely from later editions without explanation. Members of the families involved could not be reached immediately for comment.

The Mirror's story as it appeared in the early edition said that Gerald's father the Earl of Harewood, had written to the girl's father opposing the immediate marriage. The girl and young Lascelles were quoted at length.

"It will be necessary to get the King's consent," Miss Morris was quoted, 'but if that is not possible we shall have to wait until after the war and then get married abroad the same as the Duke of Windsor did."

The Lascelles youth is the son of the Princess Royal only sister of King George. She was married on February 22, 1922, to the Earl of Harewood, at that time Viscount Lascelles. Her older son is George, 19.

Mother Not Calling It Off.

The mother of June Morris, dark-haired, 17-year-old canteen worker, said today a newspaper report that her daughter is engaged to Gerald Lascelles, 18-year-old nephew of the King, is correct.

"Yes, they are engaged, and there is no thought of calling it off," said the girl's mother. She added that "the way circumstances are now, they will just have to wait until Gerald is 21."

The first edition of the Daily Mirror publishes a report of the engagement, but the story was eliminated without explanation from a later edition.

A Mirror official said merely that the story was dropped following upon a request "from a high official who could not be disregarded."

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said, "I really don't know anything at all about the story but I should not think it was true."

The mother confirmed substantially quotations attributed to June in the Daily Mirror's story, especially emphasizing one in which June was reported as saying:

"It doesn't matter to me who he is. I can't help his being the son of an Earl. I fell in love with Gerald before I knew who he was when I met him on a bus."

The Morris family lives in Moortown, a suburb of Leeds.

The father, Lieut. W. S. Morris, is in the Army Pay Corps, stationed at York. In civilian life he had been engaged in various business enterprises, and was at one time head of an advertising agency.

In a letter which the Earl of Harewood was reported by the Daily Mirror to have written to June's father, the Earl was quoted as saying, "Obviously both you and I agree that the marriage between your daughter and my son cannot be countenanced by us before my son is 21, i.e., after three years. I am doubtful if it is possible even then."

Young Lascelles is a son of the Princess Royal, the only sister of the King, and is 10th in order of succession to the throne He turned 18 only last Friday, and soon is to leave a factory job in northwest England to join the army.

Public Hoping For Opportunity To Inspect Wartime Staff House

Whether or not their will be an official opening of the new staff house at the rear of the Canadian General Electric Company on Park street, when it opens next months, has not been decided as yet, but there is every likelihood that the public will be given an opportunity of seeing this unusual building.

Hubert Eastwood, of the Eastwood Construction Company, reported today that his men are putting the finishing touches to the building, and it is supposed to be ready for the new occupants on September 21. At present workmen are cleaning windows, painting, decorating the interior of the administration building and grading the approaches to the staff house.

The building was started on May 13, but heavy rains and the presence of springs in the hill impeded progress, and the steam shovel did not finish the excavating until June 14. Otherwise remarkable progress has been made, and the composite structure consisting of three wings running north and south parallel to each other 282 feet long with the main building in the front, 228 feet long, presents an imposing picture.

Six Others Building

So far as can be learned this is the fourth staff house of this type built in Canada, two of the others being at Hamilton and Halifax, where official openings were held. At present, too, six other staff houses for men or women are in the course of construction across the province.

The main building nearest Monaghan road is 228 feet long and 66 feet wide, and it consists of a business office at the main entrance, a kitchen and basement, a large dining-room, all on the south side. To the north of the main entrance is the lounge, much like the rotunda of a large hotel, and there is also a fairly large mezzanine floor. On one side of the lounge is a card room, and writing room, and on the other is a billiard room, housing three tables. Directly beneath the lounge in the basement there are four bowling alleys and a snack bar. At the extreme north end of this building with a special entrance is a waiting and reception room for women, and it is unlikely that visitors will be allowed to go beyond this room. However, it would serve as a meeting place for girl friends or relatives wishing to meet persons living in the staff house.

The sleeping quarters are identical, and all are two storeys high. There are two sizes of bedrooms, singles and doubles. A single room measures 8' 10" x 13' 8" and has one bed for one person. The double rooms are 10' 8" x 13' 8", and have two single beds. The rooms will be furnished with a rug, drawer space, chairs, etc.

Long corridors running east and west or at right angles to the sleeping wings serve to connect the buildings, and also house the toilets, washrooms and showers. The building is heated by three boilers and the system is a one pipe, low pressure mono-tee hot water. A separate boiler provides water for the kitchen and washrooms.

Insulated Throughout

The wings have tar and gravel roofs, inside walls are of gyproc and outside walls cedar grain asbestos shingles, and the buildings are insulated throughout, insuring ample warmth in winter and coolness in summer. The front building is particularly attractive and roomy, and the sleeping quarters are clean, bright and well furnished.

Today workmen were busy setting up beds in the two back wings, and work is progressing satisfactorily under the direction of Jack Gillespie, staff house superintendent, with every possibility that the house will be all ready on the date set.

The Eastwood Construction Company employed 110 men since the work started, and now all of these men are being gradually shifted over to the Hatton property wartime housing project without loss of time. The staff house is one of the largest in Canada, and none are larger.

WANT HOUR CHANGED.

Westclox employees who drive cars to work make the suggestion that some other time than just before 8 o'clock in the morning should be chosen for flushing the Hunter Street Bridge. They say the glare of the morning sun on the wet surface of the bridge as they drive east makes visibility very bad and constitutes a possible accident hazard.

(Bunt) Waddell has been promoted to the rank of Wing Commander, and it is assumed that the confirmation of the promotion following action at Dieppe, as he had been acting wing commander for four months. HELPED OUT

One truck driver did his good deed for the day Friday morning down on Albert street. As he was driving along he saw a boy, probably about ten or eleven years old, riding on a bicycle, and with a sudden twist of the handlebars, the boy and bicycle went down in a jumbled heap. The lad was caught in the wheel in some manner and was unable to rise, and while two or three older boys stood on the sidewalk and laughed at his predicament, it is reported that the driver climbed out of the truck and helped the lad to his feet, and made sure that there was no serious injury.

GET THREE MUSKIES.

PEASHOOTER BLAMED

The driver, Bob Thornton, was serving a store at the time, and spectators claim a small boy with a pea shooter started the runaway. The horse was not injured, but loss of bottles was extensive.

Relics Of 1914

BLOOMFIELD, Ia., Aug. 28—Onlookers gazed wide-eyed when Henry Wishard tossed six tires—all still in their original wrappings—onto the local scrap pile. Wishard, however, just laughed. The tires, 37 x 5, were surviving relics of a carload he bought in 1914.

Pop-Eye's Spinach Propaganda Fails To Click In Peterborough

In this community's dietary spinach is only a joke. Some parents possibly tried to cultivate Junior's taste for this leafy vegeable, on the strength of expert advice that its iron content was high, but evidently little Johnnie and Willie balked at the innovation. And as for Dad and Mother they must be getting their iron from the drug stores, in pellets or bottles, such as beef, iron and wine.

Nick Duros of the Churchill restaurant believes that vegetarian disciples and converts are few in Peterborough.

"When Spring came we put on spinach three or four times a week, sometimes with pork chops and again as a side dish," he said this morning. "I tried it for a month; and what happened. A few people asked for it, but I had to throw most of the spinach away."

The farm produce market has been out of spinach for weeks, and nobody has been grieving about it. Fred Clifford of North Monaghan has been selling a hamper or two of Swiss chard on recent week-ends, but that's about all. He has spinach coming tomorrow, but Peterborough is definitely not a spinach town. That is settled. The propaganda of the dietitians failed to take.

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

By LAURA C. PEPPER

Chief Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture

Once again Canadian housewives are asked to do their patriotic duty by conserving every scrap of fat they can. Fats are precious because they are important tools of our war machine—i.e. they are needed in the manufacture of explosives, bombs and other munitions.

Prior to the war, the need for individual economy was not of national importance in these days of total warfare each housewife must consider herself as an integral part of 12,000,000 people and realize that her individual waste multiplied by 2,000,000 reaches a staggering total.

The war in the Pacific has reduced the importation of vegetable oils so housewives must make use of Canadian produced fats. Lards fall in this category and, being home-produced, has the advantage of not requiring foreign exchange or shipping. Our mothers and grandmothers used it almost exclusively and who can deny that the pies, cakes, biscuits and cookies they made were every bit as good as our own concotions?

Lard is a 100 per cent fat—that is, it is unlike butter which contains moisture and other substances, therefore it has greater shortening power and yields more calories per pound. In addition, it is 97 per cent digestible which makes it suitable for use in practically all types of cooking.

Fortunately, owing to our increased hog production, there has been a corresponding increase in our supply of lard, so housewives should plan to use this Canadian produced shortening.

The purpose of using fat in pastry, biscuits, muffins, cakes, etc. is to make a tender product. The differences in the shortening power of various fats show more clearly in making pastry than in the other products. Since lard has about 15 per cent more shortening value than other fats, less lard is needed, in substituting lard for butter in baking—in other words use about 2 tablespoons less lard per cup of butter called for in recipe.

Lard is an ideal frying fat. Its clarity, whiteness, pleasant odor and flavor are all attributes that contribute towards producing A1 products. While all frying fats will smoke if heated to extremely high temperatures, lard will withstand the heat necessary for deep-fat frying for long periods of time. Furthermore, it has superior properties of foam resistance and, if strained and clarified after each using, will retain its sweet, delicate flavor for some time.

And now for some recipes tested in the experimental kitchen, Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture. All of them use good Canadian lard as shortening and we assure you the flavor of the products is excellent.

Pastry

3¼ cups pastry or 3 cups all purpose flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup lard
6 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt. Cut in shortening with pastry blender or two knives. Make a well in the centre of the mixture and add water gradually, working it in by using a cutting motion with a knife. Lift dough onto pastry board, pat and roll out.

If desired, pastry may be chilled thoroughly before being rolled out.

Doughnuts

1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons lard
3 eggs
4 teaspoons baking powder
1⅛ teaspoons salt
1 cup milk
Flour to make a soft dough (about 4½ to 5 cups)

Sift four before measuring. Cream lard and sugar thorouhly. Add well-beaten eggs and mix well. Sift dry ingredients (use about 4½ cups flour) and add alternately to egg mixture. If 4½ cups flour is not sufficient add a little more flour but keep the mixture as soft as possible. Roll out and cut with cutter. Fry in hot lard (365-375F). Drain on crumpled paper, then brush with honey. Yield: about 60 doughnuts.

If, after cutting, doughnuts are allowed to stand for about an hour before frying, they will be less likely to crack.

Spice Cake

½ cup lard
1½ cups honey
2 eggs
¾ cup sour milk
2½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream lard well and add honey gradually (honey has been melted). Add well-beaten eggs. Beat well. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Bake in two 9-inch layer pans at 375F for 30-35 minutes or in a loaf pan (9" x 9") for about 65 minutes at 350F.

Shortt-McDonell Nuptials Stirling Ceremony

The verandah of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDonell at Stirling was the scene on Wednesday, August 26, of the wedding of their daughter, Ethel Alice, to Wilmot Thompson Shortt of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Shortt of Sidney. Rev. David Gray of Stirling performed the ceremony, which took place under an archway of white crepe banked with gladioli. The house itself was decorated with early fall flowers. Mrs. W. J. Symons of Belleville played the wedding music and Mrs. C. E. Macklin sang "I Love You Truly."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length dress of Heaven blue crepe with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Irene Haynes of Corbyville, Ontario, who wore beige crepe with deep brown accessories and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses. Mr. Ray Hall of Sidney was best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held on the lawn, where the bride's mother received her guests wearing a gown of navy sheer with a hat of navy felt. She was assisted by the groom's mother who wore a navy sheer gown with matching hat and a corsage of American Beauty roses.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Shortt left on a trip to Kingston, the bride travelling in a navy wool suit and hat with touches of white. They will live in Peterborough.

Ladies Knit For Navy At All Saints'

The Women's Church Year of All Saints' Church held their regular meeting in the Parish Hall on Thursday afternoon with about 70 members present. The president was in the chair for the business meeting, which was opened with the singing of a hymn, after which the president led in prayer. Mrs. E. Holden read the Scripture.

The Months came forward with the money collected and the Doxology and National Anthem were sung. Before reading her report for the Naval Auxiliary, Mrs. R. N. Jones read a letter which had come from a sailor who had received some knitted articles. Mrs. Jones made an appeal to the ladies to take ditty bags and fill them for the sailors at Christmas. It was decided that each Month would be responsible for filling one of these bags. It was announced that two-thirds of the knitting received by the Auxiliary had been done by the ladies of All Saints' Church. Thirty-nine knitted articles were turned in during August.

Mrs. Albert Watkins Jr., then favored the meeting with a delightful solo, accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Logan.

Rev. W. A. Filer introduced the speaker of the afternoon in the person of Mrs. A. Haddow, who was for 27 years a missionary in Bolivia, and she gave an interesting talk on her work there. Miss Isobel Connolly moved a vote of thanks to the speaker soloist, and accompanist.

The president annouced that she had received a letter from Miss F. M. E. Hasell, O.B.E., stating that she had received a bale and how much it was appreciated. The closing hymn was sung and Mrs. Filer closed the meeting with prayer. Tea was served by Mrs. G. Webb and her assistants. The next meeting will be held on September 24.

SHOPPING — Bryne Hope Sanders—she's the "Mrs. Consumer" of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board—is asking Canadian women to keep an eye on the appearance of new brands on the shelves of the corner grocery store...Letters being received at the board's consumer branch charge that new brands said to be of inferior quality are being substituted for the old reliable products...And if you're worried about the lack of certain canned goods she says they will be available shortly when the new crops have been harvested.

WOOL — Think twice before you throw away the old knitted garment.....That's the warning from the Wool Administrative Branch of the Wartime Prices Board....If the leg of a sock is good—knit a new foot....And if Jimmie's sweater is worn, unravel it.....The wool can be made into 7 or 10 inch squares for the hospital throws they are in need of in England.

TOMATOES — Laura Pepper of the consumer section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, says this is the time to eat up all the fresh tomatoes you can lay your hands on....She also suggests that housewives can as many tomatoes as possible....If the proper methods are followed it is simple to retain most of their vitamin content and, while we're on the subject, why not try doing some of your own tomato juice... It'll make a fitting appetizer for almost any meal.

SHORTENING— The Foods Administration of the Prices Board has a bit of advice for homemakers on the subject of shortening...It urges them to use lard instead of vegetable shortening—and not without reason....A large part of Canada's vegetable oil supplies have to be imported and the war in the Pacific has cut off our former sources so the trend is to turn to lard... And lard has these advantages: It's 97 per cent digestible, 100 per cent fat, 30 per cent better shortening than other fats, and it's home produced.

VITAMIN D—School time is rolling around again with its longer hours indoors for the kiddies....So up comes Marion Harlow, assistant director of Nutrition Services with the suggestion that fish liver oils be given to the youngsters as a substitute for sunshine.....The oils are rich in Vitamin D, important to the growing children.

TEA—Here's a tip from Canada's West Coast for the housewife who is having difficulty stretching her tea ration....It comes from a group of elderly ladies, guests of Vancouver's Soroptimist House.....They said don't throw out your old tea leaves, drain your pot, empty the tea leaves on a plate or clean piece of cloth and dry them on top of a stove or in a warming oven....Just add a pinch of baking soda when you're ready to re-use the leaves....It works.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday August 29.

The emphasis seems to be on a day of enjoyment, pleasure-seeking, and romance, attended by domestic social and cultural celebrations, in which the appeal to beauty art, music and the emotional urges of life are uppermost. However, there are possibilities for good and practical work should the energies and ambitions be turned in that direction.

Those whose birthday it is might have a year of definite progress and success, with firm foundations secured by practical and constructive efforts centred on such objectives. But the accent is placed on the higher and more alluring and enjoyable aspirations in life, with love, romance, social and domestic functions to the fore. Beauty, art, grace and charm seek fulfilment and pleasure, while various forms of self-indulgence may be carried to excess, to be attended by regrettable reactions.

A child born on this day should have much practical ability, skill, and energy, with expansive ideas and aims, but its real aspirations will be centred on art, beauty, culture, romance, and social activities, in which it may shine.

THOUSANDS OF MEN RUINED BY MATES EXTRAVAGANCE.

How Money is to Be spent Should be Discussed Before Marriage.

Dear Miss Dix: My wife and I have arranged our joint income problem satisfactorily, but I have two friends who are up against it because their wives seem to think they have no more responsibility for the expenses of the home than when they were single. Both women have jobs, but they spend every cent they make at the beauty parlor, on clothes, or unnecessary indulgences when they know there isn't enough to meet the bills for food and rent.

One of these men is having his chances for advancement killed by the fact that his wife keeps him continually in debt and dresses far beyond her means, while the other man has gotten himself into trouble over being driven by his wife's extravagance into an illegitimate racket. Believe me, no man has a more desperate problem to solve than how to deal with a wife who is a spender.

PETER.

Answer: I believe you, nor has any woman a harder problem to solve tha na husband who is a tightwad. And there are plenty of both.

That there are thousands of women who ruin their husbands with their extravagance is only the sadly true. All of us know plenty of men who are industrious and capable and good money-makers who are never able to save a cent because their wives throw all they make away on clothes and entertaining and trying to keep up with people who are richer than they.

Sometimes these women are self-indulgent and lazy and not willing to deny themselves anything they fancy. Sometimes they seem to have a mania for spending. The cannot see anything without an irresistible impulse to buy it, and actually cover themselves with things they do not really want.

I think that any man is weak and foolish if he lets his wife ruin him with her extravagance or makes him work himself to death to pay her bills. I think that when a man realizes he has married a woman with no money sense he should take matters in his own hands, stop all her charge accounts, pay the household bills himself and give her whatever allowance for herself that he feels is adequate and as much as he can afford. This is kindness to the wife, for in the end she is the victim of her extravaganec when she pulls her husband down into poverty.

Should Pay Her Share.

When the wife is also a money earner, this complicates the situation, but even then she should be required to pay her proportion of running the house and for the upkeep of the car if she has the use of it as much as her husband does. Certainly she should pay for her own clothes and beauty treatments.

But unfair as the extravagant wife is to her husband, she is not so unjust as the husband—and his name is Mr. Legion also— who takes all the money that his wife earns away from her and doles out only a pittance for her own use. I get hundreds of letters from wives who tell me that their husbands require them to pay all the household bills as well as do all of the work of making a comfortable home.

Money is considered too sordid a matter for billing and cooling lovers to discuss in the days of courtship, but it is the most important thing they could possibly talk about. For money is a matter of daily necessity to every married couple, and how it is to be spent and who is to handle the pocketbook is something that should be thoroughly understood and agreed upon before marriage. More than any one thing, it determines the happiness and success of every marriage.

Accept The Girl's Verdict.

Dear Miss Dix: At the age of 42 I have fallen in love with a girl of 20. I have known her for six years, and have been taking her out for over three years. Every once in a while we decide to break it off, and I manage to stay away from her for three months, but I'm utterly miserable when I do. She is the one who feels that the difference in our ages is too great, and on her insistence we avoid places where we may meet the people we know. She is the one who has been trying to break off our relationship. She tells me she is not in love with me. Still, when I go back to her she always seems glad to see me and I know that she has great respect and affection for me. In your judgment, is the difference in our ages great enough to be an obstacle to a happy life togehter.

Answer: I'm afraid that it is. Twenty-two years is a long gap to cross, and it takes a lot of love to bridge it over.

It all depends upon the girl. Sometimes a girl is born middleaged. She's never young, not even in the cradle. She's always thoughtful and quiet and sedate. She never wants to be silly or run around or dance, or do any of the things that most girls are crazy about. Such a girl is perfectly safe in marrying a man twice her age. She is far more congenial with him than she would be with a boy.

But your girl is not of this type, and she honestly tells you so. She is one of the girlish girls who wants to play around with boys who have nimble heels and curly hair and the same line of chatter that she has. She goes about with you only because she has no boy friend to date her, or perhaps because you spend more money on her. She doesn't see the charms and attractions in you that an older woman would.

She tells you frankly that she is not in love with you and doesn't want to marry you. Accept her verdict. Don't try to persuade her into marrying you, for if you do you'll bring great unhappiness upon both of you. Believe me, no man is more miserable than the old husband of a young wife who barely endures him for the sake of the comforts and luxuries he can give her.

Sorry She Married for Money.

Dear Miss Dix: I had all the things necessary for a happy and comfortbale life, a home of my own a car, lots of friends, the love of a good husband who could give me all I needed, but not all I wanted. Five years ago I met a rich old man, twenty-five my senior. I divorced my husband and married the old man because he could give me the luxuries I craved. I thought that if I could have fine clothes and jewels and a penthouse and summer home I would be perfectly happy. But I have found misery instead. My husband is a grinding tyrant. We have nothing in common. He bores me to extinction and his presence is repulsive to me. I am forlorn and lonesome, and I long for my former life with friends, with independence, and especially do I long for the good husband I threw away. What can I do to undo the mistake that I made?

F. C.

Answer: There's nothing that any of us can do that changes the past or that enables us to retrieve our errors. What is done is done, and cannot be altered. You can't rebuild a home you wrecked. You can't win back the husband you sold out for a few yards of chiffon. You can't

Corvette's Fun Comes Fast When It Breaks

By FRANK LOWE.

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, August 28. — (CP) —There's a cost to pay in men and hips, but the merchant vessels must be kept rolling to Britain and the men of the Canadian corvettes are willing to pay the price.

But usually the price fluctuates between drudgery and acute boredom. A man doesn't get much of a chance to be a hero on these little craft that spend their days and nights smelling after submarines.

The days afloat, as I found on a Trans-Atlantic convoy trip by corvette, are laden with monotony. Jack Tar scrapes paint from innumerable miles of deck space, then sets to work to paint it all over again. He scrubs, keeps watches until his eyes burn, sweats in torrid boiler rooms and listens to asdics until his ears ring.

Occasionally, action flashes up to brighten his day. For that's just what it does; he eagerly looks forward to a tiff with the enemy who would threaten his convoy. And, one bout over, he settles down to wait hopefully for the next, amid his chores.

Danger Everywhere.

But the comparative rarity of actual battle doesn't mean there isn't potential danger lurking behind every wavecap between Halifax and Britain. The enemy isn't the only peril. There is the sea itself, and the ships of the convovy.

With perhaps 100 or more craft huddled together over a few miles of water, lives of ships and men hang on precision navigation. Night and fog and storm double and redouble the menace.

The combination of rain, fog and darkness joined to test the mettle of one corvette after I had transferred to her from another at a mid-Atlantic point on the westward crossing. As she set out from port, the convoy was well at sea, waiting for her to pick up the ships and guard their flanks as they made their way to Britain.

It seemed impossible to find anything in the blinding grey world offshore, but the lieutenant on the watch said it would be easy. The navigator, who had an oil tanker torpedoed from under him before he joined the Navy, wasn't worried either. Their confidence wasn't misplaced.

The night was as dark as the inside of a tar barrel. Somewhere in this darkness were the glamor girls of the Royal Canadian Navy, as the corvettemen call the destroyers, and the other corvettes of the escort force.

But despite the impenetrable black and the ships all around, a suspicious sound picked up by the Asdic sent the corvette dashing toward it, snaking down the columns of the convoy.

Some Close Shaves.

Looming out of the dark with breath-taking suddenness would be high steel walls, the sides of the merchant ships. Sometimes they were so close you could spit against them. Each was big enough to crush the corvette like an eggshell, but none swerved, and we completed the hunt without incident.

Nobody seemed to have paid any particular attention to the apparent danger. Sure, said one lieutenant, accidents sometimes happened on runs like this. Then he turned to his companion on the bridge and complained of a toothache.

"You know," he said, "the thought of going to a dentist scares me to death."

The rest of the voyage was made of such incidents of casually-accepted jeopardy interspersed with long periods of boredom, save for one teeth-rattling attack with depth charges on a submarine, and a butterfly chase.

Somehow, six days out, a butterfly miraculously appeared on the deck. Where it came from no one could guess, though one seaman suggested someone had opened his wallet. A chase over the decks put the visitor to flight.

Ireland looked good after the long stretch at sea, and especially good to the Vancouver seaman who was on his way to marry an English girl. He was hanging over the rail eagerly as the ship nosed toward shore.

First greeting came from a ragged little fellow franticaly waving a pair of Union Jacks. But it wasn't a display of patriotism. He was wig-wagging: "Have you any cigarettes?"

Keeping Flying

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Pan American-Grace Airways announces the inauguration of regular freight service on a 1,678-mile sector of its trunk line between Balboa, Canal zone, and Lima, Peru. The company said yesterday the line was able to conduct weekly all-freight operations without new flying equipment through a redistribution of present equipment and personnel.

Order Packers Fill Army Orders

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—(CP)—Beef wholesalers and packers will have to fill contracts with the armed forces before selling to the general public under a new order issued by the Wartime Prices and Trades Board.

Certain packers and wholesalers have reported inability to fulfill contracts to the armed forces, because they sold the meat on the civilian market, said J. G. Taggart, co-ordinator of the Foods Administration Branch of the Board, in explaining the reason for the order, issued Tuesday.

(In a story yesterday, The Canadian Press erroneously reported the order applied to retailers. Supplies of beef to retailers and to the general public will not necessarily be affected by the move, which will, however, ensure delivery of supplies needed by the armed services.)

New Home Loans To Cut Shortage

OTTAWA, Aug. 28—(CP).— The Federal Government's new Home Extension plan, to be in operation by September 1, has for its sole purpose the creation of new housing accommodation in towns and cities where the shortage is caused directly or indirectly by war activities.
